

Heads of Slain Pair Found in Cement Block

Warren J. Lincoln Leads Aurora Police to Hiding Place—Confesses He Embedded Skulls, Burned Bodies.

By International News Service. Aurora, Ill., Jan. 25.—Warren J. Lincoln, lawyer-horticulturist and self-styled distant relative of Abraham Lincoln, today confessed one of the most amazing double killings in criminal history when he declared, according to Chief of Police Michaels, that he slew both his wife, Lina Shoup Lincoln, and her brother, Byron Shoup, burned their bodies in a small greenhouse furnace at his small home near here and then embedded their severed heads in a block of cement. The cement block was found where Lincoln said it would be in a dump near his cottage—and the heads taken from it. They were identified.

Lincoln added to the gruesome confession that he had taken the two bodies by confessing anew that he and not his wife, as he had at first contended, killed Shoup, and added another intricate detail which brought the crime into the annals of the unusual.

"I went to the movies that night," Chief of Police Michaels said. Lincoln told him after the heads had been chipped from the cement.

"When I got home Byron was not in his bed on the sleeping porch, and I knew he was in my wife's room. I could not stand it any longer. I shot Byron through the head.

"Then I ran to the greenhouse and got my rifle. Lina was crouched on the floor crying when I got back to the house. I shot her, too."

Lincoln was nervous and pale, the chief said, as he ran through the strange narrative. He kissed his son, John, before he started on his last confession and asked Chief Michaels to care for him.

The find today ended the search for the "corpse detect," or body of the transgression, without which at times said it would have been impossible to try Lincoln for the slaying.

According to witnesses who saw the block cracked open by three husky policemen wielding sledges, the heads were well preserved except for the outer skin. The features, it was said, were plainly identified as those of Shoup and Mrs. Lincoln.

Shoup's head was the first to be revealed and was easily removed. Mrs. Lincoln's presented greater difficulty because her long hair was bound in the cement.

The discovery of the two skulls started another intensive search for other blocks of cement.

The chief of police believes Lincoln may have used his strange method of hiding the crime to do away with other large bones not easily stuffed into the mouth of his small furnace.

Discovery of the blocks followed another "confession" made by the lawyer-horticulturist last night. New vows were made known that he wanted to "make a clean breast." This time he told Chief Michaels.

"I molded the heads into a cement block," he told the officer. "It's out in the dump near my house."

The chief, accompanied by a dozen vagrants who had taken refuge in the jail from the cold weather, made a quick trip to the dump. They found the block with little trouble. Despite its size it was easily lifted into an automobile by a policeman, who remarked that he could not have lifted it had it been solid.

Tokio Joyously Celebrates Marriage of Prince Hirohito

Prince Hirohito and Princess Nagako Kuni.

By Associated Press. Tokyo, Jan. 26.—In the sacred precincts of the imperial palace and in accordance with ancient marriage ritual antedating the Christian era, Prince Regent Hirohito was wedded this morning to Princess Nagako, eldest daughter of Prince Kuni.

Residents of Tokio indulged in joyous celebration of the event, the first public expression of joy since the disaster of last September. Great crowds gathered in the streets, which were gaily decorated for the occasion, and thronged the open spaces in the vicinity of the palace for a glimpse of the royal couple.

The wedding was celebrated with Shinto rites and was an announcement of the event to the imperial spirits which are enshrined in the Kasshiki Dokoro or Holy of Holies, in front of which the pair took their vows. The spirits of 122 royal predecessors witnessed the union and gave their blessings, according to devout Japanese belief. The royal couple exchanged bowls of sacred rice wine, to plight their troth, after the ancient custom.

Previously, as in the case of accession to the throne, the party, including members of the royal family and officials of the household, assembled and for two hours went through a slow movement toward the shrine, every step in which, including the sounding of the clappers, was according to the imperial wedding law.

No foreigners witnessed the ceremony, only the members of the royal family and the highest dignitaries of the empire being permitted to attend the rites.

The garb of the regent was the simple dress suit of a Japanese gentleman for such occasions, except that the upper cloak was red with a shade of yellow running through it, the patterns embroidered on it representing mandarin ducks. The hakama, or loose trousers, were of white silk with patterns of butterflies, while the obi, or belt, was of black leather decorated with carved stones.

The bride's costume was far more elaborate. The chief garment, or karaginu, was a dazzling kimono of scarlet and purple silk with the chrysanthemum crest in white embroidered on it. The mo, or skirt, was another piece of artistic weaving, being of white silk handsomely embroidered. The uwagi, or outer dress, was of purple silk decorated with designs of pine trees and tortoises, symbols of long life. A long robe, known to Japan as the uchiginu, and the itatsumiginu, or fifth dress, were of rich silk handsomely embroidered.

In the case of the princess, the hakama, which formed a train, were of purple silk.

Scotch Huntress to Sail From San Francisco Soon in Search of Further Adventure.

Lady Grace MacKenzie of Hotel St. Regis, New York City, and Edinburgh, Scotland, noted big game hunter and world traveler, is a guest at Hotel Fontenelle. She is enroute from California to New York to complete arrangements for her sixth around-the-world trip. She will sail from San Francisco within a few weeks on the "Pathfinder," a boat formerly owned by the king of Spain and bought by the British government.

Lady MacKenzie, native of Spain and a widow of considerable real estate and the haunts of the wild animals of the world in pursuit of adventure. She is a crack shot and an expert motion picture operator.

Wounded by Lion. She bears on her left shoulder the marks of a wound inflicted by a black-maned African lion which attacked her during one of her hunts with natives in Africa. Her native hunter shot the lion 50 feet away, striking a paw. The animal charged for Lady MacKenzie, bruised her shoulder and then made for the hunter. Just as the lion attacked the native, Lady MacKenzie sent a bullet into the animal's heart.

The hunter suffered injuries which rendered him permanently lame, she stated.

The first stop on her forthcoming world tour will be at the University of Japan, where she will give a series of lectures and will show her wild animal motion pictures. She will be entertained by the sultan of Johore, whom she met when he was a student at Oxford in England.

King Plans Hunt. The king of Siam will hold a special lion hunt for her. She met the king when he was a prince at the court of St. James in England. A rajah of India will hold a tiger hunt for the distinguished visitor. On this next trip she will visit China, Sumatra, Java, Borneo and many other places where wild animals abound.

Lady MacKenzie is a member of the National Geographic Society, Adventure Club of America, Wild Life League, Protective Association of Animals and other organizations in this and foreign countries. Hunting African lions she has traveled with members of the Kuyuki, Maasi, Randalli, Sanboros, Mensavai and other tribes. She speaks the Swahili native language and can converse with other tribes in the fastness of Africa. During one of her world trips she visited the Kafarndo cannibal tribe on an uncharted island in Lake Victoria Nyanza, where the cannibals, she related, received her with high favor.

Doesn't Commercialize Pictures. "I have not yet endeavored to commercialize any of my motion pictures," Lady MacKenzie stated. "My idea of motion pictures is to depict real life among the wild animals as they live in their native haunts. I consider this an educational. During this coming trip it will be my intention to take motion pictures of children of every country where I visit and when I return I expect to release these pictures for the children of this country."

"I hunt and photograph wild animals as a hobby and for the adventure. I have been at this about 12 years. I get into the hunt as a rest. When I was attacked by the lion in Africa, which my camera man took, I was using a gun with two charges, because I have found that type gives the best aim. We had been out about six weeks and on a morning one of the natives discovered that the bait had been found by a lion. He scared up a large black-man lion and this was the one that first wounded me on the shoulder and then attacked my hunter. There is a difference of opinion among wild animal hunters as to which is the most ferocious beast to hunt.

Depends on Experience. "It all depends on the personal experiences of the hunter. Of course, I would say that the African lion is the most ferocious. Some think the hippo is the worst."

Lady MacKenzie is a striking brunette with dark bobbed hair. Recently she experienced a thrill in a diving suit at Nassau, Bahamas. She was lowered by the superintendent of a salvage organization and stated that she experienced a real kick when she viewed the floor of the ocean. When she gave the signal to be brought up, she was dragged a short distance along the coral bed and one of her shoes was lodged in a coral ledge. The force of the pull removed the shoe and the water started to enter the suit before she was at the top.

Once Was Enough. "I just wanted to go down once and that was enough," she related.

Stockman Is Robbed of $1,070 in Denver

By Associated Press. Denver, Jan. 26.—A woman bandit and two male companions early this morning held up J. Johnson of Sedwick, Colo., took $1,070 in cash from his pocket, jumped into an automobile and escaped. Johnson, accompanied by his son, was returning from the stock show when the holdup occurred.

He told police he was walking along in the downtown section when an automobile drew up to the curb. Two men got out, he said, and while one covered him with a revolver the other went through his pockets. His son could not summon help, Johnson said, because of the threatening revolver.

Johnson reported to police that a woman was at the wheel of the automobile; that she kept the motor running while the robbery was taking place, and once called to her companions to "hurry." Johnson, a wealthy ranchman, had expected to buy some farm machinery here today.

Fake Film Schools Probed

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—A searching investigation into the activities of so-called "fake film schools" was ordered here yesterday by the state labor commission.

According to Dr. Louis Bloch, special agent of the commission, the "schools" take in "tuition fees" from credulous girls and after milking them of all the money possible, either tell them they are not suited for motion picture work or allow them to drop out as they fail to keep up their tuition payments.

Teakamah Man Slain

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Teakamah, Neb., Jan. 25.—Harry Spence was shot and killed this morning by "Red" Duttper, after he had thrown part of a tile through a window of the Duttper home.

The shooting came as the result of a neighborhood feud, which had its origin early in the winter. "Red" Duttper and his brother, Clyde, had obtained a warrant for Spence's arrest, on a charge of throwing a brick through a window of their home on a previous occasion. The warrant had not been served.

After the shooting, both Duttper brothers surrendered to the sheriff.

Habik Youth Given Hearing

Son of Farmer Held for Shooting Detective Charged With Theft.

Five railroad detectives appeared in juvenile court Saturday to testify against Cenek Hrabik, Jr., 17, arrested with his father at their home near Gibson, Neb., after they had with-sold 40 patrolmen and detectives in a gun battle which followed the shooting of Detective Paul Haze by Cenek's father.

The boy was charged with the theft of coal and resisting an officer. His father, who is facing a charge of shooting with intent to kill, was brought down from county jail to attend the hearing.

Both the boy and his father alleged that they were persecuted by railroad detectives, who tried to force Cenek Hrabik, Sr., to sell his land.

Guy Knudson, one of the detectives, testified that when he found the boy picking up coal near the tracks a few days before the shooting, he put his hand in his pocket and threatened to kill him. The boy's father also came out with a shotgun and threatened him, he said.

The boy declared that he was on his own property at the time. The other detectives were E. L. Underwood, H. Prince, H. W. Crosby and T. J. Smith.

Cenek Hrabik, Sr., testified that a still which was found in the house had been picked up from a dump, and that a quantity of mash, also found, he was feeding to his chickens.

Judge Day took the case under advisement, and sent Cenek back to the juvenile detention home, where the other Hrabik children, Emma, Adrich, Helen and Mabel also are held.

George Vance, 20, 3701 Ames avenue, student at Technical High school and a member of the football squad in 1922, waived preliminary hearing on a charge of forgery in municipal court Saturday morning and was bound over to district court on $1,000 bond.

He was arrested yesterday when he presented a withdrawal slip for $72.50 against the account of David J. Smith, another student at Technical High school, who is working his way through school, at the United States National bank.

He found Smith's bank book in a lavatory at the school building, he said. It showed a balance of $88. Vance said he did not know that signing a withdrawal slip was forgery. He thought that finding a bank book was just like finding money. He wanted the money, he said, to pay a hospital bill incurred when he was injured while playing football, and to buy a pair of shoes and a suit of clothes. His father operates a grocery.
