

Slayer of Aughe Held for Murder

Views Body at Inquest and Admits "That's the Man."

Joseph Guzewesc, alias Joe Dunn, who killed Detective Frank Aughe, was bound over to district court Friday. He will stand trial there on a charge of first degree murder, of which he is indicted.

He was ordered held following a coroner's inquest at Bralley & Doran's undertaking establishment yesterday. Paul Steinwender, county coroner, conducted the inquest.

The slayer viewed the body of his victim during the inquest and admitted "that's the man."

The room was filled with patrolmen and detectives, friends of the slain man.

Tell of Struggle.

Detectives who were with Aughe at the time he was shot, testified to the circumstances of their entering the drug store at Sixteenth and Williams streets where the shooting occurred, and of Aughe's struggle with Guzewesc after the latter attempted to shoot his way to freedom.

The only new feature of the incident brought out at the inquest was the fact that Detective William Davis fired one shot during the melee.

It developed that police have been unable to find a woman who was in the store at the time of the shooting, with a baby in her arms, and upon whom the state has been depending to bring a great deal of its case against Guzewesc.

Hearing Probably Monday.

Preliminary hearing probably will be held Monday in municipal court.

Guzewesc, on the stand, denied the testimony of detectives that he cried out "Stick 'em up, or I'll kill you."

"I didn't intend to kill anybody," he said.

His answers to questions continued to be evasive. He even declined to admit that he had killed any one until he was shown Aughe's body. He appeared unmoved.

Dr. S. McClenghan, coroner's physician, testified that the bullet which killed the detective entered below the heart and took a downward course, piercing the intestines. He also received a wound in the thigh. The other bullets passed through his overcoat.

Guzewesc was taken back to Central station under heavy guard.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 3 at the home, 4413 North Thirty-first street, with burial in Forest Lawn cemetery. Three platoons of police in full uniform will attend and escort the body to the grave.

Rev. Frank H. King of the Hartford Memorial United Brethren church was to officiate at the funeral.

One Million Persons Hear Soprano in Radio Concert, Is Estimate

Florence Macbeth.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Not so many years ago a "vast" audience for a singer who had attained prominence consisted of something like 5,000 persons. It's a different story today, though now that the radio is being utilized so extensively by such artists. A "vast" audience for radio performers easily reaches the million mark. That this is a fact is borne out by thousands of letters which Miss Florence Macbeth, coloratura of the Chicago Civic Opera company, received recently from radio fans, following her rendition of several songs on a Sunday evening program broadcast from a Chicago station. This deluge of mail contained letters of appreciation from persons in all walks of life.

Miss Macbeth's efforts that evening elicited a quick response from Helen E. Vektor, of Huntington, Long Island, which told of the "remarkable clearness" with which the soprano's voice was carried by the ether waves. B. G. Cassett, of San Jose, Cal., wrote that he "got" Miss Macbeth's concert "perfectly."

Fifty per cent of the letters received referred to Miss Macbeth, well-known coloratura soprano, as "the girl with the radio voice."

Hundreds of those who "penned" their thanks to Miss Macbeth were elderly persons who said the radio and the earnestness of those who do their "stuff" for the benefit of this vast invisible audience had given them a new outlook upon life.

Omahan Owns Eighteenth Century Newspapers That Record Death of Franklin and Notes From 'G. Washington'

Worcester (Mass.) Gazette of 1792 Gives Hamilton's Estimate for Government Expenses for Year.

By EDWARD BLACK. C. A. Westerfield, 3116 Mason street, owns a bound volume of old weekly newspapers, printed at Worcester, Mass., during 1789 to 1792, under the caption of "Thomas' Massachusetts Spy, or The Worcester Gazette."

This news medium was published in the days of George Washington, John Hancock and other notable men, when this nation was being cradled. The publisher was Isaiah Thomas, who made himself known as "printer, bookseller and stationer." "The liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom" was a slogan on the front page of the paper.

This weekly contained only four pages of four columns each. There was little attempt at ornamentation and the headlines were extremely modest, compared with modern journalism.

"G. Washington."

Communications from the president appearing in the Gazette were signed "G. Washington." John Hancock was governor and commander-in-chief of Massachusetts. Alexander Hamilton was secretary of the treasury. In one of his reports, Secretary Hamilton estimated that $51,500 would cover all expenses of the president, vice president, chief justice and associate judges for the year 1792. The estimate for the war department for that year was $52,449.76.

Lotteries were authorized and even advertised. One was known as the Lancaster and another as the State lottery. In one advertisement announcement was made that 6,000 tickets would be sold at $4 each and that 3,008 prizes would be awarded, the highest prize to be $2,000.

A news dispatch from London stated that the English metropolis contained 1,000,000 population and maintained 5,975 ale houses, 447 taverns, 207 inns and eight public or free schools. Capt. Paul Allen raised the largest hog in Providence.

A Nebraskan in Washington

By F. C. POWELL, Washington Correspondent The Omaha Bee.

There's only one feature of the Teapot Dome scandal overlooked by newspaper men covering the story. It was the fact that 90 per cent of the audience was women, the same as 90 per cent of a divorce scandal audience is usually of the same sex.

The action of southern democrats in demanding $25,000,000 additional to the Norbeck wheat belt relief bill before they would guarantee republicans to support the measure is another incident of practical politics.

As for boll weevil raising the lower regions with the cotton growers, as stated by Senator Pat Harrison, in supporting the $25,000,000 additional appropriation, a southern planter told the senate agricultural committee this week that the boll weevil was a Godsend for the cotton growers. Otherwise, he asserted, the overproduction of cotton would have been so great that cotton growers would be getting next to nothing for their crop.

Congressman Edgar Howard wants everyone in Nebraska to know that he is for discontinuance of nuisance taxes. This, in order to cut down the large number of letters received urging repeal of such taxes. The Columbia congressman talks slowly and he can't dictate many letters for that reason.

The same picture of the Dunn sisters from Fremont, five of whom are secretaries to congressmen, as was printed in last Sunday's Bee, has been used by a picture syndicate and the picture has appeared in newspapers all over the country. The result has been numerous letters from lovers, male youths, offering everything from a box of candy to matrimony to the sisters.

Congressman Willis G. Sears has received a letter from Secretary of War Weeks to the effect that sale of Fort Omaha isn't contemplated by the War department. According to information received by Congressman Sears, persons deeding the original site to the government, provided that in event its use as an army post was discontinued the land should revert to their heirs.

Congressman Bob Simmons of Nebraska has been placed on the new veterans' committee in the lower house. This committee is to handle all routine matters pertaining to world war veterans.

Congressman Willis G. Sears and his secretary, Jack Lee, made arrangements so they could hear the Elks concert sent by radio from Omaha January 31. One of the broadcasting stations in Washington arranged for getting the Omaha concert.

Miss Jean McGeachin of Orleans, Neb., was the guest of Congressman and Mrs. A. C. Shallenbarger, enroute to New York where she sailed for Europe with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard E. Hertz of Omaha.

Former State Senator I. D. Evans of Kanesaw, Neb., spent a number of days in Washington, the guest of Senator R. B. Howell and Senator George W. Norris.

An hour after Senator George W. Norris announced his candidacy for renomination he received a telegram from California notifying him that his daughter was a mother and that he was a grandfather.

If the Coolidge men in Nebraska get too noisy over the fact that Senator Norris is not out campaigning for Hiram Johnson this year they may get an awful wallop.

"There's a danger of overplaying this Fall and Daugherty and Denby stuff," a democratic member of the lower house warned his brethren on the floor of the house one day this week.

The concourse of spectators was greater than ever was known on a like occasion. It is computed that not less than 20,000 persons attended the funeral. The order and silence which prevailed during the procession, deeply evinced the beautiful sense entertained by all classes of citizens, of the unparalleled virtues, talents, and services of the deceased.
