

Pool Hall Holdup Believed Joke

Deshler Bandit, After Slipping Through Marshal's Fingers, Caught Later.

Deshler, Neb., Feb. 5.—Herbert Schreck, proprietor of the Deshler pool hall, was held up in his place of business and robbed of more than $100 in cash and $300 in checks. There were several persons in the place at the time, but when a lone masked gunman appeared and covered the crowd with a revolver, ordering hands up, all complied, thinking it was a joke. Even the marshal, who appeared and covered the bandit with a gun, hesitated to shoot and let him get away, as he believed he recognized the youth as a follower of the pipe line construction gang.

When it became evident the affair was not a farce a search was made and the suspect located west of town. He fled firing a shot which narrowly missed Marshal Hill. Seeing that he could not escape, he threw down his gun and surrendered.

The money was recovered, but he had burned the checks. The youth insists that his name is Jessie James and that he has received mail addressed that way. He says his home is near Fort Worth, Tex. He was placed in jail and will be bound over to district court. He is about 18.

Deshler Asks Better Rock Island Service

Deshler, Neb., Feb. 5.—Trainmaster F. L. Parks of the Rock Island was in town this week and gave the depot force strict orders regarding overtime. The depot is not to be opened for Sunday business. The section foreman is to fire up in the waiting room Sunday evenings and turn on the lights. No provision is made for warming the room or checking baggage Sunday mornings. No messages are to be sent after 5 p.m.

These reductions in service are made in face of the fact that this point is fourth in volume of business of any town on this road in Nebraska, being exceeded only by Omaha, Lincoln and Fairbury. An appeal for better service has been made by the Commercial club to headquarters at Chicago, and if nothing comes of it the matter will be taken before the state railway commission.

Punch—Funeral services for Moses Enders were held at the Presbyterian church, Rev. Irwin Smith officiating. Mr. Enders was 51 and had been a resident of this community for many years.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

On the Careful Watch for Visitors. "I'll run you down to the postoffice right now," I said, reaching for my hat and suit coat. "I have nothing more to do here, and, thanks to you, the children are all ready."

"With Marion mounting guard over them," Lillian supplemented. "Come along then. I shall be uneasy, I don't mind telling you, until that's done."

I drove her down to the village and waited outside the postoffice while she went in and interviewed the postmaster. When she came out, she nodded reassuringly to me, and then I saw her lift her head quickly, a sure sign to me that she had seen something disturbing. She gave no other indication of anxiety, however, and climbed into the car beside me with a nonchalant air which did not deceive me—indeed was not assumed for my benefit.

"Pretend to have trouble starting," she murmured as she climbed in. "I want time to lamp this bird."

I obeyed her unquestioningly, and furtively my eyes followed hers to a burly figure approaching the postoffice from the direction of the railroad station. Dried-hatted, blue-jowled, my eyes traveled down his rough business suit to his feet, and I was ready to endorse Lillian's comment given when the man had disappeared inside the postoffice.

A Suspicious Character.

"A retired policeman, now fancying himself a great detective," she gibed, but I was sure I heard uneasiness in her tone.

"His flat feet?" I ventured.

"Not only his feet," she retorted. "He fairly screams it all over. Now, I'll lay you a little two to one that he's been sent here by that attorney who wrote that precious letter. He's exactly the type to appeal to people who don't have much experience. Of course he isn't very dangerous, and yet I'm just as glad I was two minutes ahead of him in that postoffice. Not that the postmaster himself would give him any satisfaction—federal orders are the only things postmasters heed—but there's always the chance that a dick like that can get hold of some under-cleek with a taste for melodrama and loosen him up. However, I've spiked that thing down fast. The postmaster's on the look out for just such a specimen as the one which floated in a minute ago, and he'll chase him out with the cats faster than he came in. Let's go!"

The uneasiness in her tone communicated itself to me, and I drove much faster going out to the farmhouse than I had going in.

Lillian Seeks Solitude.

"If you don't mind," Lillian said as she stepped out of the car at the side of the veranda steps. I'm going to beat it up to my room for a little bit. I have a slight headache, and I am going to see what lying down will do for it. But please ask Katie and Jim to send for you if any stranger comes to the farm within the next hour or two on any pretext."

I nodded assent, and took the car around to the barn without any expression of sympathy for her headache. I knew, and she knew I knew, that it was only a blind. She wished solitude to plan what course it was best for us to pursue in order to escape the espionage of the detective employed by the Harrison family. Coming back to the kitchen, I laid her injunction upon Jim and Katie as emphatically as I could.

"Remember," I said, "not to tell anyone the Harrison children are going away. As far as you know they are on here indefinitely."

"Not even Tiers?" Katie asked, dolefully, and I knew how her goal-sip, voluble soul longed to share her knowledge with our neighbors.

"Especially not the Tiers," I said sternly, for though I knew Mrs. Tiers to be able to emulate a cemetery, where a secret was concerned, her son and husband did not share her discretion.

"Me, I no say nothings," Katie promised effusively, and only partly reassured by her protestations I went to the library and read to the children gathered there until Katie with excited eyes came to the door.

"Jesm from soon to the kitchen vince," she whispered. "Dere's a man dere."

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES
Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not
These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for sometime before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. RING, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes
Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you my testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial."—Mrs. J. RICH, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

E. C. Houston for Congress

HON. E. C. HOUSTON, yielding to pressure and filing as republican candidate for congress in this, the Third district, was a surprise to some of his intimate friends, who were aware that for several months he had declined all overtures to permit his name to be used as a candidate for any political office. The friends who persuaded him to enter the race for congress made no mistake in selecting a man well qualified to serve his constituency in an acceptable manner. Mr. Houston is a first-class business man and one of our most esteemed and foremost citizens. He has had 35 years' experience here as a business man and as a practical farmer, stock raiser, breeder and feeder. He served this senatorial district in the state senate in the 1919 session, where he made a record as one of the influential and active members in that body. He was elected presidential elector in the 1920 campaign to notify the late President Harding of his election.

Mr. Houston has spent all his adult life in Tekamah—it was here he cast his first vote. Early in life he took an active part in public affairs and was elected mayor of this city in 1893 and made a splendid record.

Mr. Houston is naturally a go-get-'em character. If there is any public affair that needed pushing he was generally selected to lead the enterprise. His usual command is: "Come on, boys, let us do it." Mr. Houston's wide acquaintance in this district will insure him a big vote. He is not an extremist in any sense of the term; he is neither a radical progressive nor a reactionary standpatter—he is just a sane, level-headed business man who believes in the application of practical methods that will accomplish the best results for the public. (Editorial by J. R. Sutherland in Burt County Herald, Tekamah, Neb., January 24, 1924.)
