

Rejected Love Traced in Brutal Murder of Girl

Police Search for Small Town Sweetheart of Louise Lawson, Who Complained of "Pest."

New York, Feb. 9.—The spectre of unrequited love—love of a small town sweetheart for a jeweled moth of Broadway—today stalked to the center of the stage of the Bright Lights over-old tragedy—the murder of Miss Louise Lawson, beautiful young musician.

Six years ago Louise Lawson came to Broadway from Walnut Springs, Tex., dreaming her girl dreams of New York, fame—the stage. She whispered goodbye to "the boy."

Yesterday police found her dead. She had been mysteriously strangled. Today police are seeking "the boy" for questioning to see what he knows, if anything of the case.

Louise Lawson's friends told detectives of him. He had loved the "jeweled moth" in the days of their friendship in Texas. When she came to New York he followed. The city enthralled her. For a time both were happy. They were seen places together—the balcony of the shows; the cheaper cabarets; the concerts.

Then older and wealthier men entered the life of Louise Lawson. She cast aside the boy. Often he tried to see her. "Tell him I'm out—tell him I'm always out—he's just a pest," friends quoted Miss Lawson as saying. And so, "the boy" came to be known as "the pest." This is the only name police have for him today as they search for him.

Meanwhile 20 detectives followed a secret clue given them by Miss Peggy Tompkins, friend and neighbor of the slain girl. Miss Tompkins was said to have furnished police with the name of a man whose voice she said she thought she recognized as he asked admittance to Miss Lawson's apartment early yesterday morning just before she was murdered.

Long Time Farm Credits Urged

Washington, Feb. 9.—President Coolidge Friday urged Elmer Landes of the Farm Loan board and more than 50 managing directors of joint stock land banks, in conference here for the purpose of effecting a close co-ordination of the various units of the agricultural credits system.

"There is a feeling of hysteria among national leaders and a general lack of confidence throughout the west, due to deplorable conditions in agricultural sections," M. L. Corey, member of the farm loan board, told the bankers. "Any relief is only temporary until such a time as the prices of agricultural commodities shall reach a fair level."

"It is unbound to write five-year loans for farmers when they know and we know that they will be unable to liquidate them in that time. They need long-time credits on the amortization plan."

Black Tells of Postoffice Here

"The business of the postoffice is to sell service," Postmaster Charles E. Black told the Alexander Hamilton club at the club's monthly meeting at the Rome hotel last night.

The postmaster declared that the mails have been revolutionized in the last 20 years. He regarded the rural farm delivery system as the most important advance.

He cautioned against sending cash through the mails, as there is no way of tracing it.

"Omaha is now the Washington of Nebraska," he said. "Claims and such decisions are sent to Omaha for settlement instead of to the national capital. Three thousand men are employed out of the Omaha postoffice and 485 of them are employed in the city."
