Desserts That Are Not Too Rich

Apple Jelly.
Wash sufficient apples cut in quarters and remove ends. Cook slowly in a covered kettle with cold water coming nearly to the top of the apples. When soft drain through a coarse sieve. Let juice drip through a coarse muslin bag, boil for 20 minutes and add an equal amount of heated sugar. Boil five more minutes, skin and pour into glasses. Let stand several hours and cover with melted paraffine.

Pineapple Ice Cream.
To one can of grated pineapple add three pints of cream and one-half cup of sugar. Freeze in the usual way. A little of the pineapple should be held out to serve with the cream.

Orange Ice.
Boil together four cups of water and two cups of sugar. Add three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two cups of orange juice and when cool, freeze.

Banana Ice Cream.
Cut four or five bananas up small, force through a sieve, add one quart of cream, one and a half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a cup of sugar. Freeze.

Orange Marmalade.
Slice six lemons and nine oranges as thin as possible. Remove seeds and add four quarts of cold water. Let stand in a covered kettle for 36 hours, then boil for two hours, after which add eight pounds of sugar and boil one hour longer. Grapefruit may be substituted for part of the oranges if so desired.

Pineapple Frappe.
Boil together one cup of sugar and two cups of water for 15 minutes. Add a can of grated pineapple and the juice of two or three lemons. When cool, strain and add two cups of ice water, then freeze.

On Being Bettleless.

By ELEANOR GUNN.
The bettleless frock is still unusual enough not to pass altogether unnoticed even in a crowd of lovely dresses. The bettleless suit has so completely ousted other varieties that it has almost become the exception to find a suit with a belt, although many of the newest have a definite, one might even say exaggerated waistline. Such suits are typically French and play at being masculine, often developed of men's suiting and worn with either a waistcoat or a blouse which has that effect.

The bettleless mode having won recognition, it is not to be wondered at that we find its path leading into the ballroom. Many of the loveliest beaded dresses, some velvets in the new printed effects, in fact, in almost all materials, are made up on the straight line. How surprising that a mere bit of ribbon—a string belt we call it—can make such a difference in the general effect of the silhouette which, when all is said and done, retains its same straight line. By omitting a belt, making the frock longer, and changing the neckline from a curve to a sharp angle, we achieve distinction, which is what we are all aiming for just now.

Returns From Austria.
Mrs. William Koenig arrived home this morning after a visit in Vienna, Austria, with her daughter, Mrs. R. Guttman. Mr. and Mrs. Guttman and their young son, Fritz, made the return voyage with her, but are remaining in New York for several months before coming to Omaha. Fritz Koenig, who went to New York to meet his mother and sister, will return from there next week. Mrs. Koenig reports a splendid visit in Europe and speaks of conditions in Austria as much improved.

Dance for Japanese Reconstruction

A little "flower of old Japan" seems Betty Jane Nichols, while her companion, Eloise Barnhart, is a Chinese maid, in the oriental dance which they will give Saturday at the Y. W. C. Many Dakota People Praise Tanlac Highly

One of the outstanding features of the success of TANLAC, the world's greatest tonic, is the number of persons who have voluntarily testified in its favor. Over 100,000 persons have publicly stated that TANLAC has helped them overcome stomach trouble, rheumatism, nervousness, palpitation, heartburn, sleeplessness, loss of weight and appetite and other ailments which have their origin in a weakened stomach and digestive system. Many ailments have their origin in the stomach and true strength and rehabilitation can be gotten only by correcting stomach disorders and putting the digestive system in perfect condition. TANLAC soothes and builds up disordered stomachs so that they can properly function, thus enabling the system to be built up as nature intended it should.

There are eight ingredients in TANLAC, all derived from roots, barks and herbs. This tonic is purely vegetable and does not contain any ingredient that will bring on bad after effects. Old and young alike can safely take TANLAC with no fear of breaking down the system from harmful drugs.

Hundreds of persons in North and South Dakota have taken TANLAC and have pronounced it the greatest reconstructive tonic on the market. They have freely given their statements, telling how TANLAC helped them improve their health. Here are extracts from a few statements in the files of the TANLAC company:

TANLAC is Standby.
James A. ("Dad") Hobart, 71 Sixth avenue, North Fargo, night secretary of the Fargo Y. M. C. A.: "TANLAC has been my faithful standby now for 4 or 5 years. During this time I have used it off and on for stomach trouble and to keep up my appetite, strength and energy, and it never fails to make me eat hearty, sleep right and feel fit for my work. I'm strong for it."

When His Child Whispered the Truth Daddy Woke Up!

He was getting old while still young in years.

—He was weak, nervous and run-down. Overwork and worry had played him out.

—His blood was pale, thin and watery. His face looked tired and lined with care.

—His shoulders stooped, his footsteps dragged.

THEN—to please his little girl he tried NUXATED IRON—which contains iron, like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood.

TODAY—He is strong, vigorous and well—He looks years younger—Always ready and keen for active work or play, in fact—LIKE A NEW MAN AGAIN!

NUXATED IRON is a powerful strength and body builder. It helps make rich, red blood, steadies the nerves and gives added resistance against disease.

TRY taking NUXATED IRON for two weeks and note the amazing change in your general health, vigor and energy. You should be astonished at the results in even a few days time. Success guaranteed or money refunded. At all druggists.

"What's the Matter, Daddy?" You used to look so thought I would marry you when I grew up; but now you seem so tired and worn-out all the time. You never want to play with me any more. I heard Mamma tell Auntie that if you would only take some of that NUXATED IRON that helped her so much, it would soon make you strong and well again. Won't you, please, take NUXATED IRON, Daddy, so you will want to play with me like you used to?"

the association in this country to raise $250,000 to restore the loss. Mrs. A. C. Kennedy is the chairman of the committee in Omaha. Because the Omaha association is a member of the Community Chest, it is not possible for the board of directors to launch a city-wide campaign. But they hope for a generous response in a free will offering from members and friends to the Japanese tea.

Miss Carolyn Allen, in whose honor the tea is being given, is a member of the Yokohama staff, and will appear in Japanese costume. She will speak at least twice during the afternoon and will show pictures of the work in Japan.

There will be a musical program: Mrs. F. W. Pierpont, piano and Miss Evelyn Pierpont, violin; Miss Jean Field, harpist; trio, violin and piano, Miss Hazel Belt, Miss Jean Stirling and Master John Fleming; also a Japanese dance in costume by Eloise Barnhart and Betty Jane Nichols from the children's Saturday morning dancing class, to the music of "Japanese Love Song," sung by Miss Edna Stratton from the North Side branch.

Sixteen girls in costume from the girl reserve department will serve, and two girls, Miss Gunda Mier and Miss Mary McCarthy, in costume from the club department, will receive the offering.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Madge Though Everything Would Be All Right.
"It strikes me," sardonically observed my mother-in-law, "that you are all estimating the intelligence of this detective fellow at a mighty low rate. Suppose he shouldn't walk the chalk line you've laid out for him."

Lillian and I had looked at each other furtively. None knew better than we how we feared the very possibility she voiced; but, for the peace of mind of Harriet Braithwaite, we had kept our apprehensions strictly to ourselves. For the same reason, we signaled each other to combat Mother Graham's sage viewpoint—but placatingly.

"He may not at that," Lillian rejoined promptly, "but even if he strays any number or zigzags from our line, I believe we have him blocked on following Madge. Jim can see to it that no machine goes down that wood road out of the farm tonight, and it isn't likely that a stranger to the neighborhood would be familiar with the roads near here. Madge knows a half dozen different ways to twist around to the main road, and she can be depended on to use her knowledge."

"Let us hope you're right," my mother-in-law commented pessimistically, and then with sudden briskness, she added, "But if you're going, why don't you start?"

"Were just waiting for the taxi," I assured her.

"And here it is," Lillian struck in, her quick ears detecting the chug of the motor which a few seconds later we all heard.

Getting the Children Ready.
The next few minutes were a bustle of preparation and departure. Jim, under out instructions, had the taxi brought around to the kitchen door, were no one from the road possibly could see how many persons entered it. Lillian climbed into it and Marion, with a couple of traveling bags, one of which I had packed for the needs of the children across the road, whom Lillian expected to pick up a few rods from the gate. As soon as the noise of the machine had died away I summoned Harriet, telling her to get the children into wraps and to prepare for the long night drive. Under my direction, Jim, working with a minimum of noise, stocked the car with blankets and pillows and, wrapping the backs with the waterproof covers, put them in the luggage carrier at the side. Then, all ready for the journey, I waited, watch in hand, until a long-drawn locomotive, whistle told me that the train for which Lillian was bound was leaving Bridgehampton.

"Hurry, now," I said tensely. "I want to get through this road as quickly as I can."

The children, huddled together in a group, looked as if they did not know whether to be frightened or elated at the mysterious journey.

"Are we going to leave Granzie?" Roderick demanded.

The Final Farewells.
His grandmother coughed valiantly in an attempt to hide a sob. I knew the possibility which she was foreseeing—that perhaps she never would see these loved grandchildren again. At her age anything in the future is uncertain, and she is not one to blink facts or try to evade them.

"Only for a little while, darling," she said, stooping to kiss him. "Be sure to bring Granzie something nice from the big shops."

Roderick looked thoughtful. "Would you like a fire engine?" he asked with such grave consideration that in the effort not to hurt his baby feelings by laughter we older people lost some of the tension which was ours.

"Yes, I should like one very much," his grandmother returned, while the older children gazed at her in wondering astonishment.

I hurried them through the rest of the farewells. In another two minutes, with Edwin beside me in the front seat holding one of the boys, and Harriet with the other three children tucked away as comfortably as possible in the tonneau, I threw in

Yellow Cab

Defies the Coldest Weather

When the North Wind stings with its icy blast, and drifting snow makes walking a dreadful ordeal, a YELLOW CAB will take you there and bring you back in comfort and safety.

Our cabs are always warm and cozy because they are heated from the motor. They are safe because they are in the hands of skilled drivers who know their business and never take a chance.

It is organized responsibility that keeps YELLOW CABS in operation when adverse weather conditions drive the "for hire" car into the shelter of a garage.

You will find YELLOW CAB drivers pluckily fighting the worst blizzard with cheerful determination, when the ordinary driver is toasting his shins before the family hearth.

Rain or shine, cold or hot, early or late, YELLOW CAB rates are always the same—the lowest to be found in this city.

It was not always like this. Before the coming of YELLOW CAB every emergency yielded tribute to conscienceless persons whose only object was illicit gain.

YELLOW CAB strives for your respect and patronage by serving best, all the time.
