Speaks at W. C. T. U. North Platte D. A. R. Start Museum in Jubilee Meet in Omaha

Omaha has been selected as one of 50 leading cities in which the Women's Christian Temperance Union will celebrate its 50th or jubilee year. Mrs. Mary Harris Astor, called the "Georgia cyclone," will deliver an address here to the national state jubilee meetings to be held March 18 and 19. Mrs. Astor will be remembered by many Omahans. She spoke here several years ago to an audience which packed the city auditorium. She has attained an international reputation among the devotees of the temperance cause as one of their most eloquent orators, has included Canada, and several European countries in her lecture itineraries, and is said to be considering an engagement to tour New Zealand and Japan next year in the interests of prohibition. Notices of Mrs. Astor's topic and further plans for the meeting will be announced later. The first of these was held on November 15, 1922, at Cleveland, O., the anniversary of the organization, at its birthplace. The second was held at Hillsboro, O., in commemoration of the "Women's Crusade" which opened there. A procession of men and women followed the course taken by those pioneers of the temperance cause through the streets of Hillsboro, pausing at the places where they stopped 50 years before to offer prayers of gratitude for the outlawing of the saloon business.

Mrs. Mary Harris Astor

Delegates Leave for Fraternal Congress

Mrs. Mary E. La Rocca, supreme guardian, and Mrs. Dora Alexander Talley, supreme clerk, of the Woodmen circle, leave Sunday evening for Chicago to attend a meeting of the National Federation Congress of America.

Woodman Circle

Mrs. Jessie Maxwell and Miss Beulah Lamoreux entertained the members of the Omaha Woodmen Circle federation at the home of Mrs. Hartwell on Monday evening.

Committees for the year were appointed, the following being appointed as chairmen of the various committees: Mrs. Mary E. La Rocca, constitutional; Mrs. Blanche McKelvey, philanthropic; Mrs. Elizabeth Pedersen, house and home; Mrs. Cornelia Thomas, program; Mrs. Margaret McNichols, courtesy; Mrs. Mabel Forney, membership; Mrs. Nina Markwart, financial, and Miss Florence Holden, publicity.

B. P. O. Does

An informal reception, followed by a program, dancing and refreshments, was given the newly elected officers of the B. P. O. E. Doers, Friday evening at the Elks club rooms.

Present New Oratorio

"The Prodigal Son," an oratorio, by Henry Vincent, will be performed for the first time in Omaha on Sunday night at 7:45 in the First Methodist Methodist church. Musicians are especially invited to hear it. The soloists will be Mrs. W. Dale Clarke, soprano; Margaret Spalding Sturgess, contralto; Howard J. Steberg, tenor; Walter Jenkins, baritone; Edna Carnal, piano accompanist; Mrs. E. E. Davis, organist, and J. Edward Carnal, director.

Weads Leave for West

Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Wead started yesterday for California where they will visit one month. They made reservations several days ago, but owing to important business of the Metropolitan Utilities district Mr. Wead cancelled the first reservations.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Along the winding wood road, long abandoned, which led from our pasture to one of the lesser-traveled thoroughfares of the section, I drove my car with its precious freight. The rain pattered unceasingly upon the top of the car, and the trees on either side of the road swayed menacingly, but my lights and automatic windshield cleaner functioned admirably, and I made fairly good time to the place where the wood road joined the other. When we started I had told everyone of the occupants of the car to watch for any other car light, and Mary the brightest and most resourceful child save Marion, whom I have ever seen, had promptly wrigged herself into a position where she could see out of the rear window. Just before we reached the opening into the wider road, she spoke excitedly:

"There's just a twinkle away off through the woods that side, Auntie Madge. Maybe it's a house, but it looks as if it were moving." At my right there was an opening in the bushes into which a car could be backed. I spoke to Edwin quickly. "Please take the flashlight and see if the ground in there is hard enough to bear the weight of the car, so that we can get out again easily if I back in now." The words were hardly out of my mouth before he was down investigating.

"All right," he reported, climbing on the running board. "Never mind watching the back. I'll tell you when to stop." With his aid I had the car backed off the road in a few seconds, and disposed of it in such a fashion that no one passing in the dark would know it was there. I turned off headlights and engine, and turned to investigate Mary's discovery.

"There's no house anywhere near, Mary," I said, "so it must be a car." "It is," she exclaimed. "See, the light is growing brighter!" "We will wait until it passes," I cautioned. "Quiet everybody." "Why are you doing this, Margaret?" Harriet Braithwaite asked in a low tone, but her husband, as he climbed in beside me, spoke a peremptory "Hush!" which silenced her, but did not give me any comfort, for I was busily asking myself the same question.

It was no part of my plan to have anybody witness the emergence of our car from the old wood road. Such an appearance would be sufficient to set the tongues of the countryside to wagging even if no direct harm to our plan came to us. But my common sense told me that it would have been sufficient precaution to have turned off the lights and engine. The other action had been the result of one of my intuitive hunches which seize me occasionally, and which I generally have found it well to heed, even though they appear to be bizarre in the extreme.

ance. I remembered the activities of the family across the road, and the fact that Harry Underwood, apparently familiar with the abandoned wood road, had used it when he had explicitly had aided the wounded bootlegger to escape.
