Burden Is Telling on Macdonald

London, Feb. 16.—Premier Macdonald's broad shoulders are beginning to droop under the heavy burden of his dual office of premier and foreign minister. The condition of his health is causing his friends some solicitude. They remarked his pale and haggard appearance in the house of commons yesterday which probably is due to insomnia and neuritis brought on by overwork.

Some of them are urging him to appoint as foreign minister a man able and experienced enough in international affairs to supervise the enormous volume of detail work passing through the British foreign office. It is believed the premier may soon try to find within the ranks of the labor party a man with sufficient ability and training to look after the government's ever-increasing interests in the foreign field.

Patterson's petition asked that the holder be built on the original site. The parties to the suit signed a stipulation of agreement, providing for the removal of the holder from the site complained of, which was signed by the judge. Patterson said he would appeal.

The Woolworth Building Was Mortgaged to Pay Estate Taxes

THIS famous building had to be mortgaged to pay taxes incidental to closing the estate of a very wealthy man. Taxes must be paid in cash and unless properly provided for, are a serious drain on an estate. Constantly changing and more complicated tax laws demand expert interpretation.

This is just one more reason for the naming of this institution in your will. It is our business to be familiar with tax laws; to advise you beforehand of the best procedure; to be most careful and economical in executing the provisions of your will.

Our trust officer will gladly discuss these matters with you
