Japanese Actors Reveal Arts of Own Land

Examples of the latest development of the Japanese dramatic and musical art will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. Ongawa, Japanese actors, tomorrow at 4 in the Brandeis theater under the auspices of the Drama League.

The play, "The Fox Woman," is based on one of the ancient legends of Japan and has many of the characteristics of the old Japanese or "Ghost plays" which have profoundly affected western theatrical art in recent years. William B. Yeats and many playwrights of the Little theater movement have been influenced by the technique of these curious and haunting productions. "The Fox Woman," however, parallels somewhat more closely the realistic methods of the west. It draws its title from a cunning red fox, that has transformed itself into a woman, and is the evil genius of the play, corresponding to the witch in western legends.

The first half of the program will consist of dances, acrobatics and songs, accompanied by music on Japanese instruments, the geikin and the shamisen. The first number is instrumental: "The Feast of Lanterns," a modern descriptive composition suggesting the sounds and gaiety of one of Japan's great night festivals. Occidentals are only now beginning to discover the music lore of Japan and China, which has until recently been confined to the homes of the oriental aristocrats. This "overture" will be followed by a sword dance, "Kojima Takatori," illustrating an exploit of one of the heroes of Japanese history. The dance will be accompanied on the shamisen. Next will come "Kusabi down," an acrobatic; an ancient love song, "Moonlight and Waves," another song, "Lady Picking Mulberries," and three folk dances. This part of the program will be brought to a close with a "fashion revue" of Japanese costumes.

Chronic coughs and persistent chills lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germs. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Pachmann Plays Final Concert

V. D. Pachmann.

Vladimir de Pachmann, pianist, is presented by the Tuesday Musical club in a concert at the Brandeis theater Thursday evening, March 6, which will be the closing number of their series. De Pachmann informs the world generally every few minutes that he is 75 years old and did not really learn to play until he was 70. He has evolved a new method of playing which, he says enables him to give a long and arduous program without fatigue, although it somewhat limits his repertoire.

It is stated on no less an authority than that of de Pachmann himself that he is a greater pianist than Franz Liszt. Critics concede him a remarkable suavity of tone and accord him a very high rank as an interpreter, especially of Chopin.

Omaha Young Woman "Tells the World."

Omaha has a charming woman who is literally "telling the world." Mrs. H. D. Jolley, formerly professor in Journalism at Omaha University, returned last week from New York City where she addressed 1,000 cleaners and dyers in National convention. She spoke to them on a woman's point of view in advertising.

"If your clients are women, advertise with a woman's appeal," she advised. "Always remember your customer." Mrs. Jolley suggested that educational matter be used instead of drawings of equipment which mean nothing to the average woman reader. "Educate instead of teetering your own horn," she said in part.

"Women should be taught that clean clothes will last longer. A notion that has been handed down is that anyone can clean clothes. The dry cleaning process should be explained to women, also the dangers of gasoline vapors," according to Mrs. Jolley.

Mrs. Jolley went directly from New York to Grand Island to speak to the state convention in session there last week. For more than a year she has been national advertising representative for cleaners and dyers and has had phenomenal success in her field.

Business Women's Club

The next regular meeting of the Omaha Business Women's club will be held at the Y. W. C. A. tonight, with dinner at 5:15 p. m. The meeting is in charge of Miss Mabelle E. Casey, February group leader. Louis Bostwick will show pictures and lecture on "The Tropics as Seen Through the Camera." Miss Clara McDermont will give a reading, and eight small girls, dressed in colonial costumes, will dance a minuet. Miss Mabelle Casey will be assisted by Misses Hazel Ball, Azalia M. Brown, Augusta Bowen, Kate Christopher, Harriet Curtis, Mrs. Eva Guernsey, Louise Gwin, Addie M. Green, Minnie Loesch, Lulu Mabarry, Alto Morgan, Alma Peters, Mrs. Lydia Rodstrom, Anna Rasmussen, Ina Shea, Elsie Wieland, Florence Waterbury, Fannie Wallace and Anna Sigmund.

Drama League

It was at the time of the terrible Japanese earthquake last fall that the Drama League thought Omaha audiences would be keenly interested in having a touch of real Japan depicted for them. For this reason, Mrs. Poppleton engaged Mr. and Mrs. Ongawa to come Tuesday, February 19, to the Brandeis theater at 4 p. m. Edith Wynne Matthison had words of highest praise for their work when she was here this season and commended Mrs. Poppleton for bringing such artists to Omaha.

Mr. and Mrs. Ongawa have been in this country just two seasons but they have earned unstinted praise from critics.

Single admission can be procured at the box office of the Brandeis theater Tuesday. No reserved seats.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Abbott were guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Roth in a party of 40 at the Lincoln Country club Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Wood were guests in the Max Beghtol party.

Woman's Club Will Nominate; Hears Hitchcock

Nominees for new officers of the Omaha Woman's club will be decided upon at a meeting of the nominating committee this morning at Burgess-Nash store, it was announced at the open meeting yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Phillip Potter, president of the club. Election will take place two weeks from yesterday. The nominating committee this year, as in previous years, shall consist of the chairmen of departments and the heads of standing committees, it was voted by the club.

Mrs. John W. Gill was appointed delegate of the club to the biennial national convention in May, replacing Mrs. Phillip Potter, who has announced that she cannot go. Ex-Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, speaker of the day, remained afar off from political questions, but gave an account of how business is carried on in the house and senate, enlivened with anecdotes from his own congressional experiences. Differences between the house where important measures are rushed through in short order with the assistance of powerful committees, iron-clad cloture, and general majority rule; and the more leisurely senate with its all but unlimited argument, and the opportunities it offers for aggressive individuals and determined minorities, were clearly brought out by Mr. Hitchcock.

A general laugh followed the ex-senator's ironic tribute to one of his former foes, when, in describing the filibuster of March 1 to 4, 1917, he said with emphasis, "Now Senator La Follette can organize a filibuster better than any man in the senate." Mr. Hitchcock gave a lively account of this historic incident, in which the senate remained in continuous session for four nights and three days, trying to wear out the minority and get through the bill for arming the merchant marine, before the new administration came into power. Two hours before closing time, La Follette, who had held his thunder in reserve, still had not spoken. Hitchcock, seeing that the filibuster was about to succeed, took a hand in it himself, although the measure was his own, and so cut the victorious senator from Minnesota out of the last word.

"I don't know whether people out here realize the enormous increase in the power of the executive," Mr. Hitchcock said. "Most bills now taken up are introduced after consultation with the president and his cabinet or else suggested by the executive. This custom was started by Roosevelt and received an enormous impetus when Wilson started the custom of delivering his messages to congress in person. It was not provided for by the constitution and makes our form of government more like the British cabinet rule."

Mrs. F. A. Long, Madison, endorsement secretary of the State Federation of Women's clubs, was present and complimented the Omaha Woman's club on having its quota to the endorsement fund on time and in full, although its energies are occupied in raising money for a club house.

Valentine Luncheon

A Valentine luncheon was given by Miss Martha Crook at her home Saturday in honor of the senior class of St. John high school. The entire senior class of 12 members was present. Mrs. D. C. Bradford arrived on Saturday from New York.

Gold Star Mother Guest of Legion Auxiliary

All gold star mothers of Omaha are invited to meet Mrs. T. J. Gist of Falls City, Neb., at the meeting of the American Legion auxiliary Tuesday evening at 8 in Memorial hall, courthouse. Mrs. Gist is national committee woman for the Legion auxiliary and state gold star president for Nebraska.

Membership in the Legion will be voted to every gold star mother in Omaha as a step in the membership campaign now in progress. Members of both Legion and auxiliary posts of this district have been invited to meet Mrs. Gist at a luncheon in her honor at 12:15 today in the Burgess-Nash tea room. Here as well as in the evening she will report the national board meeting two weeks ago in Indianapolis. A round table discussion of the problems brought up by the board will follow. Mrs. John Kilmarin and Mrs. H. H. Dudley are in charge.

Mrs. Gist arrived yesterday and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reavis.

Dakota Club Women Race for First Clubhouse

The Woman's club of Pierre, S. D., will race that of Sioux Falls, S. D., for the first club house in the state of South Dakota, according to an announcement just made by its president, Mrs. America C. Geckler.

Following this year of investigation by a special committee, the Pierre Woman's club decided at its last meeting to proceed at once with definite plans for a clubhouse. The Sioux Falls club has a similar purpose, but the Pierre women hope to outstrip them in its performance.

With a membership of 150, second largest in South Dakota, and with a history of achievement dating from 1899, when the club was organized, the Pierre Woman's club finds that the interest in its work is greater than ever before. It is this interest that makes the club house project of immediate importance, explained Mrs. Geckler.

Among contributions made by the club to matters of community significance since the club season opened last September are large subscriptions to the near east relief fund, and the Sioux Falls Children's Home fund, systematic campaigns, which brought restitution of curfew observance in the city and re-establishment of the position of both county nurse and county agricultural agent after these had been permitted to lapse.

Dancer and Editor Guests of Business Women

Tom Shawn of the Danishwaller dancers, and J. Ballard Dunn, manager of The Omaha Bee, will be guests of the Business and Professional Women's Division of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce Wednesday at its dinner in the chamber dining room. Both will speak. Miss Laura Peterson will sing accompanied by Mrs. J. Dean Ringer.

The dinner arrangements are in charge of the wholesale group under Miss Mabel Race. Samples of merchandise from the various wholesale houses will be presented to members and guests.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Atmospheric Conditions Began to Disturb Madge. With no further words, my brother-in-law aided the boy on his lap to change his position, and as I saw him arrange the child's posture so that his eyes commanded the rear window of the car, I found my answer to the question which I mentally had asked concerning the whispered colloquy of the boy and the man.

It had been rehearsed—that question and answer which had just been exchanged concerning a possible wish of the lad to change his position. Upon Harriet's objection to Mary's further watching of the road, her husband unobtrusively had provided a substitute for the little girl. Then he must feel that we were not yet figuratively out of the woods, even as literally our journey now would be between rows of stately forest trees. The knowledge of his uneasiness gave an added twinge to my own fears, but as the miles rolled off, and the light of no following car appeared, my spirits began to rise. I was letting my imagination get the better of my common sense. I told myself, after we emerged from the winding bay road to one of the outlying streets of Southarphion. It was but a short distance to the big highway which under several names traverses Long Island from Montauk Point to New York, and we were just turning into it when Bob in his uncle's arms spoke softly:

The Car That Waited.

My nervousness made me anticipate my brother-in-law's answer. "That doesn't mean anything now. There are always cars along here. We'll have a number of cars behind us and ahead of us until we turn off on the road to Riverhead."

Edwin made no comment whatever, and I wondered if he were fended at my interruption. I heard him whispering again to the boy, and from the child's tense attitude, guessed that he had charged him to keep an eye on the car behind us. This roused my fears again, but I resolved to keep them to myself, and I found an outlet in my tense nerves in the opportunity for faster driving which the broad highway presented.

We were well into the Shinnecock Hills when Edwin spoke in a low tone: "I think you ought to know, Madge, that this car behind us was in all probability waiting at the end of that bay road. Of course, I may be mistaken, but just as we came out there, I caught a glimpse of a car without lights standing at one side of the road, and I am sure I caught the noise of a starting engine just after we had passed. Do you want to slow up and let them pass you so as to make sure?"

I thought swiftly and a ruse came to me which would not only enable me to elude pursuit if such were behind me, but would determine for me the question as to the knowledge or ignorance of my errand among the occupants of the car behind me. Suggesting a Ruse.

"Canoe Place Inn is not very far ahead," I said to Edwin, "and there is a broad roadway sweeping up to its door. I can turn in there without slackening speed very much, and the inn is open all the year round, so a car turning there will occasion neither comment nor inquiry. If the car following goes on about its business, and does not turn around, we shall have no question answered.

"At least we shall be able to get a good look at it," Edwin commented quietly, "unless the fog prevents."

Started, I took my eyes from the road directly in front of me and let them rest for a moment on the sky and sea which a few seconds ago had been visible, though mistily, through the rain. Now they were blotted out by the thick white fog, which comes up so suddenly on the east end of the island, and which is the particular bane of all motorists. Absorbed in my fears, and mechanically watching only the road in front of me, I had not noticed it, and my heart gave a little clutch of fear as I thought of the dangerous road in front of me, and the miles yet to be traversed before we could reach shelter.

"I'll drive as fast as I can for as long as I can," I told myself grimly, with a little throb of thankfulness that I was on the land side of the road, one of the most beautiful in the world in sunlight or moonlight, with its curves skirting precipitous descents to a bay as blue and sparkling, travelers say, as that of Naples. Many times have I stopped to admire its loveliness, but now I wished that it could be transformed into an unlovely but level stretch of solid earth, for I knew only too well that danger its fog-hung windings held for me.
