Fleharty Tells Concord

Club About Washington George Washington was the greatest military genius of all times, and the people who selected him as president of the United States made good choice," said Harry B. Fleharty Thursday to members of the Concord club at Hotel Fontenelle.

No man in this country can fail to attribute the nation's success in the olution to Washington's intellectual superiority. The government is not a machine but a co-operative as-sociation. The individuals must help the government in every way pos-sible, so as to establish a strong and clean government in America.'
