In his address on George Washington, to the Continental club in Hotel Fontenelle at luncheon today, John L. Webster opened with the following quotation from an address de-livered by Abraham Lincoln, February 22, 1842:

Washington is the mightiest man on earth-long since the mightiest the cause of civil liberty. On that name no eulogy is expected. It can-To add brightness to the sun, or glory to the name of Washington, is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name, and in its marked, deathess splendor, leave it shine on." Incidents of Life.

Webster added the following comment: "Confronted with these eulogistic words from the lips of one second only to Washington, it is not for me to attempt to add to either the brightness or the glory of Washgton's place in history. But we ay be pardoned for making some brief allusions to some of the impor-

During his review of the life of the first president, Mr. Webster said: "The things aclomplished by most other great men in history are as fragments when compared to the many grand roll the scroll of history from the time of Alexander to Cromwell, and none in his useful work for mankind or in the national government will compare with George Washington. He stands above them all.'

Displayed True Greatness

Mr. Webster added that it was in people after the close of the revolution that the real greatness of Wash ington most displayed itself, at a time nesday, February 20, behind closed and in a crisis that demanded widereaching and constructive faculties. He added this thought: "I may of the life work and influence of George Washington, that it passes ny understanding and comprehension. God seems to have created George Washington as a central planet of the human race.'

MIDWEST HONORS

Chicago, Feb. 22 .- The 192d anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the nation's first president, was observed throughout the middle west today with patriotic exercises, while most public institutions and business houses had a holiday.

Patriotic societies sponsored special exercises in commemoration of the exercises in commemoration o

Eggs Dug Up in S. D. Piece of Shell Burned Gives Odor as If Fresh

60,000,000 Years Old Chicago, Feb. 22.—Two eggs, believed to be bird eggs, between 35,000,000 and 60,000,000 years old, which were found in South Dakota, have been added to the collection of fossils in the Field museum. Chemical tests have proved that the additions are eggs and not stones, a small piece of the petrified shell when chipped off and burned having given an odor similar to that accompanying the burning

"Of course, we cannot be positive that they are duck eggs," H. W. Nichols, associate curator of geology at the museum said, "but they are from a bird which must have been much like a modern duck. They are the exact shape of duck eggs and the texture is the same."

The age of the eggs was deterthey were found, rock that belonged to the early Miocene age, some 35,000,000 to 60,000,000 years ago.

Except for the disonaur eggs resently discovered in Mongolia, the duck eggs are believed to be among the oldest manifestations of animal life yet found,
