Yankee Star Is Threatened With Pneumonia

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 29.—George Herman (Babe) Ruth, king of swat, collapsed today in the lobby of his hotel here and was removed to his room, critically ill.

Ruth, physicians say, now is suffering from influenza, but they said there is grave danger pneumonia may develop within 24 hours.

By Associated Press. Cleveland, O., Feb. 29.—Babe Ruth of the New York Yankees was ordered to bed at Hot Springs, Ark., today by his physician, according to a long distance telephone story in the Cleveland News from its staff correspondent at Hot Springs today.

Ruth collapsed in the lobby of the Hotel Majestic and had to be assisted to his room. His physician diagnosed the case as a mild attack of influenza.

There is danger, however, that Ruth will develop pneumonia within the next 24 hours, the correspondent says. According to Dr. W. T. Wootton, there is a great deal of congestion over Ruth's left lung.

Ruth remained in bed until noon, when he went for a walk. He had been out but a short time when he became weak and staggered back to the hotel, just about collapsing in the lobby. A couple of bystanders helped him to his room.

Dr. Wootton and a trained nurse were immediately summoned. An examination revealed Ruth had been stricken with flu.

Salt Lake City Due to Win Flag This Year

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 29.—H. W. (Bill) Lane, president of the Salt Lake Pacific Coast league baseball club, is celebrating his birthday for the 13th time today. The Bee boss was born back in 1872, but he is one of the few born on the odd day of leap year.

"This is my year," Bill said today. "I only have one in four, and this is it. Probably my ball club will get the breaks with me this year and do something. We have a great team and great prospects. It ought to be this year, if ever."

Speed Ball King to Retire From Majors

Cleveland, O., Feb. 29.—Reports which have been current during the winter that Walter Johnson, star pitcher of the Washington club, contemplates retiring from the major leagues after this season were confirmed by the veteran strike-out king at Hot Springs today, according to advices received by the Cleveland Plaindealer, from its staff correspondent tonight.

His retirement hinges, according to the story, on whether Johnson is able to purchase a Pacific coast league club for which he is negotiating. If he is successful in landing it, Johnson will manage it and take his turn on the mound.

Johnson is starting his 18th year with Washington, during which time he set a strike-out record. He also is regarded as one of the speediest pitchers who ever broke into the game.

WHAT THE PITCHERS SAY

CLIFFORD BOGUE who will play with Marshalltown, Ia., in the Mississippi valley this season likes to tell about Zeke McGrath veteran amateur hurler, who owns the slowest curve ball in the city.

This story is one of Cliff's favorites about the veteran amateur pitcher. "Five years ago we journeyed over to Shenandoah, Ia., to play in a tournament," said Cliff. "It so happened that Zeke was assigned to pitch a morning game against Hamburg, Ia. Things went fine for Zeke in the first inning, but in the second inning a strong wind came up which took Zeke's slow ball just the opposite way which it was supposed to travel. Zeke decided then it was useless to throw any more curves so he tried a few straight ones. The first batter who swung at one of the veteran pitcher's straight ones gathered in a home run and the second batter knocked a three-bagger.

"So Zeke decided to throw a curve ball again and he wound up by delivering a tantalizing outdrop to the batter but the ball never reached the hitter. It was blown over the first base stand by the wind and the manager promptly waved Zeke to the bench.

"Outside of this one incident Cliff was a good pitcher."

Says "Bugs" Daer: SPRING TRAINING STARTS TOMORROW

Reporters and Newspaper Photographers Commence Their Annual Southern Trip.

AN ORCHARD of baggage is blooming in Pennsylvania station. Railroad labels are sprouting on the Giants' traveling bags.

Secretary Tierney has gathered together a group of reporters and photographers and will freight them to Florida, where the presence of singing birds make up for the absence of seagulls.

This is the Giants' first crash into winter society. There will be no more of that Jack Bentley and Frank Frisch business. You've got to have three names down in Palm Beach to register in financial circles.

If you hear of F. Fordham Frisch and J. Twilfer Bentley you will know that a very good third baseman is instructing a good pitcher how to put plenty of stuff on a visiting card without losing control of the period.

If you have got your geography and your sense of direction, you will know that Florida is on the ground floor of the biggest hotel business in the world. The hotels are so close together that a diner ordering ham and eggs in one hotel will find that everything is tangled up like a ball of yarn on a rear axle.

When the waiter hollers for the ham and eggs the chef in the next hotel hears the instructions, and fries 'em up. Another waiter in a third hotel grabs 'em and delivers them to a guy in a wheel chair on the boardwalk.

All the guy who ordered them gets is the pleasant odor. A diner in a fifth hotel pays the check and a waiter in a sixth establishment quits because he didn't get a tip.

However, the Giants will have their own kitchen batter on this trip and they will eat hearty. Everything is all set except that Henry Fabian hasn't succeeded in convincing the alligators that the ball park is not a nest.

If the Giants don't win another pennant it will not be the fault of Sarasota, because that town has sent up to New York for a special order of grapefruit and oranges.

About 20 people will leave tomorrow afternoon from Pennsylvania's best station. There will be two secretaries, 14 reporters, three photographers and one ball player.

The reporters take the one hall porter along to have a reason for going.

Believe It Or Not

RABBIT hunters have for years made use of a trick known as "driving." It simply is forming a line and walking through the brush. Rabbits which run ahead are then shot by hunters stationed at strategic points. Many bunnies run into the game bag in this way, Frank Lanterner, however, has for several years known of a better way, especially when only a few are in the party.

Frank got the idea from the tanks used in the war. He built a tower on an old democrat wagon. This tower rose up about 15 or 20 feet off the wagon bed. A driver drives the mules through the brush, over a hill and down the dale and Frank and a companion roost in the top of the tower. They can see the rabbits as they run and so proceed to fire a volley at them.

This results in many dead rabbits. "If you think it's a cinch to hit rabbits while you sway about in a flimsy tower made of 2x4 timber," says Frank, "you have another guess coming. The thrill isn't in hitting the rabbit. It's in hanging onto the tower while you fire."

Pitcher Bridegroom Preferred Carolina to Major League Berth

Mathewson has two remarkable recruits among his rookies. Stryker, the Worcester boy, led the Eastern league pitchers last season with the wonderful record of 27 victories and seven defeats.

Yeargin, a pitcher recalled from Greenville, N. C., was a rookie with the Boston club in training last spring. His work impressed Duke Farrell, the crafty coach, and Fred Mitchell, the manager, also was sweet on the boy.

Finally, just to make him feel good, Mitchell told Yeargin that he was going to keep him with the team all season and not farm him out at all.

Now, most any boy would have been elated over this grand news, but not Yeargin. He began to get sad and low in his mind. As the team moved northward playing exhibition games the North Carolina recruit was marked as "the man who never smiled." Fading through the Carolina Yearling became positively mournful. Finally Farrell discovered the trouble. "The kid is homesick," he declared. "He was a bridegroom, and he wanted to see his Carolina bride."

Mitchell farmed him at his own request to Greenville. He won 20 and lost nine in the Carolina league. Now, with a year of married life behind him, Mathewson figures that this young pitcher will welcome a big league trial far from the Carolina cotton fields and mountain ranges and that he will make good under the supreme test.

Berlenbach Scores Twenty-Fifth Win; Stone Stops McGill in Eleventh Round

New York, Feb. 28.—Two of the ring's most promising title aspirants scored knockout victories tonight in star attractions of a show at Madison Square garden.

Ad Stone, Philadelphia's "fighting marine" stopped Dave McGill, Irish light heavyweight, in the 11th round, while Paul Berlenbach, New York middleweight sensation, gained his 25th consecutive knockout at the expense of Young Fisher, Syracuse veteran. Both were 12-round matches.

Stone and McGill put up a slashing battle but the former marine's heavier punching had McGill in frequent distress, the referee stopping the fight when the Irishman, bleeding and groggy, reeled about the ring under a shower of blows in the 11th round.

Weights, young Fisher, 158 1-2; Berlenbach, 165.

Veterans Seek Dempsey-Wills Go

Cumberland, R. I., Feb. 28.—The town council of Cumberland today voted to grant a license to the Rhode Island department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, for a bout between Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, and Harry Wills, negro challenger, to be held here July 4 or July 12. Attached to the resolution was the proviso that the promoters pay a fee of $10,000 to the town within 10 days.

Henry Dyer, representing the veterans, and John J. Griffin, who announced himself as the representative of Tex Rickard, New York boxing promoter, appeared before the council to present the petition for a license. They asked that permission to hold the bout be granted immediately, and offered to pay therefore a fee of $100.

The council considered the proposal in executive session and later in open session granted the license.
