See Legion Unit Installed at Bellevue

A new American Legion auxiliary unit of 25 members was installed yesterday afternoon at Bellevue vocational school by Mrs. John Kilmarin, during a day in which the school held open house to representatives of the ninth district. Members of the new unit are wives and relatives of the men at the school.

Among the officers of the Legion auxiliary at the school were Mrs. G. M. Ackerman, Almsworth, Neb., state president; Mrs. J. Barlow Reynolds, president of the Douglas county post; Mrs. E. C. McClason, state chairman of hospitalization and welfare; Mrs. J. E. Baird, first district committee-woman, Lincoln; Mrs. T. J. Gist, Falls City; Mrs. H. H. Ball, Lincoln, state secretary.

C. H. Deck of St. Louis and Frank Darling, Omaha, were two veterans' bureau representatives present.

The morning was spent in inspecting the work of the vocational school. In the afternoon the guests watched the installation and were taken on a motor trip to Fort Crook. The evening was devoted to a surprise entertainment by the veterans at the school and the band from Council Bluffs.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

"Do you know, Mrs. Madge, you're rather a brick!"

Alfred Drake shot a quizzical look at me.

"I am protruded in the dust with contrition," he said, smiling. "I had forgotten that you were a super-shopper."

"Nothing of the kind," I retorted a bit testily. "I love to dawdle and window-shop as well as anybody, but today, as old Betty used to say, is 'something else again.' I must get things done in the quickest possible time, and I can meet you in two hours easily. How about you? Can you manage to get your business done in that time?"

I did not mean to have my question tinged with feminine malice, but Alfred took up the name promptly.

"Less than that, I'm sure," he said with apparent carelessness, but I guessed that he would get through with his particular commission on time or break his neck in the attempt.

"I have not been married to Dicky for years without getting a few side-lights upon masculine mental processes."

"Then suppose we meet"—I broke off abruptly with the remembrance of the dilemma of the driver, and explained to Alfred in a few swift words the danger in which the driver stood from recognition by a man whom his government work had made a deadly personal enemy. Alfred looked thoughtful, and then put a question.

"In how many stores are you going to shop?"

"Only one," I returned promptly, "that outfitting shop for children on the avenue. I can get everything I wish right there."

"Then I have it!" he ejaculated. "Brooklyn!"

I looked at him amazed, and with an amused little laugh, he explained: "We'll all meet in Brooklyn," he said. "How about it?" He touched the driver on the shoulder. "Under the circumstances, wouldn't you rather pick us up in Brooklyn?"

The driver turned around, relief upon his face.

"You're sure it will be all right for you, ma'am?" he queried.

"Absolutely," I affirmed, although I was a bit in doubt as to the practicability of Alfred's scheme.

"Then that will be the best thing," the youth responded. "I'd thought of it, but didn't like to spring it. I suppose you'll be coming over on the subway, of course?"

"Naturally," Alfred rejoined.

"Then—one could almost see him laying out our route in his brain—"take this branch and get off at this station"—he named a corner a long way out. "I'll be waiting there unless I'm croaked or in the hospital, an hour and a half from now. You'll be that long, won't you?"

"Two hours," Alfred answered.

"Then, if I'm not there when you come you'll have to get on back to Flushing without waiting for me, for I won't be anywhere. But that's only a million to one shot. You'll see me waiting at the church when you get there, and I'll drive to Jamaica and then across to Flushing. It won't take much longer, and it will be lots safer."

"So be it," Alfred said with a reassuring smile to the man. "Drive

Little Children Need More Care, Says P. T. A. Head

"The most neglected child in the world today is the preschool child, between the ages of 2 and 5," charged Mrs. A. H. Reeve of Philadelphia, national president of the Parent-Teacher association and editor of the Child Welfare Magazine, in speaking before 45 Parent-Teacher leaders at the Burgess-Nash tea room yesterday noon. Mrs. Reeve explained the extension of Parent-Teacher work through the formation of preschool circles, at which the parents of little children studied how to prepare them physically, mentally, emotionally and morally for school.

"American children ought to have fathers," declared Mrs. Reeve. "They are not half orphans. Both sides of the family are needed to bring up children correctly. It does no good for the mother to fly around to lectures, classes and mothers' meetings getting her head filled with new ideas, if she cannot persuade her husband to take an intelligent interest in the rearing of his children."

Work in which the National Parent-Teacher association interests itself includes improvement of motion pictures, physical education, home education, home economics, kindergarten extension and religious education, said me to the nearest subway station."

"You let me off there, too," I said, and I knew that I had made a wise decision by the relief which flared into the eyes of the driver, though he protested conscientiously.

"Are you sure it will be all right with Mrs. Bird?"

"Of course," I returned. "I can get a taxi right at the station I get off, and really make better time than I could going from here with you."

"That's right," he agreed, and turned his car around in the direction of the subway station we wished. We were almost there when Alfred voiced a dismayed protest.

"But your bundles, Madge!" he exclaimed. "I hadn't thought of them. You'll be weighed down like a delivery wagon."

the national head. The national association has more than 600,000 members and is organized in 45 states, Hawaii and Alaska.

Summer courses in the organization and conduct of Parent-Teacher work are now offered to joint classes of parents and teachers at Columbia, Georgia and Oregon universities. In addition, short courses are offered at Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Tennessee, New Jersey, Wyoming and Washington.

A second guest of honor at the luncheon was Mrs. G. H. Wentz, Lincoln, president of the Nebraska Parent-Teacher association. A group of Council Bluffs women were present, headed by Mrs. C. F. Kimball.

Mrs. Reeve and Mrs. Wentz spent the afternoon in Council Bluffs and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tukey at dinner in the latter's home. They addressed members and friends of the Parent-Teacher association at Dundee school last night. Today they leave for Lincoln, where Mrs. Reeve will be honor guest at a reception at the governor's mansion and will address the state teachers' convention.

Mrs. Reeve is the mother of three children and grandmother of two.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Do Your Retail Shopping in OMAHA

One of Chicago's richest men, a former owner of exclusive retail store property there, said in a public meeting in Omaha a few days ago:

"A visitor asked me if he could get up-to-date men's wearing apparel in Omaha.

"I replied to him, 'You can get the same things in Omaha that you get on Michigan boulevard in Chicago, on Fifth avenue in New York or on the Rue de la Paix in Paris.'

"I said the only difference is that the price in Omaha is not so high.

"I told him the same condition is true about anything else bought in a retail store—women's and children's articles, as well as general merchandise."

This Chicago property owner told a big truth.

Citizens of Omaha have retail shopping facilities that completely satisfy every want of any man, woman or child.

These facilities are being used not only by Omahans, but by residents of the vast and rich agricultural section of which Omaha is the center.

A strong and up-to-date retail district is unquestionable proof of a prosperous and growing city. In Omaha this proof exists in a superlative degree.

Products of Nebraska Have a Never Ending Market

A delegate from an eastern industrial city, attending a national convention last month, said to an officer of the Omaha Real Estate Board:

"You folks in Nebraska are the luckiest in America. With your diversified farming you have good crops every year and generally they are all good.

"Furthermore, there's always a market for everything you produce, because you produce food products."

Advantages offered by Omaha to retail shoppers is shown by the fact that Omaha's retail business last year totaled approximately $150,000,000, or $500,000 per day.

These advantages are also shown by the fact that chain store owners all want branches in Omaha. These men want locations only in good retail centers, not poor ones. They want the crowds that good retail stores, such as those in Omaha, will bring to them.
