

Progressive to Stay in Race Against Bryan

Edward Sughroue, Third Party Candidate for Governor, Flays Brother Charlie in Statement

Lincoln, March 22.—Edward Sughroue, who appealed a week ago to the progressives in the state for aid...

"Who will deny that partisan politics ruled our last legislature," Sughroue asked, "From the governor, who should have set the example of nonpartisanship..."

"I, as a progressive candidate against the present governor, who is a recognized leader of one of those old parties, have been requested to withdraw by his friends and by the heads of the four big railroad brotherhoods..."

"I think rather that those leaders who signed the request for my withdrawal are a group of dominant men who do not speak the sentiments of the men that toil."

"I dare to do my duty, as I see it, because I have faith in my brother farmers and laborers, and the men and women in Nebraska who are freed. I will not withdraw in favor of Governor Bryan."

A. R. convention delegates Friday night at the Burgess-Nash auditorium.

Miss Henrietta Gutschall as the quaintly costumed heroine in bouffant hoop skirts, recalled the gardens lovingly planted by the early mothers of the nation, and directed the attention of their daughters to the "garden of nations" which awaited their cultivation. The various flowers in the "garden of nations" were portrayed by little pupils of Miss Julia Wise, who danced in costumes Dutch, Spanish gypsy, French, Polish, Chinese and oriental dances.

Indians Served as Race by White Man's Teaching

Lessons in Hygiene and Industry Given Credit by South Dakota Superintendent.

Pierre, S. D., March 22.—Romantic word pictures of a race that is vanishing from the earth, as presented by numerous fiction writers, set forth a condition that no longer has basis in fact, according to C. F. Whitlock, superintendent of the Pierre Indian Industrial school, who pointed out that owing chiefly to methods of sanitation which have been taught the younger generation an approximate 10 per cent increase in Indian population of the nation has been recorded in the last decade.

Identical courses of study are being followed in all nonreservation schools, which include also those at Rapid City and Flandreau, he said. The course is the product of a wide study of state courses of study and is believed to be superior to most of them. Its chief merit is provision for devoting one-half of the student's time to practice work of vocational training.

Personal hygiene and sanitation in home making are drilled into the boys and girls so thoroughly over a period of years that they become fixed habits, the superintendent explained. Back in their homes, these students set a new standard for the entire community.

The result is so unmistakable, Mr. Whitlock said, that taken together with the small degree to which Indians intermarry with whites, there is every reason to believe the race of native Americans will retain its position indefinitely.

Practical study of the care of milk holds chief interest of boy students at the school. They operate the school dairy in squads, caring for the 25 dairy cows, milking and keeping accurate records of milk production. The Holstein herd maintains a high standard of milk production and is one of the finest in this section of the state.

The boys also care for the chickens and hogs and under the direction of supervisors operate all departments of the 300 acre farm at the school. During the winter they have built a modern hog house and have nearly finished painting roofs of all the school buildings. There are also dormitory buildings, a kitchen, a canteen, a garage for the living quarters. Others are janitors in charge of school buildings and grounds.

Girl students likewise carry on their part of domestic training. Details alternate in dormitory, a modernly equipped school laundry and a dress making department, where hats and garments for all students are supplied. The recreation program is well taken care of, fitting in so systematically that it is scarcely possible to find at any period of the day a group of students of any age free from their schedule long enough to engage in any extraordinary work, according to Mr. Whitlock. No class of students are more appreciative or are greater boosters for their school than these, he said.

Men Who Are Making Omaha

A. C. Scott HEYNE PHOTO

Everybody remembers those big signs that once stood at important or dangerous intersections, requesting auto drivers to be careful, because children will play in the streets, and Omaha needs the children. That was Al Scott. He signs his checks A. C. Scott, but that is a mere formality. In addition to being the head of the Scott Tent and Awning company, with a big branch factory at Seattle, he is president of the Manufacturers association, president of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce, and a past chairman of the executive committee of that body. This will give a little hint as to how active Al Scott is in the life of the community. He was born and raised on a farm, and is as familiar with the layout of a cornfield as he is with the contour of a soil loam. Many stories might be told to illustrate the genial and helpful nature of the man, but here we will merely state as a general proposition that Al Scott is not only a live wire in the industrial and commercial life of the community, but in a quiet and unostentatious fashion he has done good works in other lines to a degree that even his closest friends do not know all. Not the least of his honorable record was what he did for the government during the war, but you will never hear Al Scott boasting of this.

There is no more prospect for an artesian flow.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 22.—Federal and state law enforcement agents today announced the arrest of John J. Ziemeas, supply sergeant at Fort D. A. Russell near here, and L. Dreher, a cook at the fort, on charges of stealing and selling habit forming drugs, and the recovery of $50,000 worth of such drugs which had been stolen from field kits stored in an army warehouse at Fort Russell.

Both men, it is said, have confessed. Dreher was arrested when he sold 22 tubes of morphine to a federal narcotic agent for $192. The transaction was witnessed by several officers stationed in an adjoining room. Dreher, arrested as soon as the morphine had been delivered, confessed, it is said, implicating Ziemeas.
