The Very Small Hat Continues in Favor for Both Morning and Afternoon Wear

Sally Milgrim

To keep pace with the tailored mode that is so strongly in vogue at present, hats grow smaller and simpler every day. The mannish coat and skirt that the smart world is wearing on the street call for a tiny hat, as severe and chic in line as the costume it accompanies. For this reason the cloche shape continues in popularity. It may be made of felt, (as many of the newest ones are) satin, taffeta or straw or a combination of two materials. The only perceptible change in this type of hat is in the brim. If there is any brim at all, it rolls up slightly in front.

The slender, tubular frock and the bobbed head are other reasons for the success of these small, close-fitting hats. In the afternoon as well as with the tailleur, the cloche is worn in order to retain the popular, slim straight line. Only with the fluffy summer frock of light, thin materials will large hats be worn.

A smart hat for a tailored suit is of black straw, with a bow of grosgrain ribbon. The shape above is a sports hat of brown, yellow and blue striped straw.

Your Problems

By Martha Allen

Dear Martha Allen: I am in desperate need of advice and, like so many do, I am coming to you for it. I am a young girl of 22 and have been going with a boy two years younger than I am for three years. I love him very much and he claims he loves me also. I've never told him that I really love him, for it seems to me a boy doesn't love a girl as much as I need to. "Am I right?" I like to have him coax for my presence and beg for my kisses. I feel that I'm wrong and now I don't know which way to turn. Are we engaged? Well, I don't know. He asked me once if I'd wait until he was 22, and another time he asked me if I'd marry him. I couldn't take him seriously and didn't answer anything decent. Am I wrong again, or am I right, knowing how young he is? Lots and lots of times I intended to tell him, but he coaxed me not to. I didn't, for I really love him and I'd never live without him, I'm sure. He teases me about other boys and I let him think I really like them. Now I've come to the breaking point. He makes dates with me sometimes, and sometimes when he's not sure he can get the car he doesn't. I sit at home and wonder if he'll come, when I could have so many other ways to go. He doesn't go with other girls, of course, but he seems so lukewarm. He doesn't care if he can come or not, it seems to me. Saturday the roads were bad and we had to stay home. He didn't even walk over here, though it's just a few feet distant, and why doesn't he? We always have so much fun together, or shall we quit? I can never be happy without him. He must know I like him even if he won't tell me otherwise. I wouldn't always go just with him. He knows I have lots of other chances. How nice he can be sometimes, do you think? Then, again, he's just simply lukewarm. What shall I do? Martha Allen, I'm miserable. The shape above is a sports hat of brown, yellow and blue striped straw.

Finds Kellogg's Bran "Easy way to avoid constipation" after suffering for years

Constipation is a dangerous disease. It can lead to many others. Twenty years' suffering with constipation undetermined this man's health. Kellogg's Bran restored it—as it has done for thousands. This is what he says: "Gentlemen: After eating Kellogg's Bran twice a day for one month I find it not only an 'Easy Way to Avoid Constipation' but an easy and most pleasant way to cure it. I have been troubled with constipation . . . for more than twenty years . . . after adopting the milk and bran one I find my stomach greatly improved, and find it a specific for constipation. It seems to me only justice that you should know what your product has done for me, and what it is capable of doing for others. (The original of this letter is on file at the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Mich.)"

Why Few Escape Tooth trouble caused by film Why so many teeth are cloudy

Why Few Escape Tooth trouble caused by film Why so many teeth are cloudy You know how teeth discolor and decay, despite the daily brushing. Dingy teeth and injured teeth became almost universal. Now millions of people use a new method of teeth cleaning. They combat the film—the great enemy of teeth. This is to show you by a free test how much that new way means. How film clouds and ruins teeth Film is the great tooth enemy—that viscous film you feel. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so much of it clings and stays. Film becomes discolored, forming dingy coats, which mar the beauty of the teeth. It makes them unclean and unsightly. Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is how teeth are ruined. Modern science has discovered Protect the Enamel Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combant which contains harsh grit. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear. In one week you will realize that you and yours should always use this method. Cut out coupon now.
