Both Parties Attacked in Air Inquiry

"Controlled by Same People," Former Federal Investigator Tells Wheeler-Brookhart Committee.

Calls Official "Jelly Fish"

By Universal Service.
Washington, March 29.—An attack upon both the republican and democratic parties as "corrupt" and "controlled by the same people" was made before the Daugherty investigating committee today by H. L. Scaife, former investigator for the Department of Justice.

Scaife based his declaration upon his investigations of war-time aircraft contracts, together with the charge that the department under Attorney General Daugherty had failed to prosecute.

The witness characterized as a "jelly fish" Guy D. Goff, assistant in charge of war contract investigations, and expressed a dislike for Abraham E. Myers, charged with the same sort of work. Scaife asserted he was told by Goff that Myers owed his appointment to former Attorney General George Wickham of New York, whose law firm represented Mitsui & Co., Japanese backers of the Standard Aircraft corporation. He described the Mitsui interests as "part of the invisible government" of the United States.

So He Took the $100,000.

Gaston B. Means, another former department agent, previously had testified that he received from a representative of the Mitsui company $100,000 bills, which he turned over to Jesse W. Smith.

Scaife also described what he regarded as the "critical relations" between the United States and Japan during 1921, while he was at work upon the Standard Aircraft and other cases. He said that he had seen a confidential report showing that agents had traced to the Mitsui offices a man who was taking pictures of the defenses of Boston harbor.

Another report dealt with an effort by the Japanese to buy in the United States fire engine motor trucks, which could be adopted for artillery purposes.

Scaife brought into the investigation the names of Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary of War Weeks in connection with the American-Bosch Magneto case. He reviewed the sale of the Bosch American holdings by the Wilson administration to Martin E. Kern, whom he characterized as a friend of A. Mitchell Palmer, then attorney general.

Reads Correspondence.

The witness read what he said were copies of correspondence sent from Germany by Kern to his associates in this country. One suggested taking Secretary Weeks to Attorney General Daugherty in an effort to "put a quietus on the whole thing."

The undertaking, Scaife asserted, was financed by Hornblower & Weeks, a bond house. Senator Jones, republican, of Washington, remarked that he thought Secretary Weeks had not been associated with the firm for several years.

War Veteran Called "Liar" and Refused Privilege of Telephoning Wife or Friends.

Stewart is a friend of Robert Smith, clerk of district court, and Rev. J. Clyde Mahaffey. He came to Omaha a month ago with his wife and child. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan school of pharmacy and an ex-service man.

His arrest occurred at sixteenth and Douglas streets where he was company with a young man he had met in Des Moines.

"I learned at the station that the young man I was with was charged with stealing some watches," said Stewart.

"The chief of detectives called me a liar and threatened to beat me up when I told him who I was. I was not permitted to telephone my wife or friends. I was held in a cell all night and until about 2 the next afternoon without any charges being made."

He said several detectives "identified" him as a man who committed thefts in Omaha about two months ago at which time he says he was nowhere near Omaha.

Queer Law Obscures Identity of G. O. P. Convention Delegates; Creates Confusion Among Voters

The announcement of Attorney General Spillman at Lincoln, that the names of delegates to the republican national convention must be rotated on the ballots and that no designations may be shown, brought reactionary statements from Coolidge and Johnson men in Omaha.

The general opinion is that while the attorney general may be correct in his rigid interpretation of the law, the ruling will lead to confusion among the voters. Most of those who were quizzed on the subject agreed that the grouping of delegates would be the common sense solution of this feature of the primary ballots.

It is ruled by the attorney general that the law expressly provides that the name of a presidential candidate shall not appear twice on a ballot, which would be the case if the convention delegates were grouped.

Imprecisely.

"I think it is an extremely impractical way to handle the names of delegates," said A. V. Shotwell, president of the Coolidge League of Nebraska. "I believe that Coolidge and Johnson supporters are of the same opinion, that a method should be devised whereby they may be sure they are voting for the delegates upon whom they may rely to carry out their wish at the convention."

"I am not in favor of the rotation idea," Mr. Burton said. "It will confuse the voters. I have not gone into the law closely on this subject."

Robert Smith, who has been identified with the Johnson forces, asserted that he believed the opinion of the attorney general reflected the law. "Some of the candidates for delegates to the national convention filed merely as delegates without reference to any candidate other than that they would support the candidate receiving the majority vote in the republican primary for president in the state," Mr. Smith said. "The voter should inform himself. I have looked into this question and found no provision in the law which provides for the grouping of delegates, under the head of any candidate for president."

Unfortunately.

E. L. Bradley, a state leader for Senator Hiram Johnson, expressed his opinion that the grouping was an unfortunate thing for both sides.

"The law does not provide for grouping. We will circulate the names of delegates grouped. I think the names should be grouped. It will cost us much money to circulate the voters on this feature of the ballot."

William M. Burton, president of the Douglas County Coolidge league, admitted that the attorney general may be right.

"I am not in favor of the rotation idea," Mr. Burton said. "It will confuse the voters. I have not gone into the law closely on this subject."

Salesman Freed of Fraud Charge

Jury Reaches Verdict After 46 Hours When Judge Remains Firm.

The prospect of being locked in the jury room still longer after 46 hours of deliberation did not appear to the 12 men who tried Lynn Young, former bond salesman, on a charge of embezzlement, and they returned a verdict of not guilty at 11:30 Saturday in District Judge Stauffer's merely delinquent in his accounts with Zimmer & Smith, Lincoln, general agents for the General Casualty and Surety company.

The judge called the 12 men in at 10:15. Foreman George Emery reported they had stood 7 to 5 for a day and a half and showed no prospect of agreeing.

"I once knew a case," remarked the judge to the heavy-eyed jurors, "where a jury reached agreement after 72 hours of deliberation."

The men filed back to the jury room and the door was locked.

Young was an hour and a half late appearing at the court house. Judge Stauffer ordered him kept in custody until the final report of the jury.

Slayer Suspect Establishes Alibi

Man Arrested at Funeral of Woman Knife Victim, Released.

New York, March 29.—Though all of the clues followed so far have led them into blind alleys, the police investigating the murder of Mrs. Maud Bauer of Staten Island, which occurred last Tuesday within a few hundred yards of where her mother and children were waiting for her, were confident tonight that they would run down the slayer.

The funeral of Mrs. Bauer took place this afternoon from her home on Staten Island and hundreds attended the services and formed a lane outside through which the flower-strewn casket passed. On the chance that morbid fascination might pull the murderer back for a last look at his victim, plainclothesmen mingled with the crowds. They made one arrest before the services were over.

This was brought about by the curious actions of a man who was afterward identified as Edward Blier, an oil salesman of Brooklyn. This man insisted on being allowed to go into the house and see the body. When the police demanded to know his reason he turned about abruptly and vanished back into the crowd which had been parked nearby. It was a Ford sedan—the same type of car used by the man from whom Mrs. Bauer accepted what she considered was "the courtesy of the open road."

Blier was taken to police headquarters at St. George. But he convinced the police that at the time Mrs. Bauer was murdered he was in court in Brooklyn. He was released.

The police also availed themselves today of information in possession of Horatio S. Sharrott, a real estate dealer of Port Richmond, who was convinced the work of wood choppers on land of his near the scene of the murder Tuesday.

Next Southwest Trip May Include Other Industries

Stockyards Men to Be Joined by Other Tradesmen, Gardner Predicts.

"Next year we are confident the annual pilgrimage of the stockyards men to the west and southwest will become a general trade trip for Omaha wholesalers."

This statement, made Saturday by Charles Gardner, Ak-Sar-Ben leader, indicates a widened horizon for Omaha business men that is encouraging.

"All through the southwest," continued Mr. Gardner, "we found a desire to know more about Omaha trade connections. There is a splendid field there for our ambassadors of commerce, the sales forces of Omaha business houses."

"This is a territory that has been largely supplied by other cities, especially Kansas City, some of it by Denver and the larger cities of Texas, but the opportunity is there for Omaha. It is an expansion possibility that I am sure will appeal to the progressive business men of this city."

"The stockyards men have opened the door. Everywhere they have been welcomed now for three years. The welcome extends to the newspapers. In each of the cities representatives of the newspapers were present and we were given large attention on the front pages."

"Next March, I feel sure that instead of one special car, we will have three special cars, the other two being filled with representatives of Omaha, wholesale houses."

The corridor chase was witnessed by attaches of other offices, who have filed written statements with the building commission.

He was overpowered by court attaches and returned to his cell in the county jail.

A few minutes after Dixon had made his ineffectual attempt to escape from custody Emmet McCall, a companion of his, was sentenced to serve from 20 to 30 years in the state penitentiary for his confessed part in the depredations of the "baby bandit gang." McCall pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated robbery with a subpoena to appear before the court last week at the same time as Dixon. Two other convicted holdup men were given shorter sentences.
