Maid Gives a Surprise Party for Mrs. Rhoades

The adage, "a man is never a hero to his valet," is more than likely a true one, but it doesn't hold good for the fair sex. For Thursday Miss Flora Harmon, who is a maid in the home of Mrs. W. E. Rhoades, proved to her mistress that she is not only a heroine to her cook, but is also a well beloved one.

Mrs. Rhoades left her home at 830 Thursday for a shopping tour with her daughter, Mildred, returning at 1 o'clock to find a group of friends there for luncheon.

The party was given as a surprise by her Flora, who, taking every precaution to allay suspicions her honor guest might have that something social was afoot, had invited the guests after she left, warning them to "park their cars around the corner."

A perfectly appointed luncheon followed their arrival, when covers were laid for Mesdames R. C. Peters, Ford Hovey, Charles O. Talmage, Frank Carmichael, J. M. Souby, Morton Rhoades, A. T. Hewitt, Henry Rhoades and Douglas Welpton.

The guests pronounced the affair the greatest success, a more remarkable one to their minds, when they considered that the competent hostess had invited them and consummated her plans between the hours of 9:30 and 1.

Affairs Canceled.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. John U. Loomis' son, affairs for her guest, Mrs. Herbert Little of Toledo, have been canceled. hat is one of tailored simplicity and it is an ideal hat for the popular map-nish coat and skirt.

The other hat, on very much the same lines, is of black satin. Here again the brim is turned up, but in this case it is cut in the center of the front in a deep point. The trimming consists of flat, tailored bows on either side of the brim.

The hat in the upper sketch is of brown taffeta and straw trimmed with a smart bush. Below is a tailored shape of black satin, with a piquant turned-up brim.

The cloche is not dead by any means, but it is the cloche "with a difference." The small, close-fitting crown is there, but in place of a turned down brim or no brim at all, this section of the hat now rolls away from the face either in front only or in front and on the sides. Frequently the brim is slashed at the sides and pointed in front. This gives a three-cornered effect on the manner of a tricorne.

The sketches today show charming examples of small hats with brims turning up in front.

The small hat at the top is in the popular coca brown shade and achieves variety by having its crown of taffeta and its brim of straw. The trimming indicates the adaptability for a tailored suit—a smart brush on one side. The whole effect of this

Children Wanted in Maccabee Pageant

Children between the ages of 8 and 12 who would like to take part in the anniversary pageant to be given on May 8 by the Ladies of the Maccabees are invited to be at the auditorium of the Castle hotel Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Della M. Hall, state commander, and Mrs. Little of Port Huron, Mich., deputy supreme commander, will be present to explain the pageant and register children who will appear in it. Between 100 and 150 children are needed.

About 1,000 women will take part in the event, which is to be given May 8 at the City Auditorium. It is a repetition of a pageant given last year at Los Angeles. A dancing instructor will train the children in their parts.

The simply tailored suit is making its appearance daily in greater numbers. Two very smart young women wore tailcoats of diverse fabrics, one being light gray with a green pin stripe, and the other a blue gray mixture. A subtle choker completed the former costume and a gaily printed scarf the latter. The hats were Milan cloches.

Coats seen on the avenue also stressed the decorative back effect by means of a circular ripple of the fabric falling from the left shoulder to the right hip. A small lynx collar

Love Is Devotion to Another

by Martha Allen

"We are six girls between 20 and 24 and we meet once a week to discuss the problems which puzzle and interest us. Last night we had quite a heated discussion on love. Two of the girls thought it was largely physical, one said it was emotion covered over by a cloud of romance, the fourth insisted that it is 'what makes the world go 'round' and keeps this globe populated, and the fifth said it was the maternal or fatherly instinct plus a longing for a companion.

"What is it?"

—Six Girls Who Want to Know.

There is really a sharp dividing line between real love and that which often passes muster as love. Any devotion that includes selfishness, jealousy, resentment, bitterness, fear or cruelty is not love—but desire. True love gives—it does not brutally, or whimperingly, demand. So when two people really love each other each is more intent on the happiness of the other than on his own.

To be jealous is not to have complete faith. To resent is to be bitterly inclined to demand what is due rather than to offer more than is asked. Bitterness and cruelty are expressions of hate instead of love. And fear is another expression of doubt. Love is a pure affection so devoted and understanding that it finds completion of heart and mind and spirit in the union with another. Love is devotion to another—not to self.

Leap Year License.

Dear Miss Allen: We are two high school chums of 14. Several weeks ago we got acquainted with some basketball players. Two of them seemed to like us awfully well and we liked them, but they do not know our names, but we know theirs. Now, we would like to know whether or not it would be proper to write to them, since this is leap year. We can't decide whether to or not, as we do not want to cheapen ourselves in their eyes.

Everyone says it is not proper to let boys kiss you, but we were out one night and the boys wanted to kiss us. We would not let them. Now they will hardly more than speak to us. They say we are too particular. Answer soon, because we are very anxious to know. Thanking you in advance we are

CISSIE AND PATTY.

It is fun to joke about leap year, but, after all, it offers no license to be undulylike. If the boys are really interested in you they already know your names. It would be improper for you to write to them.

You are well rid of the boys who want to go with you for kisses. This is not a very strong thread upon which to swing a friendship. Anyone can give a kiss and capture a beau for the evening, but what kind of a beau would he be? And would nice boys care to go with girls who had so cheapened themselves? You would find the better boys hardly speaking

Neckwear, Gray But Not Drab.

The heralded return of lingerie collar and cuff effects is confirmed by many smart costumes. Further a novel note results from the substitution of gray for all white or even ecru neckwear. Several women past their first youth have sponsored this combination at Palm Beach.

In one instance the dress was a navy coat type with embroidered batiste and lace collar of gray which followed the surplus line to the waist. In another instance the frock was black satin with a bertha of gray lace and undersleeves of the same, the lace combining Valenciennes and Cluny dipped gray.

Not only in the Southlands which offer such a tremendous advantage in getting behind the scenes before the curtain rises on spring, but from Paris as well, come reports that more and more women favor the lingerie touch. Dressmakers not infrequently make undersleeves and collars of dainty laces and batiste as part of the frocks, but none the less they are important for accessory inspiration since they may be made separately. Alencon and Valenciennes laces, embroidered batiste, nets and ribbons are employed along with several other new materials.

There is, in neckwear as in everything else, a tendency toward tailored lines. Two-tier Peter Pan collars bound in contrasting color are an acknowledgment of this tendency, and even marquisette is made in the approved and so-called boyish line. Orange is never in questionable taste, should any one be bewildered by the many neckwear offerings. Generally speaking, a popular note is struck in ribbon bindings of contrasting color. Even the Buster Brown collar is not exempt from this treatment.

Make a Cedar Chest.

If you have no cedar chest for your furs when spring comes you can improvise one very nicely. Take any light wooden container with a close fitting cover, such as an old fashioned trunk or lined box. Build this out thoroughly and let dry in the open air. Now take some clean newspapers and a generous quantity of freshly made, cooked paste which contains borax or alum. A teaspoonful of either borax or alum for a pint of paste will be sufficient.

Line the box with the paper, fitting snugly at the corners and leaving an edge to curl up. Leave open to dry. Get some cedar chips or shavings and put into a loose cheesecloth bag; or if you cannot get these, get some storax and put in for you his empty cedar cigar boxes. Break these up. Take out the nails and put in the bottom of your cedar chest.

"Man Master of His Destiny"

Theological Society Lectures by CLAUD L. WATSON National Lecturer for the American Section Theological Society Sunday, April 13, 8 P. M. New Theological Hall, 201 Arthur Bldg., 210 S. 18th St.

Man is not the helpless victim of chance forces, neither is he at the mercy of a capricious and unjust God. God's plan is one wherein absolute justice reigns. Today is what it is because of what we did yesterday. Tomorrow will express the sum total of both. For "Whatever a Man Soweth, That Shall He Also Reap." Both in this life and the life beyond the grave. Public Invited Admission Free Collection

"Good News About Man"

The story of the Garden of Eden, a crude and primitive interpretation, is still a determining influence in much of the world's thinking about the nature of man.

The Puritan idea that human nature is essentially evil, and the theological idea that man is an alien from God, remain in the minds of millions.

To a world that has long fostered dark and degrading thoughts about the nature of man, Christian Liberalism brings glorious tidings concerning our humanity.

These tidings Rev. Ralph E. Bailey will present in the sermon, "Good News About Man," to be given at the First Unitarian Church, 3114 Harney street, Sunday, at 11 a. m.

This message will be the fifth of a series of discussions of the timely subject: "The Good News of Liberal Christianity."
