Changing Government. In 1,000 Years, Maybe. A World of Mystery. Mr. Mellon No Quitter. By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The world goes along quietly for awhile, then suddenly everything whirls around like the changes in the kaleidoscope.

The king of Denmark has just requested a socialist-labor leader, T. Stauning, to form a new cabinet.

In England, George, cousin of the Danish king, has a labor leader running his cabinet.

You know the kind of lively administration they have off in northern Russia.

And down to the southeast in Italy, they have a powerful man with an iron jaw, Mussolini, running both king and the country, knocking socialism and union labor on the head.

The house committee on island affairs proposes to give the Philippines their freedom—government by themselves, ownership and control of their country in 1950—26 years hence.

Many things will happen between now and 1950, so let it go at that, liberty in 26 years.

But whoever in that congressional committee imagines that a nation three-quarters barbarous, 90 per cent steeped in deepest superstition, can get mentally in shape to govern itself in 26 years, doesn't know much about the slow process of civilization.

The kind of people that live in this country have been trying to govern themselves for 2,000 years. And look at us now with our oil scandal, and a government in which a few, keen and prosperous, let little people know what they may or may not do.

If you think it takes only a short time to learn self-government yourself, look at Egypt. The British empire recently said to the Egyptians, "go and govern yourselves." A careful observer reports that Egypt is going downhill, toward the old listless poverty and shiftlessness with frightful rapidity. Cairo streets are dirty, hotels are closing, the natives express their patriotism by insulting foreigners that come to spend money. Self-government is not so easily learned.

The Philippines will know, perhaps, how to govern themselves efficiently and thoroughly, 1,000 years from now—the people of the United States perhaps in half that time.

This is a world of mysteries. We send messages by electricity, and we don't know what electricity is—only what it does. We send radio music and messages through the air without wires and say it goes through the ether. We don't know what ether is, and cannot even prove that it exists.

Now Dr. Banting, a brilliant young scientist who discovered insulin, the cure for diabetes, says that having discovered it, he is doing his very best to find out what it is. One thing is sure, it is an expensive product.

Pure insulin, enough to make a nice little pile on a 25-cent piece, would cost $500,000.

In our home politics, the important question is what will Mr. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, do? This country in its finances needs his knowledge, skill and determination.

President Harding made mistakes, very likely the angels do sometimes, but he made up for several of them in securing for secretary of the treasury a man as able as Mr. Mellon.

It would be a bad thing for this country, for those that have money, and for the workers that are trying to get it, if Mr. Mellon should be driven out by unjust criticism.

Fortunately, he is an individual not inclined to quit.

Delegations of workmen from a Standard Oil plant in New Jersey calling on John D. Rockefeller, Jr., inviting him to dine, find him laid up with a cold.

Many great doctors in Europe would say to Mr. Rockefeller under such conditions, "take good red wine with your meal every day. Drink it very much diluted with water during the meal, then take one glass of good Bordeaux or Burgundy afterwards. Thus you will build up a new red blood, supply your system with iron and tannin and gain strength rapidly."

However, over here, we know that is heresy and that you should look for iron, tannin and good red blood in the ice water pitcher.

Here's a small piece of news, rather cheerful amid the gloom. It is one of the little chapters in man's fight against the only enemy that he really has—old Nature.

Out in the ocean, off Cape Race, is a gigantic iceberg, more than a mile long, towering 100 feet in the air. To bump it would mean destruction to any ship.

In old days men would have said, "let us pray that no unfortunate ship will strike that fearful iceberg."

Praying is good, especially when accompanied by deeds. Now this government sends the revenue cutter Modoc, to trail along beside that iceberg as it moves slowly and majestically to its melting place near the equator. And, as the big iceberg moves, the little cutter broadcasts warnings, telling ships to keep away. That's a sign of civilization.

Youth Goes on Trial in Death of Boyhood Pal

Companions to Tell of Threat Made by Victim, Firm Friend Two Days Before.

Chicago, April 15.—A golden dawn and Pythian friendship turned to black hate.

Hearing the same name, though un-related, Alan and Roland McCarthy were chums since childhood. Through the "teen" years when friendships are most susceptible to breach, Alan and Roland remained pals.

Then suddenly—so it seems to the mothers of the two boys—the bonds were broken.

No more dramatic way of announcing the feud, which ended in the death of Roland two months ago, could have been chosen than the threat which their companions are to tell on the witness stand tomorrow.

Predicted Slaying, Claim.

"We are going to put witnesses on the stand to back up Alan's testimony that the night before the tragedy, Roland declared before 50 people in a restaurant that 'one of them was to die the following day,'" the attorneys for the defense declared today.

The prosecution will have a witness to the shooting, it was intimated, who will say:

"When Rolfe walked toward Alan he said 'This is going to be the end of one of us right now. Let's settle it.' Then Alan fired."

The plea of Alan McCarthy, the youthful slayer, will be self-defense.

"They were the best pals in the world," said Mrs. McCarthy, mother of the slain boy. "Two days before the tragedy they were friends."

Cause of Quarrel Hidden.

Why they quarrelled—whether their friendship brought them to love the same girl and thus replace itself with jealousy and hatred, or not—it has not been revealed.

"Alan had been trying for months to break off with Roland," said Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, mother of the 16-year-old slayer.

"But it seemed to be no use. Despite mine and his father's efforts, Roland absolutely controlled my boy."

The youthful slayer's father, a prominent Chicago attorney, is in charge of his son's defense.

The scene of slaying was a pool-room which both boys frequented. A

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

How Lillian Took the Situation in Hand.

Lillian's ring! At the grateful sound I stopped in my hurried footsteps for a little space of thanks and hurried into the living room, where I pressed the button which opened the outside apartment door.

Mrs. Marks was no longer talking. The sudden ring just as she was glibly assuring the detective at the door that the bell was out of order, evidently had nonplussed even her incident assurance for a second, and the detective was taking advantage of the fact to bluster.

"I thought so," he said rancorously. "You've been lying to me all the time. Now you open this door, and let me in to see this Mrs. Graham, or I'll know the reason why."

"Oh, see what a long fall our cat's got!" was the only answer she vouchsafed him, and fearing that the thing would develop into a wordy brawl which would attract the attention of the other tenants, I stepped into the hall.

"Thank you, Mrs. Marks, for answering the door," I said, cordially, and then I turned to the man, and swept his person with a coolly inquiring look.

"Aren't you the man who wished me to patronize your luggage delivery man in the harbor?" I queried distantly. "I cannot imagine what you are doing here."

"Don't you?" he asked. "Well, do you want me to tell you out here in the hall or will you let me in?"

There was a distinct threat in his voice, and I saw that he counted up on my probable hatred of a scene. Mrs. Marks thrust her face past mine close to the door.

"Don't you let the likes of him bluff you, dearie," she advised, and about to let loose a volley of abuse at him when I caught her arm. Lillian, bag in hand, had just come into sight around the bend of the stairs. This was what I had been waiting for. Lillian had most of the threads of the affair in her capable hands. I would turn this particular snarl over to her. With a little welcoming smile I accented her.

"There is someone here, Lillian, whom I think you wish to see." I said, trying to make my voice and demeanor that of a school teacher turning a refractory boy over to the principal.

She set down her bag and surveyed the man from head to foot with a coolly insolent glance.

"Ah! yes," she said. "The gentleman who has been taking such an interest in me lately. How fortunate that he should call just now. Thank you, Madge," as I swung open the door into the apartment. "Won't

Missouri Encroaches on Railroad Near Barney

Peru, Neb., April 15.—Missouri river is again giving the Burlington railway trouble at a point about seven miles north of here near a small town called Barney.

Wynona and Lincoln officials and General Superintendent Lyman of the railway visited the place to determine what action will be taken to save or repair the line. When the road was built it was miles from the river, but the stream has been cutting closer continually and now has the railway up against a steep bank in the west half of the town. A watchman is kept continually on duty at the place by the railway. Some consideration has been given a plan to open the tracks to the west over the bluff, but this would entail a heavy grading proposition and would be costly.

Why Girls With Yellow Teeth Are Unpopular

No girl with yellow-stained teeth can be popular—no matter how attractive she may be otherwise. A girl may have a pretty face or a pleasant personality—yet if her teeth have a yellowish look she cannot be truly charming to men.

Men admire personal daintiness in a woman more than the clothes she wears. Notice the girl with pearly white teeth—she has a charm and attractiveness that is always lacking in the girl with yellowish teeth.

Yet there are still many girls with dull, dingy teeth who have not found out that teeth stains and discolorations can be completely removed by using a new scientific treatment recently perfected. This marvelous discovery is known as Bleachodont Combination. Contains a mild liquid which quickly softens and loosens the hardened stains which cling to the teeth so that they can be gently removed by the special kind of paste included in the treatment. Once the stains have vanished Bleachodont Combination will prevent the formation of future stains and keep the teeth beautifully white always.

This wonderful treatment will completely clean the teeth, does not affect the enamel, and its mild ingredients are especially combined to act only on surface stains. Men always admire sparkling white teeth. Get this Bleachodont Combination (containing both liquid and paste) today. Small cost. For sale at all good drug stores.

Japanese Yen Establish New Low Price for Year

New York, April 15.—Moving counter to the general trend of foreign exchange, Japanese yen were depressed today, establishment of a new low price for the year at 41.10 cents representing a decline of 40 points.
