

Rich Farmer in Heart Balm Suit

Asked for $50,000 to Repair Torn Heart of Humboldt Contractor.

Falls City, Neb., April 17.—Charging alienation of his wife's affections, William C. Schmeisel, 56, Humboldt contractor, filed suit for $50,000 damages against Harvick W. Harding, prominent auctioneer and livestock breeder of Richardson county, in the district court late this afternoon. Harding has left the county, so Schmeisel was granted an attachment of $15,000 against Harding's property in the county without being required to give bond. The Schmeisels were married in Falls City in 1904 and were separated in June, 1920, when Schmeisel charges, in his petition, he discovered his wife's alleged intimate relations with Harding. According to Schmeisel, Harding left for Colorado several months ago to avoid the court summons. Harding has been a resident of the county for about 40 years and is numbered among the wealthiest farmers and stockmen of this vicinity. He is about 65 years old, while Mrs. Schmeisel is about 40. Mrs. Schmeisel's present whereabouts is unknown. The Schmeisels have three children, two sons and a daughter.

Nebraska U Co-Eds' Ire Aroused Over Threat of Male Boycott

Editor of the school paper to find out who wrote the article, and when they were unable to find out, they set down and wrote replies. Two were printed Wednesday morning that made the men's hair stand on end.

Both sides are vying up, not with arms, but with pen and typewriter. It all started Tuesday when the Daily Nebraskan, a University publication, published in its student opinion column a letter from "A Fraternity Man." Some very uncomplimentary things were said. The fraternity man went so far as to say that co-ed girls were "Unappreciative of the attention given them by the men," that they were "Poor dumb creatures" and he implored the rest of the fraternity to "Quit spoiling them." He told of the habit of venting flippers on all "dates." He said "Are the girls so weak they are unable to walk? Are they too proud to ride on the street car to a dance? It seems so!" That day the co-eds besieged the editor of the school paper to find out who wrote the article, and when they were unable to find out, they set down and wrote replies. Two were printed Wednesday morning that made the men's hair stand on end.

"There as a constant cry for the good old-fashioned girl, but where is the gallant Sir Galahad of today. In these modern times 'tis eye for eye and tooth for tooth." It's an outbreak of an undercurrent that has been going around the campus for months. There is talk of boycotting girls, boycotting rented rooms, and this and that. Many letters have been turned in by both men and women that the editor had to put up a sign "No letters longer than 200 words."

SLAYER ASKS TO BE HANGED

Chicago, April 17.—A plea that he be hanged was entered by Sam Rosen, a tailor, arraigned today for slaying his wife. "I plead guilty," he answered, when the indictment was read. "Do you understand that I can sentence you to hang? Judge Caverly asked. "It doesn't worry me," Rosen said. "In fact, I want to be hanged." Rosen declared that he had killed his wife and the mother of his two children because she had been unfaithful to him. "I would rather see her dead than blacken the name of my children," he said, "but now that she is dead, I have nothing to live for."

The confession, Chief Grady said, was obtained after 20 hours of grilling, following Bargfrede's arrest.

Daylight Bandits Get $50,000 Cash

"Stop Your Kidding," Policeman Tells Witness of Holdup.

St. Paul, Minn., April 17.—Three daylight bandits, in the presence of a score of citizens, with a police posse less than 100 rods away, held up two mail clerks on a Great Western train at South St. Paul today and took four mail bags, one of which is believed to contain a sum of money being sent here for its pay roll, due today. The train was standing in the South St. Paul station and a clerk and a guard were unloading mail from the car to a truck. A witness of the hold-up ran to a policeman and told him of the robbery, but the officer said "Stop your kidding" and did not investigate. The bandits fled in a motor car which they abandoned outside the Minneapolis city limits. Postal authorities estimated the loss at $50,000.

"On With Kissing," Accedes Omaha Doctor; Science Frowns, Love Wins

The city health department is being rocked by a fierce controversy. It is all over what was once considered quite an innocent thing—a kiss.

Dr. A. R. Pisto is against kissing except in very exceptional cases. In some cases it may be quite an exhilarating thing, he admits, but often it is a dangerous occupation, this kissing. Unlike New York physicians who are also in the throes of a discussion on this weighty matter, Dr. Pisto can see no difference between a kiss in the morning and a kiss in the afternoon or evening. "Kissing is dangerous at any time and in more ways than one," avowed the city health commissioner. "It may lead some unsuspecting man to matrimony, for example. And think of the helpless children who can't do a thing about it when people want to kiss them. At least spare the children, you know." The controversy started, however, when Dr. P. A. Redback rose to the defense of kissing. "If there is any harm in kissing it is overcome by the many benefits," said Dr. Redback. "I'm for the kiss, first, last and all the time." But the point is that science begins to look foolish the minute it begins trying to interfere with customary practices. "It has been going on for a million years and will continue a million more," continued Dr. Redback. "Kisses are a token of love, and when it comes to love science might just as well crawl into a hole and hibernate. Science will never have to pass on such a matter as this, because, as well, what would be the use of it? On with the kiss!" Cheers, principally feminine cheers, marked the close of Dr. Redback's oration.

BRITISH NOTE GETS NO REPLY

Washington, April 17.—The recent note from Premier Ramsay MacDonald, outlining the British government's attitude toward the Dawes reparations report, is not considered by State department officials as calling for a reply, it was learned here today. In explaining why the British communication had not been answered, officials fell back on the usual explanation that the United States is not represented on the reparations commission nor officially in the Dawes committee, and consequently is not a party to the reparations negotiations.

Banked Fires Draw No Interest—

As night comes and industry is stilled, the demand for electric energy decreases. As the great part of the populace sleeps, the fires under the mammoth boilers at the power plant are "banked."

It would be a great financial saving, indeed, if the fires could be "killed" every night.

Banked fires draw no interest!

However, it would be costly to the people. They would be the ones who would suffer. Electricity must be ready to serve every minute of the night, as well as during the day.

It must meet many uses and emergencies in the home, in hospitals and other places.

Enough fire is kept always under the boilers to meet all demands for emergencies for our company is anxious to maintain our present high standard of service at all times.
