The Annapolis academy's new swimming pool will be the scene of the Olympic trials, according to an unofficial announcement.

The construction of duck pin or candle pin alleys as well as regular bowling drives is a difficult task. In Boston where the big national candle pin tourney is being rolled on specially constructed alleys big scores are anticipated. The alleys are made from kiln dried maple and there are 3159 lineal feet of bed stock in each of the 14 alleys. Each strip of maple is one inch wide and three inches deep and neatly grooved.

LUIS LACEY JOINS BRITISH POLO FOUR

New York, April 18.—Luis L. Lacey, who played back on the brilliant Argentine federation four that captured the American open polo championship in 1922, will be a member of the British team which will seek to lift the historic Hurlingham cup from the United States in a series of matches here next September.

This was learned Friday when the United States Polo association was advised Lacey would be a candidate for the British team. His playing will strengthen greatly Britain's prospects of triumph. This year's matches will decide leadership in the series as well as possession of the trophy. Britain and America each have won the cup four times since 1886, this country's riders bringing it back from England in 1921 when the last matches were contested.

COAST GOLFER MAKES RECORD

Pasadena, Cal., April 18.—Fred Wright of Pasadena, member of the international Walker cup team, Friday won his match from W. W. Campbell of Los Angeles in the Southern California championship tournament on Annandale course here at the twenty-sixth hole by sinking a 25-foot putt for a birdie two. The combination was said by experts in the gallery to be a record for match play in the United States.

J. J. McHugh of San Francisco had to carry his opponent, Frank Godchaux of New Orleans, to the twentieth hole to beat him.

JIM CORBETT TO APPEAR HERE

James J. Corbett, who at one time held the world's heavyweight boxing title for a period of five years, will be a visitor in Omaha the week of April 27.

"Gentleman Jim," as he was known in the ring, laid aside the gloves some years back and decided to take a fling at vaudeville.

Last week Corbett signed up with the Keith booking offices for a short tour of the Orpheum circuit. Variety fans claim Corpett is as much of a hit in the two-a-day as he was in the ring. He will appear at the local Orpheum the week after next.

NIAGARA FALLS WINS PIN MEET

Indianapolis was second with 2,906, and New Philadelphia, O., third with 2,836. The scores represent a three-game total for a five-man team.

Sioux City, Ia., with 2,789; Vancouver, B. C., 2,779; Chicago, 2,759; Green Bay, Wis., 2,754; Sheboygan, Wis., 2,720 and New York City, 2,716, finished in that order.

Ireland to Compete in Olympic Football

Paris, April 18.—Ireland's trouble, and internal political affairs have had a repercussion in the French Olympic committee. When the drawings for the association football matches were made it was found that two entries each in legal form had been received from Erin, one of them from a federation under the free state and the other from the Irish football federation affiliated with the English amateur football associations.

The entry from the Irish free state was finally accepted after a discussion, the length of which caused the Irish delegate, MacDevit, some surprise which he expressed in the richest brogue:

"It is a matter which should be settled in one minute; there's only one Ireland."

Rhode Island Wins, Loses in Rifle Shoot

Kingston, R. I., April 18.—Rhode Island state won from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the State college of Washington and was defeated by South Dakota State college in the intercollegiate R. O. ## The SPORTLIGHT by Grantland Rice

To a Caddie.

We pay you for taking the bag,
For finding a ball that is lost;
Thus do you get your swag,
So do you earn your cost.

But how do you get your pay
For the terrible sights you see—
The duffer's body sway,
The foozle from the tee?

The pain of the human soul
That follows the shoulder dip;
The 9 on a par 4 hole,
The putt that hangs on the tip?

Trailing the slice and smear,
With groans from the human vault,
How does it feel to hear
His foozles were all your fault?

The Main Test.

Outside of the Olympic games your Uncle Samuel will be called on this summer to defend the polo cup, the Walker cup at golf and the Davis cup at tennis.

As far as one can figure in advance, these three cups should be upon the home shelf when the last returns are in next September. What with Milburn, Hitchcock, Tilden, Johnston, Richards, Bobby Jones and others on hand, defending talent is of an unusually high order.

There will be more trouble in the Olympics.

Osborne, Landon and others should take care of the high jump, Hubbard and Gourdin of the broad jump, Hills of the shot-put, Tootell of the hammer throw. And from Paddock, Murchison and others the sprinting advantage should be slightly in this direction.

But there will be no such advantage in all distances from the half-time to the marathon, where the Finns and British are at their best.

The U. S. of A. goes in for training a little more seriously than most other nations, especially in regard to the banishment of alcohol and nicotine for its athletes, yet in the longer distances there is always less chance for success. And it is over the longer route that stamina and condition count for more than anything else.

A Few Veterans.

Tris Speaker batted .380 last season, with Eddie Collins at .360 and Ty Cobb at .340. Zack Wheat finished at .375, with Casey Stengel at .339 and Stuffy McInnis at .315.

These eminent students in the College of Swat have been using their batting eyes between 15 and 19 years. How much longer will the old candlepower hold out? How many of them will be in the .300 class by another October? It's a good bet that five of the six will again make the grade. Cobb has drawn 18 consecutive .300 or better years.

Speaker in his 16th season had .350 and Cobb in his 17th had .401. If this isn't holding on all grips might as well be broken.

From the old Athletic infield Collins and McInnis remain in the trade. They started together 16 years ago. Their average last season, taking both, was .338. And both today look as if they had stepped out of high school about two years ago. There is something about this national frolic that leans in the direction of eternal youth.

With Apologies.

These are the saddest of life's many phrases:

"And then I took three putts."

The sentence that crushes and withers and dazes—

"And then I took three putts."

The drive of a Hagen may travel far sailing,
The keen iron respond to the Sarazen flailing,
But, oh, what a flop when there follows this wailing:
"And then I took three putts."

The old order continues to change. Not so long ago Tad Jones, Yale coach, was the guest of honor at the Harvard club in New York, where felicitations were tossed back and forth in great profusion. After all, why should intercollegiate sport be a life and death struggle, when the main idea is body building and character building and recreation? And if this isn't the main idea, why intercollegiate sport?

"If He Were My Son."

We reported a day or two back Fielding H. Yost's worthy attachment to the idea of character building for the boy.

He has just issued a pamphlet, "If He Were My Son," from which the following is taken:

"If he were my son I would want him to be trustworthy and honest; I would want him to be independent, courageous and self-reliant; I would want him to be fair in all things, unselfish and loyal; I would want him to be possessed of a keen and alert mind, quick to observe and grasp any situation and to decide how it could best be met, and I would want him to have a strong, agile and sound body.

"I select these qualifications, not through any abstract philanthropic ideals, but because I am convinced that all worth-while and lasting success is based on honest, courageous and loyal service to one's fellow men. I make no pretense that I would want my son to get less than the best possible out of life for himself. The route to this lies through unselfishness and service. I know that whatever he does to benefit others will in the end benefit him more.

"To achieve that which is worth while in life my son must be fair in all his dealings, truthful in all that he says, honorable in all that he does. Every lie that he tells, every deception that he practices, defeats the very ends that he is trying to achieve. A falsehood is a step away from success, a loss of ground that must be recovered. For my son I ask also the development of the trait of acquisitiveness, but with a fine discrimination as to what is worth acquiring and what is not. To my mind, nothing is worth having that cannot be acquired fairly and decently, with strict observance of the rules of the game. Just as I would not get any satisfaction from winning a football game in which my team had to resort to unsportsman-like conduct of any sort, so for my son I would not seek the success that is such in name only, because it would not have been properly earned."

The main argument regarding Harry Wills' future seems to be around the condition of his hands. If he can thump Bartley Madden's head and elbows for a number of minutes without cracking anything, Wills can be officially o. k.'d in this respect, at least.

Grandstand at Birmingham, Ala., is equipped with electric fans to protect spectators from dust. Alabama diamonds are so dusty that you have to stop at dry cleaners on your way home.

Electric fans is grand idea for everybody except guys in bleachers, who collect more dust than brother and sister shooting craps on the parlor rug. Somebody should visit bleacherites between innings and brush them off with a broom.

Players do not need fans to dust them off. That accident is committed with pleasing regularity by fast-ball pitchers.

Electric fans would be elegant innovation for grandstands at big league parks. If you sat next to cigar smoker you would have your eyes full of ashes in no time.

Installation of fans would also deal death-blow to soft drink concessions. And with cooling artificial zephyrs wafted from all directions, nobody would buy ice cream cones.

One fan might be installed in batter's box for convenience of umpires. It is tough assignment for aged ump to bend down and dust off home plate with dilapidated whisk broom three or four times an inning.

But, after all, electric fans at ball game is nothing new. When umpire makes decision conflicting with foreign policy of home team, many a fan acts like he was charged with electricity.

Temporary stands to assure seats for 40,000 people will be erected at Meadow Brook field in anticipation of large gatherings for the international Challenge Cup games with the Englishmen on the Westbury (L. I.) grounds September 9, 10, and if necessary 13.

The relay race between the United States Olympic games team and the British Empire quartet will take place at the famous Stamford Bridge grounds, London, on July 19. The relays will be between teams of four a-side at 440 yards, one, two and four miles. Other contests will also be staged between the specialists of this country and Great Britain.

HUSKY CREW TO ROW ON HUDSON

Seattle, Wash., April 18.—The University of Washington will not be represented in the Olympic tryouts on the Schuylkill river at Philadelphia by a crew this year, but will send two shells east to row on the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14, it was definitely decided by athletic authorities of the university.

The decision was reached when Darwin Meisnest, graduate manager, received word from the American Rowing association that Yale and Princeton universities would not compete in the American Henley May 2 on the Schuylkill, where it had been hoped the Husky eight could compete against its former coach, Ed Leader, now teaching rowing at Yale.

The two Washington crews will consist of the varsity eight, champions of the United States, who will defend their honors on the Hudson, and a junior varsity shell which will race in the junior regatta.

TURKEY SELECTS OLYMPIC TEAM

Constantinople, April 18.—Three students of Robert college, the American educational institution in Constantinople have been selected as members of the Turkish team for the Olympic games.
