

Big Pictures of Future to Have Religious Theme

Effort May Be Made to Depict Life of Christ, Says Adolph Zukor, Here Between Trains.

The new trend of big motion picture production is toward the religious, and many of the important pictures of the next year or so will have as a basic religious theme.

So declared Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, who with a dozen other officials of the corporation, passed through Omaha Thursday morning bound for San Francisco.

That an effort to depict the life of Christ on the screen may be made by his corporation was not denied by Zukor, who admitted that in addition to "The Ten Commandments," recently completed and well received, the production of two other religious pictures are being considered.

Asked concerning business conditions, Zukor said a really bad period started in October and lasted until March 1, but since then things have "picked up wonderfully."

In the party, besides Zukor, were the following Lasky officials: S. R. Leet, general manager; Emil Shauer, assistant treasurer and manager of the foreign department; John D. Clark, division sales manager; Phil Reisman, general manager of the Canadian branches and a former Omahan; Melville A. Shauer, advertising sales manager; Charles E. McCarthy, publicity manager; A. N. Botaford, general advertising manager; John W. Hicks, Australian branch manager; Myron H. Lewis, A. A. Dillenbeck and G. B. J. Frawley of the New York Times.

They have been attending Lasky conventions in New York and Chicago, and will attend one in San Francisco on their arrival there.

A radio receiving set installed in their special Pullman has enabled them to hear concerts from many stations during their westward trip, and they "attended" Easter services broadcast from Detroit, they said.

Firebug Goes to Court and Confesses His Crime

Alma, Neb., April 24.—Orpheus D. Paxton of Mascot, Neb., appeared in district court voluntarily, and asked to be arrested for the crime of arson, for the burning of his store and contents, on the second day of September, 1922, for the purpose of obtaining the insurance thereon from the Minneapolis Fire and Marine Insurance company. Complaint and information were filed. Paxton pleaded guilty and owing to the fact that there was some question about him mentally and owing to the condition of his family, sentence was deferred for two years, on condition that he care for his family and reimburse the insurance company for the loss sustained.

Blue River Stocked.

Beatrice, Neb., April 24.—Garret Warden Koster sent a carload of fish to Beatrice the first of the week to be distributed in the water of the Blue river. The consignment consisted of channel cat, crappie, ring perch and other varieties. Members of the Isaak Walton club of this city were instrumental in bringing the shipment to Beatrice.

Loup to Be Curbed.

Columbus, Neb., April 24.—An order for river jetties to be installed in the Loup river upstream from the Fluvay and fill put in last fall to keep the river from cutting into Barnum creek, will be placed by supervisors.

DULL HAIR CAN BE MADE CHARMING

Nowadays dull, lifeless hair is inexcusable in any woman who cares about her appearance. The soft, lustrous look that is so attractively and easily brought to any hair, if the right treatment is provided. Here is a simple way:

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can easily be made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lotion that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a softness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.

Fat That Shows Soon Disappears

Prominent fat that comes and stays here it is not needed is a burden, a hindrance to activity, a curb upon pleasure. You can take it off each meal and as medicine, one Marsella Prescription Tablet. These little tablets are as effective and harmless as the famous prescription from which they take their name. Buy and try a box today. All druggists the world over sell them direct from Marsella Co., 413 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. You can thus say goodbye to dieting, exercise and fat.

What's Best for a Bad Stomach?

Nine-tenths of all stomach troubles—indigestion, sourness, gas, pain, heartburn, etc., are caused by an excess of acid in the stomach. Artificial digestants, such as peptone, are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try taking a few Acid Stomach Tablets. This instantly neutralizes the acid that has upset your stomach and restores a spoonful of the natural state of pure Bismarcked Magnesia, taken with a little water. This instantly restores the stomach and stops the pain and discomfort and your food digests as nature intended. For quick positive relief from Acid Stomach.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

The Reason Judge Was Surely For Pleased About Dicky.

No sooner had I hung up the receiver after talking to Dicky than I reached it down again. I had suddenly remembered what had entirely slipped my mind in my plans for the morning—that my car was still at Mrs. Bird's house in Flushing, and that I must go there and get it before calling at the Durkeses or going to the farm. But I had acquiesced in Dicky's announcement that he would meet me at Bridgehampton when the late train got in. I must try to get him back on the wire if possible and tell him of the change in my plans.

But getting Dicky back was a task more easily conceived than executed. I did not know the number from which he was phoning, and I had been too proud to remind him of the oversight—and for several minutes I argued futilely, first, with a sleep operator, and then with a bored supervisor, only to be told with finality at last that "it is impossible, Maddum, to trace your call."

Fatigued and irritated, I hung up the receiver, and then turned my anger on myself as I realized that my effort had been a needless one. With any luck at all, I could get to Flushing on an early train, drive across the island to the Durkeses at Marvin, lunch comfortably there and drive out to the farm in the afternoon, arriving there a good hour before Dicky should start for the train.

Deep in my heart, however, I acknowledged that the reason I had given to myself for trying to get Dicky on the telephone again was the sheerest camouflage. The memory of the queer little sound in the telephone which had followed his good-by still tingled in my consciousness.

With the idiotic inconsistency of womanhood, I suddenly felt as if the answer to that question were the most important thing in the world to me, that if it were affirmative it dwarfed to comparative insignificance the incidents in which Mollie Fawcett had figured and which had caused me such mental anguish.

I could never know, now, I told myself, with a sure knowledge of my Peter Pan's psychology, born of experience of his varying moods and tempers. If I could have caught him back upon the telephone, while still his repentant fit was upon him, he might have repeated the boyish endearment. But by the morrow—with a self-ridiculing little shiver, I visualized a possible question, "Dicky, did you send me a kiss over the telephone last night?" and the incredulous, annoyed stare which, in all probability, would be my answer.

Suddenly I felt chill and fatigued.

sometimes I had forgotten for the few excited moments my romantic imagination had given me. Promisingly I brought water from the kitchen and got out the laundry with a flourish in the grate that there might be no danger of scolding predatory spirits. Then I hurriedly undressed and slipped on my nightgown and slipped on my nightgown and slipped on my nightgown.

Without awakening, she threw her arm protectively over me with a drawl, "There—there, dear," and knew that unconsciously she was smiling the radiant smile of the daughter she adored and who had been lost to her during the years of her babyhood.

With a choking remembrance of my childhood and the tender, caring hands of my little mother, so long gone from me, I buried my face in the pillow and wept silently that Lillian might not awaken, and in the possibility in tears of memory, the bitterness that had been festering in my heart.

It was not long afterward that I fell asleep, not to awaken until the alarm which I had set rang shrilly. I grabbed it from the floor-mechanic and stuffed it smotheringly to my pillow.

"Efficiency, Kipling," glared Lillian, severely, rubbing her eyes. "What do you think you're doing with that? You are not going to sleep again, if that's your little game, for you told me you had to get an early train."

"I didn't want to waken you," I retorted demurely.

"There's a detachment of marine cadets around Manhattan today who might be interested in that," she said, shaking out of bed and laying hands upon my pillow, "but I'm not interested. Come out! Out you come! We'll flip a coin to see who gets the bath first, who goes to market and who gets breakfast."

It was an old game with us, relic of our various household experiences. It fell to Lillian's lot to market, mine to prepare the breakfast. I had given her my key, and when I heard the hall door open I thought she had performed her errands with unusual haste. But the steps coming down the hall were not Lillian's, and I looked up from the gas stove to see Dicky smiling rather sheepishly at me from the doorway.
