COOLIDGE AND THE FOLKS AT HOME.

A democratic editor, whose clock stopped on the 1st of November, 1920, finds that Calvin Coolidge feels the stirring of the progressive germs within him when dealing with questions of foreign policy.

On the domestic side, Mr. Coolidge has held constantly to one purpose. He has sought to reduce the burden of taxation, to increase the efficiency of government without adding to its cost.

In domestic affairs Mr. Coolidge has held constantly to one purpose. He has sought to reduce the burden of taxation, to increase the efficiency of government without adding to its cost.

As to actual accomplishment, the president has secured the formation of an Agricultural Credit corporation, which is functioning for the relief of the wheat farmers of North Dakota.

The president has urged on congress a reconstruction of the freight rates schedule, that farmers may be helped. The matter still is before a committee, where it has rested for nearly five months.

Plans for tax reduction have been bandied about by committees and members, and no sign is yet given whether taxes will be lowered on any one.

These are only a few of the domestic matters to which the president has given attention, and which congress has set aside to wait until the great game of government by injunction be played to a finish.

The constitution of the United States prudently forbids the executive from interfering with the legislative branch in the discharge of its allotted part in the government.

Adam was the first man. Adam will repeat on the Tuesday after the first Monday of next November.

Equally, the constitution forbids the legislative to interfere with the executive. How has this been observed? A program of cabinet-smashing has been substituted for one of progressive legislation.

In his message, read to congress in December last, the president definitely and specifically pointed out subjects for consideration and legislation concerning domestic affairs.

But let truth come forth whooping—he it worst or be it best.

BONUS BILL AND PARTY POLITICS.

When the intricacy of the democratic attack on the adjusted compensation measure had finally been exposed, and its passage was certain, Senator Simmons of North Carolina graciously remarked, "There will be another chance to vote on this when senators are not held in check by a threat from the White House."

Only one purpose, and that partisan, animated them in the undertaking. They wanted to treat Coolidge as they had Harding, to send over a bill that would invite a veto.

The American Legion will present to the congress a legislative program too extensive for detailed discussion here. It is a carefully matured plan.

The object of this is clearly in view. It will be a desperate bid from the democrats for support of the soldiers in the coming campaign.

Wishing it onto Kenyon. Vice presidents are not made; they are chosen. That it is wise to choose them carefully has been amply proved on several memorable occasions.

Just now among the republicans the discussion is who will be the second man on the ticket. The voters have decided who will be the head.

So it may be with Judge Kenyon. He is following a line of work for which he has a special adaptability, and is content to serve as a judge.

Theodore Roosevelt was governor of New York and going good when he was nominated for the office of vice president at Philadelphia.

Senator Glass Castigates President headlines a democratic exchange. As the senator is a southern democrat it is very easy to see through him.

Whatever President Coolidge does about that Japanese exclusion act it will be what he believes to be the right thing to do.

Is it possible that they call them congressional blocs because there are so many wooden—but why speculate?

Adam was the first man. Adam will repeat on the Tuesday after the first Monday of next November.

We saved the world for democracy, but it seems almost impossible to save Germany from herself.

But let truth come forth whooping—he it worst or be it best.

Books and Blunders

From the Youth Column.

Liberalism and clerics in book stores have to cultivate their wits as well as a knowledge of literature if they are to serve many of their fateful or middle-headed patrons.

At another Boston book store a small boy wanted Ida's dog book. No, Mr. Librarian, I want a dog book.

All the mistakes are not on the side of the purchaser, however. It is not his fault when the "Leaves of Grass" gets tucked under the shelves with botanical treatises.

SUNNY SIDE UP

Take comfort, nor forget that sunrise never failed us yet.

A LITTLE FABLE IN RHYME.

Bill Wilkins said, "Corruption's life in politics and public life, and I'll not soil my hands a bit by taking my part in it."

So saying, Wilkins went his way and wouldn't vote election day; but hid himself from politics and in its turmoil would not mix.

The cooperations won the fight and hoisted voices clear out of sight, but shirked their tasks into Bill, and others like he.

And then Bill Wilkins cheats himself, and cooperations get the best of him; he'll get it—and 'tis what he needs—right where Miss Cora wore her beads.

Brain Leaks. Ill luck is usually founded on laziness. The man who never saved a dollar is quite sure he would do great good with a million.

When a man takes no interest in politics it is a sure sign that he has no principle in it.

Sometimes it requires a wonderful amount of bravery to admit that you are afraid to do certain things.

There are some women who destroy the appetites of their children by expressing so much fear that the tablecloth will be soiled.

The cistern into which nothing goes is easily pumped dry. The life into which no good is put never yields any good.

We never pass a yard of old-fashioned flowers that we do not long for an invitation to set dinner with the woman who takes care of them.

LISTENING IN

On the Nebraska Press.

"The man who votes in regard to his own friends, the man who votes to end a new tax in your name," declares the Auburn Republican.

Noting that Governor Bryan said the nation could best be served by making their own bread, Law, brother of the Fairbury News, says the editor will have an excellent chance to repeat the statement next November.

Don Van Dusen of the Blair Pilot asserts that the poor houses are all cluttered up with people who depend on luck to pull them out of the hole.

For years Edgar Howard let his hair grow long. Now that the women are looting their hair the Nalleg Louder wonders if Edgar will let his.

The Rochester Sun apologizes for stating that a man was fined $100 for having a still, when the fine was $100.

"Despite the jokes about the seed catalogue that find them much more interesting than the Washington News," says the Clay Center Sun.

PSYCHE. Ah, break the trammels. Weary soul of mine, And seek your freedom.

Diagnosis. "What did the oculist say about your eyes?" "Said they were beautiful, mother."
