Stays Home and Travels.
What of Mind Depletion?
Fear Is Dangerous.
Dogs, Deer, Rich Man's Son.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Mrs. Sarah Benworth Bradley, old-fashioned New England lady, celebrates her 105th birthday with 40 grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren to keep her company.

Her father was a soldier in the American revolution. She has never been more than 12 miles away from Eastford, Conn., which, unlike Los Angeles, and some other places, is smaller now than it was 75 years ago.

Only 12 miles from her own doorstep in all her life Mrs. Bradley, in her 104 years, has traveled around the sun more than 4,900,000,000 miles—to say nothing of the inconceivable distance through which the sun has dragged our earth as it flies through space.

Staying at home on this planet is like sitting still in a railroad train. You travel as you sit.

The senate accepts Mr. Mellon's proposal to cut taxes 25 per cent on incomes that are earned. That seems reasonable. The owner of an oil well or a coal mine, enjoying himself idly in Europe, is allowed to deduct "depletion" from his income tax because his oil well or mine is wearing out, becoming less valuable.

Why shouldn't a doctor or farmer or merchant charge "depletion" against his body, brain and nervous force? They are wearing out faster than the other man's mine or oil well. And what's more, the man may drop dead. The mine does not do that.

A man is accused of feeding germs of disease, diphtheria, pneumonia, etc., to his wife. The fact that she did not die will encourage individuals who say there is no power in germs.

But faith cures must not be over-joyful. The germ's power depends on the condition of the body. If you are in good condition, white corpuscles in your blood kill the disease germs. If your blood is weak it disease germs kill you.

Thousands have died of old age with all sorts of germs, including incipient cancers inside of them. They had health enough to keep the diseases down. Others die in infancy, killed by the same germs. Their blood is weak.

This doesn't mean that faith cures are worthless. The conquest of disease means health. Cheerfulness is an important part of health. Faith cures often bring cheerfulness with them, for it's cheering to believe that nothing can hurt you.

Baring, who confesses that he fed the poison and germs of disease to his wife, is described as a "timid, nervous, weak individual."

Cowardice is dangerous—to itself and others. More murders have been committed through cowardice than any other cause. The under-sized, timid, half-nourished criminal shoots, not that he wants to kill, but because he is afraid.

Miss Newel of Bedford Hills has a preserve in which she keeps deer. Dogs broke into the preserve, killed and ate part of three valuable deer and are probably ill from eating too much fresh meat.

If they were allowed to spend their lives in the enclosure eating deer at their leisure, the dogs would all die of the mange. That incident in the news is recommended to the attention of rich men that leave fortunes to their sons. Those men will every often die of a moral and mental mange.

The labor government of England has abolished all duties on automobiles, motorcycles, moving picture films and watches—and that, in spite of Great Britain's terrific war debt.

republic is planning a tax on radio sets, which is about as intelligent as it would be to tax school books or new ideas. To allow $20,000, 000,000 worth of securities to go untaxed and put a tax on human ingenuity is foolish, to put it mildly.

At a London banquet our ambassador denied that the United States "is isolated." Forty-eight states dwelling together in real brotherhood, free trade among them all, any one of half a dozen rich enough to pay all the debts of the United States cannot be called isolated.

The real isolation is in Europe, where no two of the states can get together, where all are separated by tariff walls and ancient hatreds. This nation isn't isolated, and won't be if it knows enough to stay at home, mind its own business and allow the rest of the world to do the same.
