-Your Problems

by Martha Allen

Mrs. H.: Though clergymen of Protestant churches make no charge for conducting funeral services, either at the home of the deceased or at our church, as many would refuse gratuity for this office, a fee is often given by persons who wish to express substantial thanks for the favor and consolation conferred. What the fee shall be every individual appreciative of the clergyman's kindness must settle for himself. When the funeral is held some distance from the clergyman's home a long drive is necessary to reach the cemetery, then a carriage is placed at his disposal to convey him to the house or church, later to the cemetery, and finally back home. In the Catholic church the fees for conducting funerals are fixed, and are learned by inquiry at the vestry of the church.

In the case of a church funeral, a fee is necessary for the sexton who opens the church; the organist and vocalist must be paid for their services, and carriages must be provided to convey not only the members of the family and relatives, but also the pallbearers and such near friends as the occasion and special circumstances dictate to the church and afterward to the cemetery.

G. R.: We must know our own minds and find out what our ambitions, yearnings, desires are. And then when we have discovered what we need to fulfill our lives we must make up our minds to earn them by steady, earnest, unflinching effort. No one can make anything of her life unless she is fairly sure what she wants to make of it. No one can be sure what she wants to make of her life if she is thinking only in terms of the enjoyment of the moment, of the thrill of a second. Happiness is not mere gaiety and thrill and excitement. Happiness is the quiet joy that comes from honest, earnest, idealistic self-expression.

And so unless you learn to know your own mind you can't know your self or your honest desires or other folks—or life itself. So, you see, you aren't really living until you start thinking hard and straight and steadily. Get down to facts. You have to know your own mind in order to know anything else.

"My Husband's Love"

The Warning for Lillian That Dicky Gave Madge.

At Dicky's questions concerning Lillian I felt my mental bristles rising exactly—I told myself contemptuously—as might a wild cat in the presence of something she did not understand.

But my common sense told me that while his first query concerning her reasons for staying in our apartment while we were away was a perfectly natural one, the last one was strained and justified my suspicion that he wished to learn Lillian's attitude toward the Marks family, and their beautiful protegee, Mollie Fawcett.

There must be no hint of my suspicion in my answer, however. I knew my husband's uncertain temper well enough to skim that precipice and I waited until I was sure my voice was absolutely untruffed before I answered.

"I don't think she's given them a thought," I replied mendaciously, then put a query of my own in apparently idle fashion.

"Why should she do any 'sloughing stunts' in that direction? I know you're prejudiced against the Marks, but I think you're wrong, and I'm sure Lillian hasn't seen anything amiss with them. What opportunity has she had to observe them, even if she had any suspicion concerning them?"

"Prejudiced against them, is?" Dicky retorted, patently seizing upon the words which struck him forcibly. "Where do you get that stuff? Because I didn't take to the suit of Peter's job, and the buzzaw voice of his spouse, is that any reason why I should think them a bunch of crooks needing an eminent investigator on their trail?"

Pies without apology HER Fred is especially fond of pie. How she has tried to please him, and how he has ragged her about her pie crust. She has tried this and that recipe. She has tried this and that flour. This time it's a new one—Omar Wonder Flour. In it comes. A big, gorgeous pie with a golden-brown crust. The edges are done to a flaky turn. From it comes a spicy fragrance of cinnamon and nutmeg, hot sugar and tart apples. Fred has a sort of martyr look. As he takes the first bite her heart's in her throat. And then the miraculous happens. "Well, you've done it!" he shouts. "That pie is a knockout!" Omar Flour is a never ending wonder to all who use it. A highly specialized selection of spring and winter wheat, rich in wholesome, nourishing gluten, it gives to bread, cookies, biscuits, cakes, muffins, pastry, hot cakes, gravies and cream sauces a deliciousness that "good" fails to describe. To know the experience of continuously successful baking days, order a sack of Omar from your grocer. Quality and uniformity meet in Omar in perfect combination.

words, and I felt a little shiver stealing down my spine as I realized that the idea of Lillian investigating the Marks family was not only distasteful to him, but actually alarmed him. All the suspicions engendered by Dicky's absorbed interest in Mollie Fawcett—suspicions which I determinedly had crushed, scoring myself savagely for what I termed my senseless jealousy—sprang suddenly into hydra-headed life again. What did Dicky know concerning the doings of the family in the rear, and how had he obtained the knowledge? Of course, I realized that there was no element of consideration for the Marks family in the concern he was unconsciously manifesting. But that he was genuinely concerned over Lillian's possible investigations was evident, and there was but one possible conclusion. There must be something queer on foot, to put it mildly—something in which Mollie Fawcett was involved and which my husband knew what it was and feared for her. My memory flew back to the night when Dicky had come home with a wound upon his head bound up with handkerchiefs, and a scarf which I later had discovered to be Mollie Fawcett's. Indeed, Dick had admitted as much when I taxed him with the embarrassing fact only the night before, and I should not soon forget his savage anger at my discovery.

"A Flea in Lili's Ear." Difficult, indeed, was it for me to hold my temper and my pose and answer him equably. But I knew that I would gain no information by anger. Besides, within a few minutes we should be at the farmhouse, where Dicky's mother was anxiously awaiting our arrival that she might finish her preparations for her trip with her son to her daughter Harriet's home in Michigan.

That she was extremely nervous and her temper uncertain, or, rather, certainly bad, I was sure, and I was firm in the determination to do nothing which would upset her before her journey. I decided that an apparent misunderstanding of his meaning would serve me best, and I spoke with apparent pettishness.

"What's the use of flying off the handle like that?" I demanded crossly. "I didn't mean you thought them crooks. I simply said you didn't like them. You've certainly said that times enough."

"Neither do I," Dicky swallowed the bait, evidently deciding that this was his chance to make his annoyance appear plausible. "That female with the colloquial voice and her rat husband sure do get on my nerves. But that doesn't mean I think them crooks."

"However," he went on, "I should worry what happens to them. I believe you ought to put a flea in Lili's ear, though, if you think she really is investigating them. She'll only make herself ridiculous."

Luncheon on Saturday. Mrs. Everett Burke will give a luncheon at her home on Saturday.

Mrs. Sharp Entertains. Mrs. Jack Sharp will give a luncheon on Wednesday at her home.

Cooking Hints. When straining pulp for jelly, when draining sliced potatoes and when making cottage cheese I have found the following helpful: Instead of having to tie the strainer cloth or call upon a second person to hold it, fasten the cloth to the sides of the kettle or pail with clothespins. When merely the taste of the spice is desired in pickles or preserves, place the whole spice in a teaball and place the teaball in the kettle with the other materials. Place a large tin or plate covered one-fourth inch deep with salt under the kettle in which preserves are being cooked. This makes constant stirring unnecessary and prevents the preserves from burning—Delineator for June.

Mr. Patch writes that Kellogg's Bran "solved his problem." It has solved the problem of constipation—mild and chronic—for thousands of others. It has brought relief when all else has failed because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Read Mr. Patch's letter:

Dear Sir: I have been a constant sufferer from constipation and have wondered what was the cause of it. I have tried about all the cereals I could think of, and finally tried Kellogg's Bran. This solved my problem. I feel 100 per cent better and I owe it to your Bran. Thanking you very kindly for this great cereal, I am Very respectfully, Chester C. Patch, 761 Main St., Greenwood, Mass.

For the permanent relief of constipation, eat Kellogg's Bran regularly—two tablespoons daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestines. It rids them of the dangerous poisons that lead to other diseases. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is delicious with milk or cream. You will like its nut-like flavor—so different from ordinary, tasteless brans. Sprinkle it over the cereal. Cook it with hot cereals. Eat it in Kellogg's Bran muffins, griddle cakes and many other wonderful recipes given on the package. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Battle Creek and is served by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. It is sold by all grocers.
