Mrs. Carl Gray Proves to Be a Resourceful Hostess

Sends 35 Luncheon Invitations by Telegraph—At Country Club Today.

The name of Mrs. Carl Gray is so constantly associated with her religious endeavors that often her talents as a hostess are almost forgotten, in the triumph of her other abilities.

Last night, however, she proved herself resourceful in organizing a "last minute" luncheon for Mrs. C. B. Seger and sister, Miss Hull, of New York, who arrived unexpectedly during the evening in their private car with Mr. Seger for a day in Omaha.

Mrs. Gray immediately issued invitations by telegraph to 35 guests, who were astonished on opening the yellow envelopes at 11:30 p. m. to find a message in poetry which urged them "In this great day of hurry, I'm sending you a wire to ask you to meet some guests of mine. It's really my desire. Place—Country club of Omaha, don't forget the date. At one—on May the twenty-ninth. Please phone me 'yes' by 8."

Following luncheon to which the 35 bidden responded "yes," the floral centerpiece, a particularly lovely basket of roses, lilies of the valley and sweet peas, was passed to the guests. Each took from it a tiny corsage, whose tinfoil end had been concealed until that time.

Western Union collect cards were used for place cards. The telegram envelopes carried a blue seal on the outside saying "This is an invitation."

Invitations were sent to:

Mrs. E. M. Moran, Mrs. Harry Adams, N. H. Moore, Mrs. Paul Gallagher, C. M. Williams, J. W. Burt, James Conard, A. T. Rowland, Mrs. C. E. Lockwood, E. L. Bridges, Jess Whitmore, G. E. Bissett, A. F. Your Problems

by Martha Allen

Would Learn Dressmaking.

Dear Miss Allen: I am an old reader of your column and I am now coming to you for some information concerning school. I am 15 and will graduate in June. I would like to take up dressmaking and millinery, but I do not know where they teach this work only. Could you please tell me where there is a school for this kind of work? I also would like to know if there is a school for children of grammar grades who wish to attend summer school.

Thanking you very much for your information.
SISTERS.

Send me a stamped addressed envelope, repeating your question, and I will send you the name of a tailoring college in Omaha. Why not go as apprentice to some good dressmaker?

Not Enough Information.

Dear Miss Allen: I am a girl of 18. I was engaged to a man two years my senior, but our engagement was broken, and now we are going together again. My mother objects, because of the broken engagement. Is it all right for me to go with him?

I would have to know more about your case before attempting to advise you seriously. Much depends upon why your previous engagement was broken. The fact that the young man wants to go with you again is a good sign. It means he has always cared for you. Were you to blame when your engagement was broken? Or is he hot-tempered and impulsive? Or was it a matter of finances? Do you care for him? And has your mother other reasons to object to him other than the one you name?

As for your girl friend, there is no recipe I can give her or anyone where by she can capture the love of a man she likes. Love is its own master and no set of rules will ensnare it.

Swift fingers, keen mind, and nourishing Kellogg's just naturally go together. So delicious and easy to digest—far better than heavy foods.

Plant Life.

Ferns that turn yellow at the tips usually need more water. But it also should be noticed if they are hit or bruised by their position in the room. No plant that has to be moved or touched often will do well. Ferns with a dry frond may be trimmed carefully, but fresh green ones should be left alone as much as possible. West windows are rather good for ferns. A good way to water them thoroughly is to place them in a bathtub and use a sprinkling pot. Such a drenching resembles a gentle rain and the plant should be allowed to drain an hour or two. Tepid water is a good plan during the cold season and fern soil should be kept quite wet. In fact it should never be allowed to dry out. A rotted fern does not require plant food. Just the change from a small to a larger pot is usually sufficient to stimulate good growth. However, when dressing is necessary ground bone or a spoonful of wood ashes may be used. A fern that seems about dead can sometimes be revived by merely cutting it down to the roots. New shoots will then be the reward.

Cup of Cold Water.

A glass of water in the morning will help carry off any secretion of mucus which has accumulated during the rest period and prepare you for a good-tasting breakfast. Drinking with meals is all right if you don't bolt your meals. Drink throughout the day liberally and a glass on retiring at night. A quart should be a minimum for a day. Drink enough water to offset elimination. You should drink a glassful on arising, another before noon and several during the afternoon. Two quarts is not too much for a warm day. If in normal health, keep it up the year around.

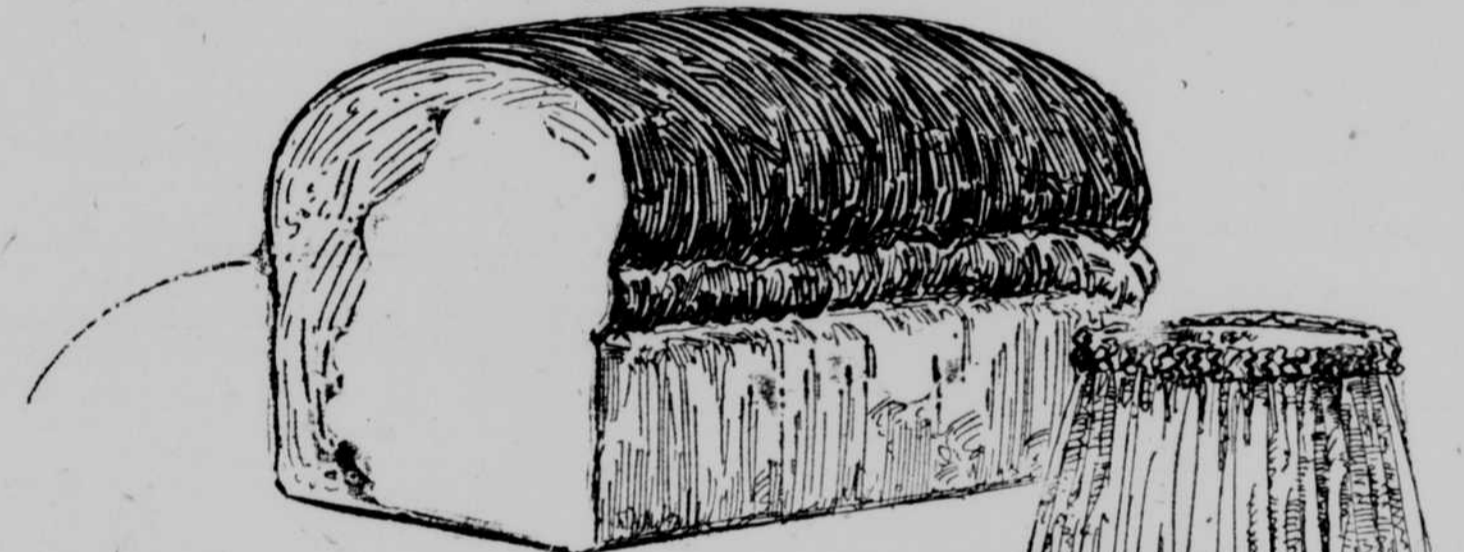

HE grave of the unknown soldier at Arlington is symbolic of the countless soldiers who have died during battle in America's conflicts of Arms, that others might live to know love, democracy, and peace.

We join the nation on this Memorial Day to pay silent tribute to our soldier dead. Let us not be satisfied with the mere act of decorating their graves with flowers and wreaths, but let us so strive to live that "these dead shall not have died in vain."
