Model Bungalow to Furnish Ideas for Home Seekers

T. H. Maenner Company Builds Home and Orchard-Wilhelm Furnish and Decorate It.

In order to show what possibilities there is in making a house a real home, T. H. Maenner of the T. H. Maenner company, Omaha Loan and Building Association building, has built a home at 4522 William street and opened it for inspection. Orchard & Wilhelm company have provided the furnishings for the place and have executed a pleasing color scheme throughout. The house is a five-room bungalow. The size was determined by the increasing demand for places of this size. It is to be open for inspection from 2 to 5 every afternoon. Not only has the place been furnished completely inside, but the grounds have been landscaped as well.

Attention Given Details.
Working upon the theory that a home depends not only upon the architect's drawings, but also upon the decorations, the place has been fitted out with attention to minutest detail. Everything from a door knocker to pretty little candle sticks has been set in place. In a small house, the designers say, the choice of decorations and placement of furniture is as important as in the most pretentious mansion. In a large place, for instance, a chair may be misplaced and still escape notice because of the size of the room. In a small place everything is so "in front of the eyes of everyone" that a misplaced chair or an unharmonious color scheme is immediately noticeable.

Colors in Draperies.
The most pronounced colors in the general scheme of things in the little bungalow are obtained by the use of draperies. A paper with an antique ivory background has been chosen for the walls of the living and dining rooms. The bedrooms are done in soft grays and yellows. Particular attention, as in most Maenner homes, has been given to the placing of doors and windows. The maximum amount of light and ventilation is obtained with a minimum sacrifice of wall space. Every detail to make the place attractive has been cared for. The place is well worth looking over. Home owners as well as those who are seeking a new place in which to live can find many suggestions in the little house on William street.
