Your Problems

By Martha Allen

I am 24 and a sane woman who has managed to combine work and play to get ahead in the business world without missing the joys and amusements youth craves.

I always wondered if I was a sap at heart. I kind of suspected that I'd sow a wild oat or two before I got through. But I didn't think I'd turn out to be a regular all wool and a yard wide fool.

At a dance I caught sight of a man who seemed to be just what I had always been looking for. The people in my party knew him well and thought him a fine fellow, so it was not hard to meet. He was all I had hoped and more. I liked his voice as well as his looks, and enjoyed what he said even more. I danced half the dances with him, let him take me home, met him for lunch the next day, and now—at the end of a week—am rapidly approaching the engagement stage.

I've never done a silly thing before in all my life—and now I go plunging into this outrageous love affair. A man I've only known a week! A case of love at first sight. There isn't any such thing. Love must be based on friendship and understanding. You've sold so again and again. It's true. How can I love a man I scarcely know? MABEL.

Why should you in a minute 24 years of good conduct all in a reverse? Since you've always been sane and well-behaved and controlled, why suppose you're negotiating all that now?

Modern psychology has been discovered about "love at first sight" summed up by a Western college professor.

"A man does not fall in love with a woman at first sight," says this professor. "He falls in love with her before ever he sees her."

Most of us have a mental picture of the person we would like to marry. In some of us the ideal is clearly defined and is either at the top of the subconscious mind, where it keeps us from falling in love with the wrong person, or right up in the conscious, where it snags us. To know just what we're looking for. Then along comes some one who really matches the dream prince or princess. If the behavior of the person matches the vision as well as did the outward appearance, the interest deepens. And then, says the Chicago professor, if the living person fulfills the qualifications of the ideal, the love is transferred from the image to the reality.

Mrs. A. F. S. William G. McAdoe was born October 21, 1863. This information is very easily obtainable by consulting "Who's Who in America."

Swearingen-Allen

Miss Alice Gertrude Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Allen, became the bride of Clark M. Swearingen of Sioux City at a beautiful home ceremony Thursday night, at 8:30 o'clock, with Rev. R. R. Bryan of the Central United Presbyterian church officiating.

Gowned in the daintiest of white chiffon, elaborately shirred made with full skirt and bodice waist, came the bride, carrying an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Ruth Peterson in lavender chiffon and Miss Aletha McWhinney in green, were the bridesmaids. The ring bearer, Lorraine Lester, was in white.

George Oltman and Caryl Wiggins attended the groom. George Wahl, sang, accompanied by Ora Ogle, who also played the wedding march.

After a wedding trip west, Mr. and Mrs. Swearingen will reside at 4611 Pacific street.

Our Daily Drink

"Water is an absolute necessity for the body, and we must get it in some form or other," declares Dr. Clifford Robinson. "The body is constantly giving off moisture in some form during the whole 24 hours. Sometimes more during the night than in the daytime. In the secretion of urine, the loss of moisture in the breath, by sweat during the working period and also often at night the loss is always going on and must be renewed."

GOOD NEWS FOR AILING WOMEN

Much has been said for and against proprietary medicines by the medical profession. It will interest every woman to know that in a recent country-wide canvass of over 121,000 purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as to the results received from its use, the replies received showed that ninety-eight out of every one hundred women had been benefited by its use. Therefore every sick and ailing woman owes it to herself to give this remarkably successful remedy a fair trial.

Mr. Brandeis
What is the visitor's first impression of Omaha?

It is night in Omaha.

The visitor in the city for the first time walks up and down the main streets.

What's his first impression?

"Good," replied Mr. Brandeis.

Good street lighting, properly lighted windows, attractive store fronts, wide sidewalks and streets is the composite impression the visitor receives as he walks about our downtown streets.

Electricity plays an important role in giving the visitor a good first impression of any city. Drab appearing windows, poorly-lighted streets and lack of proper sign lighting give the city a composite dull appearance—a poor first impression.

A famous banker, who was recently visiting here, looked out of the window of his hotel room at night and said: "Omaha is a fine looking city, isn't it?" It is!
