

Pools of Light to Guide Night Air Mail Pilots

Total of 5,279,000,000 Candle Power to Outline Path of Coast-to-Coast Fliers.

Chicago, June 27.—A 1,460-mile stretch between Cleveland, O., and Rock Springs, Wyo., will be drenched with overlapping pools of light and beacons circling horizons which intercept one another, combining to produce a total of 5,279,000,000 candle power when the day and night air mail service starts on regular schedule July 1.

The night flying section has been divided into three units and that between Chicago and Cheyenne, measuring 885 miles, will be lighted at once. The east and west wings will be utilized as summer wanes and days grow shorter.

In the central division main stations are located at Chicago, Iowa City, Ia.; Omaha, Neb.; North Platte, Neb.; and Cheyenne, Wyo. Between the main terminals are divisional fields, 22 to 25 miles apart. At the terminal fields four 500,000,000 candle power beacons will be the center of illumination and one of the same type beacons at each divisional field.

Acetylene Flashes.
Every three miles, in between main and divisional fields acetylene flashes on six-foot platforms have been installed. These were located last August during the night flying experiments. There is actually a landing field every three miles along the 885-mile route from Chicago to Cheyenne. The big 500,000,000 candle power beacons are set one-half of 1 degree above the horizon. They revolve completely around three times a minute and are visible for 150 miles. Other 500,000,000 candle power incandescent beacons similarly set make the circuit every 10 seconds and are visible for at least 100 miles. The acetylene beacons of 5,000 candle power are visible nine miles and flash 150 times a minute.

Divisional Fields.
Divisional fields are located as follows: In Iowa, Dixon, Atalissa, Williamsburg, Montezuma, Des Moines, Des Moines, Earlham, Casey, Atlantic, Oakland, in Nebraska, Yutan, Wahoo, David City, Osceola, Central City, Grand Island, Shelton, Kearney, Elm Creek, Lexington, Gothenburg, Paxton, Ogallala, Big Springs, Chapinell, in Wyoming, Pine Bluff and Burns.
Emergency fields, each equipped with one 5,000,000 candle power tower beacon, illuminated wind cone, telephone and other equipment are located in Wyoming at Federal, Laramie, Boulder, Rock River, Medicine Bow, Walcott, Cherokee, Wamsutter, Bitter Creek and Salt Wells.

Dunn Given Free Hand in Selection of Police Chief

Pszanowski in Line for Place, Says Hopkins—Van Deusen Said to Be Choice of Commissioner.

Whatever Commissioner Henry Dunn, head of the police force, says "goes" with the rest of the commission on the selection of chief of police to fill the vacancy of Chief Dillon, whose resignation takes effect July 15.

Commissioner John Hopkins said Friday morning that, according to custom, Inspector Pszanowski would get the position, but "of course that does not mean that he should necessarily get it." Hopkins believes it was the understanding of the council when they made Pszanowski inspector that he should follow Dillon as chief.

Others on the council said they are leaving it entirely up to Dunn. "I don't think Dunn should tell me who to make engineers, so I certainly won't tell him who to make chief of police," said Commissioner Koutsky, head of the public improvements department.
Mayor Dahlman felt the same way as Koutsky. He said, "We will undoubtedly accept the recommendation of Commissioner Dunn."

It is reported that Commissioner Dunn has decided to give the post to Chief of Detectives Van Deusen. If the other commissioners take Dunn's recommendation then Van Deusen will be the new chief.
It is doubtful that the new chief will be appointed at the council meeting next Tuesday.
