

seriously injuring City Manager Sadler. A Cedar Point auto ferry was just leaving its pier when the storm struck. The gas boat Columbus, towing the barge, was blown against the pier, where it sank. Passengers aboard were thrown into the heavy seas but by the heroic efforts of those ashore were rescued and sent to the Good Samaritan hospital where they were later discharged. Property damage was estimated between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Witnesses who saw the storm approaching said it was a funnel, or double funnel-shaped black whirling cloud.

Frank Sandusky the tornado, belching torrents of rain, dipped about 10 miles southeast and then came north again, striking Lorain almost exactly at the west corporation line of the city. Then the tornado seemed to divide, part of it going almost north and south down the length of Broadway.

Louis Salerno's $1,200 Auto May Be Confiscated

Search of Machine by Robert Samardick Reveals 27 Galons—Three Raids Made.

Louis Salerno was driving a new $1,200 automobile at Seventh and Pacific street, Saturday night when Robert Samardick, federal prohibition agent, stopped him. A search of the car revealed 27 gallons of liquor. Salerno was arrested and charged with possession and transportation of liquor. The car will be confiscated if he is convicted. He gave his address as 723 Pierce street. Samardick also arrested the following: Lillian Dwyer Adams, 1128 North Eighteenth street, where 16 bottles of beer were found; Marie Turner, Forty-third and J streets, and A. Mercer, 504 12 South Tenth street. Samardick reported that Leo Brunson and a delegation came out of the Turner place as he entered. Brunson was released on bond Friday. A charge of robbery is against him in district court.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

The Hungry Watchers. Reddy Fox was not the only one to lick lips hungrily at the news that there were two young Porcupines in the Green Forest. Old Man Coyote did the very same thing. So did Yowler the Bob Cat. Even little Shad the Weasel licked his lips. Not one of them had ever seen a baby Porcupine. None could imagine such little fellows as being anything but helpless. Each felt that if he could get them away from Mrs. Porky there would be no trouble at all in getting a good dinner of tender young Porcupine.

No Reddy Fox had not long been in hiding where he could watch the Porcupine family when he saw Old Man Coyote approaching softly. The sight of him angered Reddy Fox. But he took care to keep perfectly still and not let Old Man Coyote know that he was there. The funny part is that Reddy Fox actually felt that Old Man Coyote had no right there. He actually felt that Old Man Coyote was there to try to rob him of something that belonged to him. Of course this wasn't so at all. Old Man Coyote sat down and watched Prickly Porky's family for a while. Then he did exactly what Reddy Fox had done. Yes, sir, he did just that. He picked out a good hiding place from which he could watch the Porcupine family, and there he made himself comfortable. It was quite clear to Reddy that Old Man Coyote had just the same idea that he had. He had made up his mind that those young Porcupines were harmless, and he intended to wait for them to come down out of that tree. Hardly had Old Man Coyote hidden when Yowler the Bob Cat crept into view. Yowler fastened himself on the ground and glared up at the young Porcupines. Such an eager, hungry look as there was in those fierce, yellow eyes! It actually made Reddy Fox shiver. Then Yowler did just what Reddy and Old Man Coyote had done, he hid where he could watch and wait. Now Reddy is no match for either Old Man Coyote or Yowler the Bob Cat. He knows it. "I may as well move on and try to forget those young Porcupines," thought Reddy. "If they come down one of those fellows will get them. I haven't a chance." Black anger filled Reddy's heart. But still Reddy didn't go. Reddy has learned by experience that opportunity often comes in the most unexpected way. Old Man Coyote and Yowler might get tired and leave before those young Porcupines came down. They might get into a fight over those young Porcupines and give him a chance to seize one of them. You know you never can tell what may happen. As for Mrs. Porky and her two children, they appeared to have no thought of anything but filling their stomachs. They didn't even stop eating to now and then look around. They knew nothing of those hungry, hidden watchers. They acted just as if there was no one else in all the Green Forest, and as if there was no such thing as danger in all the great meal of tender bark and young twigs and leaves. They were filling their stomachs with the food they liked best, and there was plenty of it. To see them doing this and to hear their little grunts of pleasure made the hungry, hidden watchers hungrier than ever. (Copyright, 1924.)

Kluxers' Parade to Be Permitted by Authorities

Knights May Amuse Themselves in Masks and Hoods, Officials Say; $2,000 Fireworks.

City and county authorities yesterday said they will make no effort to prevent the scheduled parade of masked and hooded klansmen through Council Bluffs streets on the Fourth of July, unless there is a disturbance of peace. Hundreds of members of the Ku Klux Klan from many points in southwestern Iowa are expected to come to the Bluffs for the parade, celebration and huge initiation which is planned, according to the official organ of the organization. Subscription lists to raise $2,000 for the Klan fireworks display on this occasion have been circulated in the business district and the program announced indicates that several national speakers will appear here on Friday. No information regarding the location of the celebration after the parade has been given out, but it is believed it will be held in the aviation field at Lake Manawa or in Dodge park near the Missouri river.

Here's How States Voted on Klan.

STORM KILLS 6 AT SANDUSKY

(Continued from Page One.) The storm found them in most cases empty. Approximately 700 men will be affected, it was said, by the virtual wiping out of the fishing industry. Other hundreds will face unemployment through the wrecking of the factories. Fear that there had been loss of life aboard excursion steamers was dispelled early when it was learned that the steamer Chippewa rode out the blow in the bay, while the Boeckling kept to its dock in the face of the storm. 85-Mile Wind. The velocity of the wind, according to the United States weather office, reached 70 miles an hour in the city, and men on the waterfront said it reached 85 miles an hour there. Cedar Point, a nearby resort, escaped the full strength of the storm, but six cottages were destroyed. Cedar Point is a popular watering place for resorters from northern Ohio and southeastern Michigan. The National guard was early on the scene, responding to appeals from Mayor Perry, who feared fire and looting. Units came from Toledo, Findlay, Norwalk and Cleveland. Today guardsmen patrolled the storm-wrecked areas which had been roped off. Relief measures were taken even before the full force of the storm had been spent. City authorities, the Red Cross, the American Legion and civic organizations were co-operating. Norwalk, O., reported having suffered from the storm, escaped serious damage. Roofs Blown Away. For a path seven to eight miles long and three to four miles wide, southwest of Sandusky, not a farm building or barn and but few trees escaped the driving wind. Entire roofs of dwellings were blown off and strewn for hundreds of yards over adjoining fields. At times the wind reached a velocity that tore fence posts out of the ground and hurled wire fences nearly 200 yards. At one place, seven miles from Sandusky, an enormous barn, 100 by 300 feet, was lifted from its foundation, carried 100 feet and dropped across the highway. All motor traffic on two secondary roads from the south and on the main Columbus road was blocked by fallen trees for miles. Vigorous sanitation measures were taken as a result of the crippling of the water supply. Engineers of the National guard co-operated with city authorities in putting the water system back into operation. A high wind blew all day today and every precaution was taken against an outbreak of fire. Special emergency fire fighting apparatus was brought here by guard units.
