Widow of Late Judge Dies Here

Mrs. A. N. Ferguson Went to California for Health Recently.

Mrs. A. N. Ferguson, widow of the late Judge Arthur N. Ferguson of Omaha, died Monday at Hollywood, Cal. Mrs. Ferguson came to Omaha as a child and was married to Judge Ferguson in 1879.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Ferguson and her daughter spent a number of years in Europe. For the last 10 years she had resided in Chicago, going to California several months ago because of ill health.

A daughter, Mrs. Clifford N. Forbes of Omaha, and a granddaughter, Mrs. J. K. Baker of Petosky, Mich., survive. Funeral services will be held in Omaha at a date to be announced later.

WRITES FOR SUICIDE VICTIM TUESDAY

Funeral services for Charles Swanson, father of eight children, who committed suicide at his home, 3922 W street, Saturday, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 from Brewer's funeral chapel, Rev. A. K. Waldron officiating. Burial will be in Grace-land Park cemetery.

As Swanson arose from the dinner table he informed his family that he intended to kill himself. They fled from the house. His son, Edward, 34, returned and found his father with a gun at his side. The lad grappled with his parent, but was finally driven from the home.

Five minutes later reports of two shots were heard. A neighbor, Theodore Schull, entered the house and found Swanson lying on the floor with a bullet hole through his head. Members of the family stated that dependency over loss of a position was responsible.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. The patient seldom wait in vain. Though perhaps they may little gain. —Old Mother Nature.

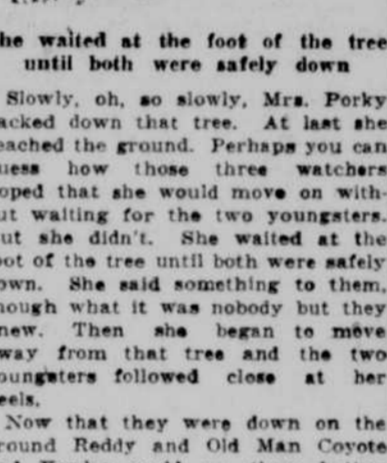

Patience is rewarded. Porcupines are slow in all their movements. They never hurry. Why should they? There is nothing for them to hurry for. They walk slowly. They climb just as slowly, and perhaps a little more slowly. And they are just as slow in their eating. So it was a long time before Mrs. Porky and her two children showed any signs of having eaten enough.

But if food is plentiful and easy to get, even the slowest eater fills his stomach sooner or later. At last the hungry hidden watchers noticed that the two young Porcupines had stopped eating. This was a hopeful sign. Mrs. Porky was still eating and appeared to pay no attention whatever to her children. Perhaps those youngsters would come down without waiting for their mother. Reddy Fox hoped so. Old Man Coyote hoped so. Yowler the Bob Cat hoped so. It would be much easier and more satisfactory not to have Mrs. Porky there should interfere. All three had the greatest respect for Mrs. Porky and her thousand little spines.

But the little Porcupines did not come down. They climbed about a little, for climbing was new to them and it was fun. But they didn't climb down, and Mrs. Porky kept right on eating. It was very trying for those hungry watchers down below. They actually began to hate Mrs. Porky because she ate so much and so slowly.

But at last patience was rewarded. Mrs. Porky stopped eating. She rested a while and watched the youngsters climb about. By and by she spoke to them. They climbed down to where she was sitting in a crotch of the tree. She appeared to give them a command of some sort. Then, yowler the Bob Cat drew his hind feet under him and crouched ready to spring on one of those unsuspecting little Porcupines.

Reddy Fox got to his feet without making a sound and held himself in readiness to take advantage of the first opportunity that offered. Old Man Coyote did the same thing. Yowler the Bob Cat drew his hind feet under him and crouched ready to spring on one of those unsuspecting little Porcupines.

She waited at the foot of the tree until both were safely down.

Slowly, oh, so slowly, Mrs. Porky backed down that tree. At last she reached the ground. Perhaps you can guess how those three watchers hoped that she would move on without waiting for the two youngsters. But she didn't. She waited at the foot of the tree until both were safely down. She said something to them, though what it was nobody but they knew. Then she began to move away from that tree and the two youngsters followed close at her heels.

Now that they were down on the ground Reddy and Old Man Coyote and Yowler could see them better. They looked very harmful and helpless. "They are too young to have any...

Joke Writers Get Lafs and Checks

Send One in; If It Takes You'll Hear About It by Check.

Where to see Local Laf today: Strand theater, Council Bluffs; Grand theater, Benson; Grand theater, Omaha; Grand theater, Albion; Neb. Favorite theater, Schuyler; Neb. Iowa theater, Red Oak; Neb. Keith theater, North Platte; Neb. Woodbine theater, Woodbine, Ia.

"Did you see the latest? It's a laf written by John Jones and being shown on the screens at theaters throughout Nebraska and Iowa. It's a humdinger. Here's how it goes— This is the conversation of many who have gone to the theaters where Local Lafs written by the people of those states and sent in to the Local Laf editor of The Omaha Bee are being shown. Fifteen winning lafs are thrown on the screen each week.

You may have a laf there too, and feel the thrill of seeing your name and the joke you contributed on the screen of a motion picture theater. All you have to do is write out a joke, preferably an original one, and send it to the laf editor. Just wait to see if it "takes"; if it does, you'll hear about it in the form of a check.
