You'll not advance one step unless you forget entirely about your faults and keep in mind your attractions Most of us have some little trait of character or some feature of our gen eral make-up that pleases. Think hard and you'll surely find something in yourself to magnify so as to make few men think more than once about you. If you can't find a mar ket for your attractions where you happen to be, then try another place just as any good salesman would do But, be yourself, be natural, for there is ngthing that will drive away ad mirers more than insincerity. Dear Martha Allen: I often won-der how one person happened to fall premely efficient, as any broad-mindin love with another. Can you give any explanation for such strange attractions as we see about us? A beau tiful girl will often marry the home liest fellow in town and the most handsome man the plainest girl to be INQUISITIVE SUE. found You have fallen upon the puzzle of the ages, Sue. Real love isn't a thing to be defined. It is a thing gifted with deep vision that most of us are unable to grasp. Tenderness, devotion and lasting happiness are only a few of the things included in love Real love isn't a matter of broad shoulders, beautiful features or rougish eyes. It is a deep, basic attraction founded upon character and spiritual union. No use to try to find out what two persons find in each other to love. It is beyond power to discover these attributes that attract one another.

Messengers of the Night

Night flying, cross-country non-stop flights, new air mail records are familiar words to us now.

Air mail, like all other innovations, is having a humble beginning. However its development is rapidly being carried on and soon it will hold its place high with the other great improvements of the age.

Electricity, too, had a humble beginning. Its pioneers risked their lives' savings developing a "dream" into a reality. Like air mail, also, electricity has had a rapid development.
