The Silas Harrises to Make Home in Idaho.

Mr. Harris to Be a Member of University Law Faculty.

Mrs. A. H. Ellsworth gave a bridge luncheon at her home Thursday for Mrs. Silas A. Harris, who leaves August 1 with Mr. Harris and their 6-year-old daughter, Janet, to make their home in Moscow, Idaho, where Mr. Harris will be a member of the law faculty of the University of Idaho.

On Wednesday Miss Lucille Dodder entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Harris, and last week Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Brigham and Rev. and Mrs. Donald MacLeod were their hosts.

On Saturday evening the O. H. Johnsons will give a dinner, Monday the L. C. Reeves will be hosts, and Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Crossman will entertain for the Harrises.

Arthur Clark Visits Sister, Mrs. McDonald.

Arthur B. Clarke, president of the Everett Clarke Seed company of Millford, Conn., and president of the American Seed Men's association, arrived Thursday with his son, Arthur B. Clarke, Jr., to spend several days with his sister, Mrs. Charles G. McDonald and Mr. McDonald. His son is a student at Hotchkiss school, Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald will entertain 20 guests at Happy Hollow club on Saturday evening in their honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Clarke will give a dinner party Sunday noon for the guests and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodland will entertain at supper Sunday evening.

Miss Laura McDonald of Beaver Dam, Wis., and Mrs. John Graham of Twin Falls, Ida., will arrive August 1 to be the McDonalds' guest.

Mrs. Charles G. McDonald and daughter, Charlotte, will leave August 15 for Colorado Springs and Estes park.

Dinner Club to Picnic on Mrs. Byrne's Farm.

Mrs. Harry Byrne's farm in Fremont will be the scene of a Saturday evening picnic party, when the guests will be members of the Winter Dinner club, which includes Messrs. and Mesdames Byrne, Ben Sylvester, Alfred Burr, Alfred Clarke and Leonard Hertz.

Newcomer Here Hostess.

Mrs. Willis Green, who with Mr. Green is a newcomer to Omaha, will entertain informally at the Brandels restaurants on Saturday for her sister, Miss Katherine Grumman of Lincoln, who is spending the summer here during the absence in Europe of her parents, Prof. and Mrs. Grumman of the University of Nebraska.

Misses Anne Lee Van Meter and Virginia Van Meter of Kansas, who are visiting Mrs. Henry Johnson, will also be guests.

For the Roger Holmans.

Messrs. and Mesdames Don Lee, George Kiewit, George S. Pinno, Frank Mattson, Euston Howard, John Lingke, Clinton Stult, Miss Carol Howard, and Charles Mattson gave a picnic Tuesday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Roger Holman who have returned from a two months' South American trip.

For Miss Horton.

Miss Elizabeth Ortman will entertain at luncheon at the Brandels restaurant on Saturday in honor of Miss Jane Horton who returned recently from Porto Rico.

Miss Betty Robison will give a luncheon at Happy Hollow club on Friday for Miss Horton.

William J. Stone of Los Angeles, Cal., has been visiting with his parent, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Stone of this city for the past week. Mr. Stone is on a leave of absence studying school-house design for a firm of architects in Los Angeles.

Your Problems

Martha Allen

Dear Martha Allen: I have been going with a young man for nearly a year. He is very nice and thoughtful in all cases but one, I think. That is about dances. He doesn't dance and so never goes or offers to take me to any dance unless he takes a notion that he wants to go to listen to the music. Now Martha Allen, I love to dance. During the winter I didn't miss going but I do now. He tells me that I can go if I wish, but that I can't go with any other boy or even go to supper with one. Surely he doesn't think that I could go alone. What should I do?

Do you think it right for me to tell him that it is his place to take me and if he doesn't that I should go with another boy? Would let such a matter break us up? I am at a loss.

READER.

As far as I can see, you will have to make a choice between this man or dancing. Girls have been known to make such sacrifices for the men they love. There seems to be a selfish strain in this man of yours that might cause you a great deal of trouble over more serious problems later on. He should not dictate to you about going with other boys unless you are engaged to him. Assert yourself before your likings are all lost and you end in unhappiness. If your love for him is strong enough to make you forget your own likes, then you might be happy with him. The dancing question is a small one compared to the principles back of your arguments.

Janet: It is really the woman's part to suggest that a man call upon her. But if a man sees a certain woman a good deal at the homes of friends, it is permissible for him to ask to call.

Helen: Wedding gifts may be changed unless they have some personal significance or sentiment attached. You must consult the giver. If the presents are marked this is impossible.

L. C.: Presents for the new infant are numerous and could be small silver spoons, knitted jackets, socks, blanket rattles, bibs, bonnets or shoes.

Wife of Democrat Presidential Nominee

Mrs. C. G. Colwell of Pawnee City, Neb., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Potts, and Dr. Potts.

Mrs. George S. Pinno and George, Jr., will spend the month of August in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Mrs. Asbury Wilson has just returned from Kansas City and will go to Detroit with her sons later.

Mrs. Ralph Hayward and Mrs. Guy Smith leave this week for the Colorado mountains to spend two months.

Miss Wilma McFarland who was a delegate to the Girl Reserves camp at Lake Okoboji, will return on Friday.

Mrs. F. S. Covell and son, Winston, of Chicago, former residents of Omaha, spent the day here en route to the Pacific coast.

Mrs. Harry Bellamy of Chicago and her three children, Jack, Robert and Betty, are guests of Mrs. Bellamy's mother, Mrs. F. T. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morearty will return Friday from California, where they have spent their honeymoon. Mrs. Morearty was formerly Miss Helen Porter.

Miss Nancy Hulst will return in two weeks from an extended eastern trip. She is now in Clarkburg, West Va., and will go to Weston, W. Va., before her return.

Mrs. Mary W. Dunigan leaves Wednesday for Seattle by way of the Glacier National park, returning through the Yosemite valley and the Grand canyon September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Johnson have gone on a motor trip to Lake Interlaken at Fairmont, Minn. Mr. Johnson is the exalted ruler of the Omaha lodge, No. 35.

Mrs. F. W. Tandy of Seattle is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. H. Stine. Mrs. Corbie Partle of Colorado Springs is visiting her nephews, J. H. Stine, and John R. Stine and their wives.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Wolfson and daughter, Josie, will take a trip to Palestine, and as a farewell party will be at home to their friends on Sunday at the home of Mrs. H. Fried in Council Bluffs.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

What Mrs. Marks Had to Say to Mamie and Madge.

"Am I eternally discredited?" Harry Underwood queried with a smile at Lillian and me. Then I saw his eyes narrow quickly as he saw Mamie's head bowed against the chair back, but he gave no other sign that he noticed anything unusual in the mental atmosphere.

"Almost," Lillian retorted. "Knowing your record, we were about to call out the police when you knocked. We figured you were in one of three places."

"Morgue, hospital or police station?" he interrupted grinning impudently at her. "That's what it is to have a reputation for punctuality—he suddenly changed his jocular tone to a dolorous whine as he turned to me—if you ever depart from it, there's a panic among your friends and relatives."

I interpreted the flicker of Lillian's eyes toward Mamie correctly, remembering that she had asked me to take the girl into the kitchen while she talked to Mr. Underwood. "I think you should be disciplined," I told him smiling, "but Lillian is past mistress of that art, so I'll leave the task to her. Come, Mamie, I want you to go to the kitchen with me."

He was standing nearest me, and his impudent whisper "Lucky Mamie" was, I am sure, unheard by either the girl or Lillian.

I gave no sign that I had heard him, but crossed quickly to Mamie, who had arisen obediently, but had stumbled when she attempted to walk, because she was still childishly hiding her face in the crook of her arm.

I put my hand upon her arm and guided her through the door, conscious that Harry Underwood was making absurd laughter-provoking gestures in the pretense that I was an animal tamer in a circus. Lillian shut the door upon his nonsense, and I swiftly turned upon Mamie.

"There is no one to see you now but me," I told her curtly, "so take your arm down and walk along here as you should."

Mamie is terrified. She dropped the arm promptly, but kept her eyes obstinately lowered nor did she speak, even after we had reached the kitchen, and she had seated herself in the chair I placed for her. Her silence was distinctly pleasing to me, however, for I had no knowledge of what Lillian had said to her, and I would have had to weigh my words most carefully had the girl tried to question me.

I knew that Lillian's "20 seconds" were figurative ones, so I did not expect an immediate summons back to the living room, and made myself as comfortable as possible in the rocking chair we had brought down. There was a creak in it, and though I stopped rocking after the first raucous sound or two, I was too late to keep my neighbor in the next room from hearing it through the thin partition.

I heard the sound of slipped feet striking the floor—then the opening of her door and the patter of the feet up the passage to my kitchen. Mamie's face filled with terror, lifted at the sound, and she put out her hand in childish supplication to me.

"She's awful mad by me," she quavered. "Don't let her hit me."

"You'll have no trouble if you behave yourself," I assured her coldly, for I realized the necessity of keeping Mamie terrified, though pity for the frightened girl, which I fiercely dubbed mandlin, was fast taking possession of me.

Mrs. Marks passed outside the door, and gave a low knock. As I opened the door, she curiously peered past me into the room, and I smothered a desire to laugh as I saw disappointment in her transparent face.

She patiently had hoped that I was entertaining Mr. Underwood in the kitchen and that she would have a chance to see him again.

Then she saw Mamie shrinking as far as she could out of sight and her eyes lightened with subconscious, but very real delight at the chance to vent her chagrin without betraying the cause of it.

"Did you see the Man?" "So you're down here, now, are you?" she snarled advancing into the room.

Mrs. F. W. Tandy of Seattle is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. H. Stine. Mrs. Corbie Partle of Colorado Springs is visiting her nephews, J. H. Stine, and John R. Stine and their wives.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Wolfson and daughter, Josie, will take a trip to Palestine, and as a farewell party will be at home to their friends on Sunday at the home of Mrs. H. Fried in Council Bluffs.

the kitchen, but keeping her voice low, evidently with the hypothesis of Lillian still upon her. You've got a crust, even breathin' the same air as Miss Graham after tryin' to do for her the way you did.

"It's a lucky thing for you Miss Graham and her lady friends are the kind they are," she hissed with real venom. "If they'd let me, I'd give you such a hidin' as you'd carry the marks of to your dyin' day, I'd do it anyway if you so much as lift the tip of your little finger for any mischief again. Oh, but I'm so ashamed, Miss Graham!" She turned to me dramatically.

to me dramatically. "To think any relation of mine should do you any dirt." "Oh, by the way," she smiled. "Did you see the handsome man I let in the door a minute ago? He said he was a friend of yours."
