Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Why Lillian Thought Madge's Imagination "Too Exalted"

My piqued desire to startle Lillian was gratified when I mentioned Grace Draper's name, although I knew that she was distinctly off guard with me, and could betray her real alarm as she never would have done with a stranger.

The flush of excitement faded from her cheeks, her eyes for a second held consternation with a touch of a stronger emotion that to my amazement appeared very near to terror, but her voice was strong and held a sharp imperious note.

"Grace Draper!" she exclaimed. "You must be mistaken, child. She never would dare to come back to this country after that last—"

"But she has," I interrupted her as sharply, even while I felt abashed for the vanity which was delighting her. She was not the only one who could have startling secrets, I reminded myself with a glee as childish as it was silly.

"How do you know? Did you see her face?" How had she hit upon the faulty point in my recognition of the woman we both had such reason to dread. I did not wait to answer my own query, but responded to hers instead. "No, she was masked," I said reluctantly.

"Masked? At the restaurant? Lillian repeated sharply. "Oh, yes, I remember now, they are advertising a group of masked dancers at one of the cabarets! But your imagination played hob with you after your experiences with her."

There was apparent relief in her voice, although her eyes still held alarm. "Do you think Mr. Underwood's person on the other end of the wire. "Did you get it? Good! I'll— and over for it right away. Listen carefully to me. In 10 minutes, be outside the door of your place with the parcel carefully wrapped. Be sure it is in a good box. A tall, slender young woman in a blue suit and small blue hat will call for it in a taxi, but I do not wish her to have to get up to your door, step out into the street, and she will ask you if your name is Jones, and if you have a package for Mrs. Underwood. Give it to her at once. I will take care of it and return it to you tomorrow."

She hung up the receiver and turned to me. "Do you mind doing an errand for me right away?" she asked.

She leaned toward me tensely. "Tell all about it," she demanded. And glad of the chance to talk, and thus conceal my dismay at the self revelation I had experienced, I told her in detail of the incidents connected with my discovery of Grace Draper, ending with the assurance that Mr. Underwood had declared he would not lose track of her.

Her hands relaxed their tense grip on the chair arms at that, and I saw that in a measure her dread was lessened. "You'll be safe for awhile, anyway," she said, "until Harry gets careless, or the Draper manages to make him believe she is on the mourner's bench convicted of sin. But by that time, I shall be on the job. His watch over her will give me a breathing spell. Ah! I thought I'd get that ring about now!"

The telephone shrilled beside me, and I moved aside to let her answer it. That it was the call she expected, I knew by her quick demand, once she had been given the name of the

To Whiten Skin with Lemon

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchar White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier. Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

Your Problems

by Martha Allen

Too Young to Marry.

Dear Martha Allen: Being as you have been so good in answering other folks' problems, I will come to you in one. I am a girl of 14. I generally like a boy three years my senior. He is a very good standing. He has proposed to me several times, but I think myself I am too young to be married. I told him if he would wait a few years I would then answer his question. I am a girl in high school and get along very well in my work. I work out all the spare time that I have. My parents do not know this young boy, but they know that I have went out with him a great deal. I have not gone with him so very long, but I feel my love is affectionate enough for him. He is not a drunkard or anything like that, but he smokes, which I do not mind. My parents do not mean to have me go and have a good time. Now, dear Martha Allen, if you were me what would you do? I hope to hear soon. I am, "SICK AT HEART."

What a funny world! Some girls write me that they have no admirers and are, therefore "sick at heart." Now you write me that you have one and feel the same way.

You are too young to be thinking about marriage. Take your parents' advice. If they see you are sensible and do not mean to marry hastily and against their wishes, they probably will not object to your having him for a friend.

Make a Choice.

Dear Martha Allen: Will you please tell me what is the matter with me? I have been with two boys, the other just once in a while. When I go with the one he gets so "excited" that it makes me feel terrible. The other one has controlled his disposition until just lately.

What can I do to keep them from acting this way?

If a boy cares for a girl will he act this way with her? RUBY-JANE.

For the sake of harmony I would advise you to go with the one you like best and drop the other, or else drop both of them until they learn to be reasonable.

Puzzled: I think your parents are better judges of this man's worthiness than I am. You don't tell me your age. Perhaps you are old enough to decide for yourself whether or not you are willing to risk your life's happiness with a man who breaks his word. I judge, however, that you are young, and that your parents are giving you the right advice.

Independence.

If you care enough about the man at home to forsake all others for him, then do as he asks in school. But if you do not expect to become engaged to him, it would be a great mistake to give up other companions at this time in your life.

The Housewife's Idea Box

Do Not Use Baking Soda With Greens.

Never put baking soda into green vegetables while cooking them. It destroys the vitamins. It is said that soda "sweetens" them, but it is more valuable to retain the vitamins. THE HOUSEWIFE.

Fraternity Frolic.

Annual mid-summer frolic of the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity was held Tuesday evening at the Athletic club roof garden when 75 couples attended. A feature of the evening was a motion picture showing of members in a college campus sketch of the University of Missouri, taken at Elmwood park. Decorations were with Japanese lanterns, spot lights, colored flood lights and skeddadle lights. Randall's orchestra furnished the music.
