Westminsters Hold Old-Fashioned Lawn Social.

The members of Circle No. 1 of Westminister Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Charles A. Westerfield is chairman, will sponsor an old-fashioned lawn social Friday evening the 15th, at the home of Mrs. Emory W. Johnson, 1018 South Thirty-first street. Special attractions in the way of entertainment will be staged by various members of the committee and their friends. The public is cordially invited.

Miss Mullen Accepts a Position in Conservatory

Miss Gladys Mullen, local dance teacher, has gone to Chicago for some special dance instruction and to attend the dance convention beginning August 22. Following, she will go to Lansing, Mich., where she will teach dancing at the conservatory of music next year.

Lake Geneva Conference.

Mrs. George H. McConnell, finance chairman of the Omaha Y. W. C. A., who is official delegate to the Lake Geneva community conference, now in session at College Camp, Wis., says in a letter just received by Mrs. Carrie Ada Campbell, general secretary:

"It is lovely here and I am very comfortably located. So much I want to do and hear that time seems very limited. If each day gives me as much as this morning (Friday, August 8) has, I shall want to talk hours upon my return. Wish you were all here, not only for the enlarged vision of life one gets, but for the beauty of the surroundings."

Mrs. Hansen Hostess.

Mrs. J. J. Hansen entertained Monday at a luncheon at her home in honor of Mrs. Bert Von Kanel of Bay City, Mich., who is visiting her sister Mrs. Frank E. Marsh. Other guests were Mesdames Fred J. Burbeck, S. J. Alexander and Mrs. William Nelson.

For Visiting Alpha Phis.

Mrs. Gunnar Masburg and Mrs. L. S. Overbeck will entertain in honor of Mrs. Thomas Moonlight Murphy of Kansas City and Mrs. James B. Strang of Brooklyn, N. Y., members of Alpha Phi sorority, on Wednesday at bridge at the home of Mrs. Masburg.

Betsy Ross Delegates.

Betsy Ross tent No. 1, Daughters of Union Veterans, will be represented at the national encampment being held this week at Boston by Mesdames Ruth Shufeldt, Maude Barnett, Anna Bailey and Mrs. Otto Baysdorfer, Jr., vice president.

Wright-Howland.

Miss Marie Howland and Ernest Wright, both of Omaha, were married last week at Butte, Neb. Mr. Wright is appearing with the Savidge company of musicians this summer.

Mrs. Dahlman in Maine.

Mrs. James C. Dahlman and grandson, Jack Collett, will spend the month of August at Winterport, Me.

Trinity Chapter Initiation.

Meeting House Again Proves Itself a Factor in Human Destiny

Death to the cynics! The meeting house again proves itself a factor in human destiny. The dance hall and rear rows of movie houses for all their vaunted lure, can show no such matrimonial record as comes out of Methodist in Omaha this week. Four girls, all members, and three of them officers in the Epworth League union, will be brides between now and Saturday. And the husbands are leaguers too! Miss Edith Elizabeth Hodges is president of the union. Her marriage to J. Shaller of Benton, Kan., formerly boys' work secretary at the Y. M. C. A. here, will cause her resignation on account of residence elsewhere. Rev. Allen Keith of Pearl Memorial M. E. church performed the ceremony Tuesday night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hodges. Following a trip to Estes Park, Mr. and Mrs. Shaller will make their home in Benton. Recording secretary of the union is Miss Alta Davis, whose wedding to Wayne Reeves, membership secretary at the Y. M. C. A., takes place Thursday night at the home of her sister, Mrs. Leo Wilson. Miss Davis made a brilliant record for herself in South High school, carrying off declamatory and musical honors. Miss Fenella Legge is corresponding secretary for the union. Her marriage to Rudolph Mueller, who is an active member of the league union, will be solemnized at Benson M. E. church Saturday night. Miss Legge is very popular in Benson society and is well known in Omaha. She possesses a beautiful soprano voice. Members of the union, too, are Miss Katherine Tennant and Fred Wright, who will be married Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Tennant, with Rev. Keith officiating. Miss Tennant and Mr. Wright are graduates of Central High school. They will honeymoon in Colorado.

Personals

Mrs. Hannah Burnham is spending the month in Minneapolis. Mrs. Margaret A. Cook returned Sunday from Santa Barbara, Cal. Ueda club will hold a monthly meeting at 11 a. m. Wednesday, August 13 at Camp Brewster. Mrs. Bruce Baker of Chicago is expected Saturday to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Loomis.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lake and son, Howard, of Bedford, Ia., spent the weekend as guests of the Guy Liggett. Mr. and Mrs. L. Leroy Armstrong and daughter, Patricia, are visiting at the home of George B. Clark and family. Mrs. Armstrong was formerly Miss Leota Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Morey V. Porter and Spencer leave Friday for Chicago, where they will join the J. J. Halseys of Indianapolis, who will go to Lake Geneva, Wis., with them.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moeller and Miss Helen Hewitt will leave Saturday for Lake Okoboji, where the Moellers will remain for two weeks and Miss Hewitt for the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Boyer arrived home Monday from an eight weeks' eastern trip. Their son stayed with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wood, during their absence.

Mrs. Franklin A. Bartlett of Bakersfield, Cal., is here with her two small daughters, Jayne and Frances, visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Robinson. With Mrs. Robinson they will leave August 20 for a tour through Colorado and western points, en route to their home. Mrs. Robinson will accompany them as far as Ogden, Utah.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Liggett and son, Billy, leave Friday for Wisconsin, where they will spend a week on a farm near Devil's Lake. Thence they will go to International Falls, in Minnesota.

Mrs. Ray M. Higgins and sons, Ray, Jr. and Jack, have returned from Scottsbluff, where they visited Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Schrock, and from Sidney, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Mel Uhl, Jr., who have been motoring in the west for two weeks, have reached Cheyenne and will return this week. Their daughter, Marjorie, has been with her grandparents, the W. F. Milroys, during their absence.

The Astonishing Thing That Happened in Madge's Apartment.

Swift as was the plunge of the slight boyish figure through our door, Lillian's movement to meet it was swifter still. She had risen to her feet as she heard the stealthy opening of the hall door, and it was her hand that closed the door behind the entering figure.

"Get up," she had whispered in that moment, "and take this flashlight. Don't turn it on until I tell you."

I had obeyed her, and the door had scarcely closed when I heard her low command: "The light, Madge!" Wondering, embarrassed, conscious of my distraught negligence, I obeyed her, to look straight into the wonderful black eyes of Mollie Fawcett, clad in man's attire, a cap crowded close over her hair. Lillian snatched it off, even as she spoke, and I saw that the girl's hair had been clipped into a "boyish bob," enabling her better to carry out the impersonation.

"We'll Make It." "Get out of that rig as quickly as you can!" Lillian tersely commanded, stooping to Lillian's shoes. "I'll manage these. Madge, hold the flashlight upon these laces. That's better. Are they close behind?"

"I'm afraid so." The girl spoke for the first time, and I noticed that, though she was breathing hard, as if she had been running, her rich voice had a composure almost equalling Lillian's own.

"What makes it, I think," Lillian said, removing one shoe and beginning on the other, the girl meanwhile working at top speed on the unfamiliar buttons of her coat and shirt. She had just removed them when we heard sudden noises as of altercation coming from the rear apartment, and the voice of Mrs. Marks raised in one quick, sharp scream as quickly silenced.

"Don't take anything more off," Lillian whispered, rising with the masculine shoes in her hand and with a deft movement thrusting them between the blankets and the mattress of our bed. "Madge, hand me that nightdress and open the box."

She slipped my nightdress over the girl's head and I obediently opened the box and drew out the mysterious thing for which Lillian had scoured the city. It was a silky, blue-black wig of hair with two long braids—a wonderful thing of its kind. I saw even in the cursory glance which was mine as Lillian fairly snatched it from my hands and crammed it down over the girl's boyish bob.

"Lay this coat and shirt flat beneath my sheets and then go to bed," she said again in a whisper, as she took the flashlight from my hand and led Mollie Fawcett through the door which she had left open into the bedroom and bade her get into bed with Mollie.

"Pretend to be asleep and don't wake too easily," I heard her whisper as I hastily disposed of the discarded coat and shirt and climbed into bed on top of them. Lillian joined me in another instant, flashing her light around the floor to make sure that no tell-tale evidence of Mollie's masquerade had been left. Then she snatched off the light and crept into bed beside me not 10 seconds before the noise in the Marks apartment appeared to burst into the hall, and Mrs. Marks' shrill voice arose in what I surmised to be another frantic attempt to signal Lillian.

"What's the use of disturbin' those ladies in the front? I'll never be able to look them in the face again. They don't know nothin' about all this mess. They think I'm respectable—"

"Stow that guff," a deeper voice replied. "That fellow came into this building, I saw him, and he can't get out again—I've got the entrance guarded, but I'm going to get him now if I have to search every flat in the building."

Lillian put her lips to my ear. "When they knock here act just as you would if awakened from sleep."

No vinegar can give what it hasn't got.

The only use of vinegar is to impart and develop flavor, and to do this it must have flavor.

Mere sourness isn't flavor. A poor vinegar on which you save a few cents, will spoil a salad—and where is the economy in that?

Heinz Vinegars are made of the choicest materials in the most careful way, then slowly aged and mellowed to give them that delightful flavor and aroma which makes a salad worth while.

Peggy: If I were you I would—provided your mother approves—join a dancing class. For every young man who dances—and most young men do dance nowadays—likes to have a partner who dances well. And so girls who dance well usually are invited to dances.

You see, there are countless practical ways of making yourself a charming, worthwhile friend and companion.

Do not forget the appeal of personal cleanliness. Good health, fragrant cleanliness, tasteful dress, with attention to all the tiny details that make up good grooming—all these are more irresistible to many gentlemen than beauty itself.

Invite the young people you know to your home from time to time—both young men and girls—and try in every way to give them a jolly time. As a matter of politeness, your guests will make party calls on you afterward. When they call be as sweet and entertaining as you can be, so that they will wish to come again. You must go halfway, you know—do your part—in order to make and hold friends.

It is a mistake to allow yourself to be supercilious toward the girls and young men you know, even though they may not, as you express it, appeal to you. Why do you expect your friends to be perfect? No human being is perfect. But look for their good qualities and interest yourself in their interests—their hobbies, enthusiasms, ambitions. These will supply plenty of subjects for conversation.

Peggy: The propriety of exchanging birthday gifts with a boy depends entirely upon the degree of friendship which exists. If you are engaged or have been good friends for a long time, I think an exchange of simple gifts is all right. But don't make him a gift unless you think he wants to make you one. You practically obligate him to give you something when you make him a present. At this time of year, golf balls, if he golfs; fishing tackle, if he enjoys that sport; books, initialed or monogrammed handkerchiefs, leather bill folders or card cases, are some of the choicest
