

Cold Retards Growth of Corn Coldest August Temperature Since 1911 Recorded at Columbus.

Columbus, Neb., Aug. 12.—That continued cold nights, threateningly near the frost line, are menacing corn growth while cold days are halting its development under the sun was the declaration made here by A. A. Dodendorf, local weather observer. Sunday night's drop to 41 degrees was the coolest August temperature recorded here since August 28, 1911. The next coolest night was August 10, 1894, when frost was recorded. There were three August frost night records in 1863, the summer in which there was frost here every month.

Geneva, Neb., Aug. 12.—About half an inch of rain fell here yesterday, and the corn is booming along towards a bumper crop.

Wymore, Neb., Aug. 12.—A light shower over southern Gage county Sunday night cooled off the atmosphere and benefited the corn fields which are earing out in good shape in this vicinity. Hot winds during the latter part of last week had begun to burn several fields of corn on highways and at corners. In a trip over the southern part of the county Sunday afternoon fully one-fourth of the fields showed plainly the effects of the hot blasts. Several farmers in this vicinity have started their fall plowing, the ground appearing to be in fairly good shape.

Nebraska News Nubbins

Alma.—The marriage of Miss Lucille Baker, daughter of one of the oldest families of Alma, to Guy Johnson, cashier of the bank of Wilson, Kan., took place Sunday at Norton, Kan. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson motored to the mountains for their honeymoon. They will be at home in Wilsonville in September.

Beatrice.—George M. Cole, 64, formerly a resident of this city, and for years employed as an engineer on the M. & T. railroad with a run between Sedalia, Mo., and Parsons, Kan., died at a hospital in Sedalia, Mo. Before going to Missouri he had run on the Union Pacific between Beatrice and Manhattan, Kan.

Wymore.—Theodore Helmig, veteran druggist of Wymore, has left on a six weeks' vacation trip to his boyhood home in Peru, Ind., and other points in Indiana and Ohio. Helmig lived in Wymore for 32 years.

CURATOR SEEKS RESEARCH FUND

Columbus, Neb., Aug. 12.—Appropriations amounting to at least $10,000 for the use of the University and the State Historical society in further excavations and research along the Loup river valley from Genoa to Columbus next summer will be asked during the next session of the state legislature by E. E. Blackman, curator of the State Historical society at Lincoln.

Mr. Blackman, who has just returned to Lincoln after a six-weeks' series of excavations near Genoa, declares he has secured enough material of Spanish armor and harness equipment among the vast number of Indian relics, mounds and graves to convince him that a Spanish exploring expedition did visit this section in 1521. He is preparing also to appeal to Congressman Edgar Howard in attracting attention of the Smithsonian institute to the Loup river valley in which Mr. Blackman says his finds indicate lie buried ruins and relics of three vanishing races only awaiting men to dig them out.

Rock Bluffs Association Formed by Early Settlers

Plattsmouth, Neb., Aug. 12.—The annual old settlers' reunion at Union was attended by unusually large crowds this year. Friday was Rock Bluffs day and fully 200 of those who had at some time lived in the historic Missouri river town south of this city were present. From their pleasant reunion was formed a Rock Bluffs association that will make the home coming an annual event. Attorney C. L. Graves of Union is president and Dr. G. H. Gilmore, Murray, secretary, of the new association. All that is left of the old town is a few tumble down houses in the former outskirts, the swirling waters of the river now passing where business flourished in the days when boats brought produce to the new west.

Farm Bureau Held Illegal

Bedford, Ia., Aug. 12.—Taylor county farm bureau became a thing of the past when the county attorney gave final decision today that the articles of incorporation were illegal. The board refused this year's appropriation.

Lester Writes Diary of 8-Day Hike; Spirits Low When He Wrote to Sonia

"End in My Father's Arms," Last Sentence of Prodigal's Story.

By JOE JACOBS. Staff Correspondent The Omaha Bee. Chicago, Ill., Aug. 12.—Eight days of unusual and interesting experiences tell the story of the mysterious sojourn of Lester Lapidus which resulted in a nation-wide search ending yesterday in Chicago, where he was located by an Omaha Bee reporter aided by the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

The interesting story of the run-away of young Lapidus which caused much commotion and activity in Omaha, stretching across Iowa and far into Illinois, is contained in a diary the boy prepared exclusively for The Omaha Bee.

Tells of Letters. In the diary the boy tells of the letters written, how he departed from the citizens' military training camp, how he slept in fields. He tells of the treatment he received from the urbanist and the ruralist.

The Diary. Monday, 1 A. M.—Left Fort Des Moines; slept in a field near the fort; walked to Norwalk, Ia., arriving there at 6 a. m.; returned to Des Moines in an automobile; got train for Burlington at 8 a. m.

Tuesday.—Left at 6 in the evening; stopped at a farmhouse at Carmel, Ill., asked for work, didn't get it; was given free lodging and meals; people nice.

Wednesday.—Left farmhouse early Wednesday morning; trudged down road until met salesman, who gave me lift in automobile to Monmouth, Ill. Told salesman I was from Omaha and that my father was in the fixture and supply business; slept in salesman's car at Monmouth at night.

Thursday.—Same salesman drove me to Galesburg; arrived there about noon; had about 12. Walked into Arlington hotel and asked for stationery; then asked for mullage for stamp I had. Two letters I wrote I put in my pocket. I did not care to mail them that day. Went to municipal park; sat around and talked and read newspapers; did not learn about folk's worry about me. Slept in garage that night.

Friday.—Decided to mail letters to mother and "Sonny" Robinson. Left Galesburg on foot. I was feeling bad. Began to have the blues. I also had him when I wrote the letters. I walked out in the country and washed my self in a creek; caught in a heavy rain; sought refuge in a farmhouse. The weather made me feel worse. Left farmhouse after rain; picked up several short rides. Slept in hotel at Sheffield, Ill.

Saturday.—Left Sheffield at 9 a. m. feeling rather tired. Got short rides until I hit Joliet; walked out town; was inclined to go further east; slept in a field a short while. Then began to get further auto rides. Slept in garage.

Sunday.—Got further ride until I struck Chicago at 1 p. m. Looked over the town until 6 p. m. and went to City Hall hotel, where I took a seat in the lobby. The manager, a fine man, asked me what I wanted and I told him that I desired work. He asked me if I had money; I said I had 1 cent; he was very courteous; he gave me $1, which I took; he also gave me newspapers and I then went to Antlers' hotel, where I got a room. Read news papers of mother worrying about me.

Never Begged Food. Young Lapidus stated that he never begged for food or clothing. He only missed two meals during the eight days. His face, his father says, looks better than it did when he kissed him the Monday he hiked off for the citizens military training camp at Fort Des Moines.

Down the old cowpath trotted Old Man Coyote. Up the old cowpath trotted Reddy Fox. There was a little bend in the path which prevented each from seeing the other. Peter fairly hugged himself with excitement as he saw that they would meet right on that bend and right in front of where he was sitting. He wondered if he would see a fight. I am sorry to say that he rather hoped he would.

Reddy Fox came around that bend from down the old cowpath, and Old Man Coyote came around the bend from up the old cowpath. They met face to face. Peter held his breath. Both stopped. Then Reddy Fox jumped lightly to one side. "Pray pass, neighbor Coyote," said Reddy in his most polite manner.

Old Man Coyote trotted on. He hardly glanced at Reddy Fox. He acted exactly as if he thought himself lord of the Old Pasture and that "Pray pass, neighbor Coyote" said Reddy in his most polite manner.

Reddy in his most polite manner, everyone would step aside for him. Reddy Fox looked after Old Man Coyote and snarled. But he took pains that Old Man Coyote should hear that snarl. Only Peter Rabbit heard it. Then Reddy Fox trotted on up the old cowpath.

After the berries. The nesting season for most of the birds was over and their home duties were ended. There was no reason why they should not spend as much time as they choose in the Old Pasture. So those who liked berries spent considerable time there. Some of the Green Forest people who fear fur had children here enough to follow them out into the Great World, and so family parties visited the Old Pasture. So day after day the Old Pasture entertained. Old Jed Thumper, the gray old Rabbit, who had lived so long in the Old Pasture that he considered that it belonged to him, didn't like it. There were altogether too many people there for him.

Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote, who live in different parts of the Old Pasture and through most of the year do most of their hunting somewhere else, now spent much of their time right there in the Old Pasture. Each knew all about those family parties where the berries grew, and each was always hoping that he would have a chance to catch some of the younger members of those berry parties.

So it was that with so many in the Old Pasture there were some queer meetings. Peter Rabbit saw some of these queer meetings. Of course, Peter was up there. You can trust Peter to be where anything is going on. One morning he happened to be peeping out of a bramble tangle beside an old cowpath. Looking up the old cowpath, he saw Old Man Coyote coming down. Looking down the old cowpath, he saw Reddy Fox coming up. Neither had yet seen the other. Peter wondered what would happen when they met, and he became quite excited.
