

Girl, 15, Hiding in City's Underworld Mystifies Police

Bobs Up Three Times Under Mother's Nose to Disappear Again—Caused Trouble at Home.

Frances Mondon, 15, sometimes known as Peggy Martin, 1115 Blaine street, disappeared August 5 into Omaha's underworld, where, she had told her mother, her relatives or police could not find her. So far, the girl's boast has held true.

Police and friends have combed the city's darkest nooks, but have found no trace of the girl. Three times she bobbed up, then vanished again almost under her mother's nose.

The girl's mother received a mysterious telephone call Wednesday afternoon that her daughter was at 2469 Douglas street. The informant said that the girl was in convulsions.

The mother hurried to the address and found Frances, a deathly pallor suffusing her face, lying on a bed. Residents at the address begged her not to "bring the law" to the house, but the mother stepped into another room to call police. While she was at the phone the girl got up and walked from the house. When police arrived they scoured the neighborhood, but again the girl had disappeared.

Police are seeking two men in connection with the girl's disappearance on information furnished by the mother.

Frances was a student at St. Joseph parochial school. According to her mother, she was hard to govern. Her mother questioned her after observing her talking to one of the men now sought by police.

"I know where I can go and be hidden from the law, where no one can find me," she told her mother in a fit of temper. "He will hide me from everybody."

ESSEX, IA., GIRL ASKS HEART BALM

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Shenandoah, Ia., Aug. 28.—Damages of $30,000 are asked by Miss Ellen Youngren of Essex in a breach of promise suit filed in district court against Hilmer Fahleen.

Miss Youngren, in her petition, says that eight or nine years ago, Fahleen began to call upon her several times a month and after three or four years they became engaged. She says he now refuses to marry her.

Today Omahans View World's Pipe of Peace

With the arrival in Omaha today of Charles G. Dawes, republican candidate for vice president, the west is again introduced to that symbol of its early days, the pipe of peace. It is the Dawes pipe, the pipe that has meant so much to Europe and which has become the world pipe of peace.

Those to whom the history of the west is still clear, remember the story of the great peace council held on the bluffs overlooking the Missouri river. The city of Council Bluffs was named to commemorate that great peace council.

The pipe of peace was smoked in those days by William Clarke and Merrivether Lewis with the great Indian chieftain, Blackbird. The city of Omaha owes its birth to the smoking of a pipe of peace. Logan Fontenelle, chief of the Omaha Indians, ceded the land on which Omaha stands and a concluded the treaty by the smoking of a pipe of peace.

The memory of these peace pipes is fresh in the minds of the west. For that reason the new world pipe of peace, the Dawes pipe, is of more than usual interest. Until the Dawes peace pipe came to Europe there was no peace. In their efforts to bring peace to Europe there had been tried English pipes, French pipes, Italian pipes and German pipes. None of them had succeeded. It was only when Dawes went to Europe with a new pipe that the belligerent nations finally decided that the real peace pipe had arrived.

The Dawes pipe differs from all others and a humorist has said that probably its success in Europe was due to the cooling chamber at the bottom of the pipe.

The interest that attaches to Dawes in Omaha today is thus due not only to his accomplishments in Europe where the Dawes pipe is to be the charter of European recovery, but also to the famous Dawes pipe, which has become the pipe of peace for the world.

Back From Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fingerlon returned Wednesday from a tour of Europe. They have been gone since June 3.

Pershing Is Honor Guest at Beatrice

General Speaks at Courthouse Square on National Preparedness.

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee. Beatrice, Neb., Aug. 28.—Gen. John J. Pershing spoke to a large crowd on the courthouse square at noon today on national preparedness. Among other things he said: "Adequate preparedness for war by America would be the greatest move for peace America has ever made." He was introduced by Maj. J. C. E. Fisher of this city, former state commander of the American Legion.

General Pershing arrived in the city shortly before 12 from Lincoln, being accompanied by a committee from the officers' reserve corps. He was met at the outskirts of town by Company C which acted as a body guard and escorted him to the courthouse square.

Preceding his address, the general made a hurried inspection of Company C. At 12:30 he was guest of honor at a banquet.

The city was decorated with flags and other national colors in honor of the distinguished visitor. General

Pershing returned to Lincoln this afternoon at 2. This is his first visit to Beatrice in 29 years, when he was in charge of the Pershing rifles, a cadet company at the University of Nebraska.
