

Dawes Proposes "Dawes Plan" for Farm Problems

Economics, Not Politics, Solution, Says Nominee; Blames War for Agricultural Depression.

foreign competition as the Fordney tariff does now.

immigrants not factor.
"As to restricted immigration, considering the two periods of before the war and since the war, the difference in the number of immigrants is not yet such as to be a real factor in the difference in labor costs. Other reasons have operated there, including the proper organization of labor for its own protection.

Fair consideration of all elements in the situation leads one to the conclusion that the great underlying cause for the recent depression in agriculture has been the conditions resulting from the world war.

The recent situation in the American agricultural industry considered by itself is somewhat analogous to the European situation in industry at the inception of the work of the expert committee on reparations. So great was the necessity for settlement with Europe facing the abyss that almost any plan upon which the expert committee could have unanimously agreed might have been temporarily accepted, for it compelled Europe, for the first time, to think in alternatives.

Workable Plan Necessary.
"Even an unworkable plan, adopted unanimously at least might have provided the basis of a temporary economic peace. But if, influenced by nationalistic or political considerations there had been drawn an unworkable plan, because that was the basis, because upon its basis the nationalistic denigrations of the different countries could have been placated, the peace upon which Europe is about to enter would have been temporary, and the chaos which would have come as a result of the inevitable failure of such a plan probably would have marked the beginning of a new dark age for that continent and its civilization.

The difference between an economic and an unwise political settlement of what is to be done for American agriculture, through new legislation is the difference between success and failure. There must be most careful consideration of the application of economic principles, and also close calculation of the probable effectiveness of any proposed remedy.

The immediate political exigencies of the great political parties in this campaign would be settled if they could make the American agriculturalist believe in the fulfillment of an unfulfilled promise. But this must not be made a matter of political exigency. It must be considered without prejudice and from every standpoint.

After two years of discussion upon this point, a test as extensive as was ever devoted in the United States in the same space of time to an economic problem, it is at present clear that there is no consensus of either agricultural or economic opinion upon any of the proposed legislative remedies now under consideration. Under such circumstances, the same common sense method of procedure which led to the settlement of the difficulties of Europe should be followed in the search for the settlement of the American agricultural problem.

Co-operative Marketing.
Dawes also discussed the possibilities of co-operative marketing, declaring that the problems involved in co-operative marketing should receive most serious and continuous study to the end that this form of distribution may be established on sound lines which ultimately will bring results advantageous to the producer.

for these two young men is either kindness or mercy."

Dr. J. Gordon Bonine of Cassopolis, Mich., writes that "the people feel that Dawes has tricked the law and that the court has been imposed upon by a Nietzschean combination," and that, "whether these boys hang or not, this case has been a travesty upon medical testimony and legal procedure unless the court has been sufficiently and fairly informed."

A prominent Chicago doctor, who asked that his name not be used for obvious reasons, hinted that the testimony of the alienists might be the basis for an investigation by the American Medical society. It was hard to compromise the testimony of the alienists for the state and the alienists for the defense.

The cost of the trial to the state and the defense was estimated today at not less than $250,000. The cost to Cook county was approximately $60,000. It was the most costly trial on record for the county where the guilt of the defendants was not in question. What the state fought for was the death penalty—most serious of the penalties that could be inflicted.

Judge Caverly ended his term as chief justice of the criminal court today. His last act was to discharge the August grand jury. He will be succeeded by Judge Jacob Hopkins, who becomes chief justice Monday when the new term of court opens.

Between now and September 10, the date when he sentences Leopold and Loeb, Judge Caverly will be under armed guard. He expects to spend most of his time at his hotel on the fashionable north side of Chicago, but may go to a summer resort for a few days after he has reviewed the 2,000 pages of testimony.

"This case will be judged according to the law," Judge Caverly said today, "and not according to outside interest."

Leopold and Loeb will be closely guarded in their cells. Jail attaches were relieved when the spirits of the young slayers revived. There was a time during the trial when both youths were despondent and the warden feared they might attempt self-destruction.

As a state we are favored with that greatest of all blessings—an intelligent and tolerant citizenship, a citizenship that believes in the divine right of self advancement—a citizenship that teaches loyalty to established government and obedience to the law. It is upon those sterling qualities that we base our material advancement and provide for the general welfare of all the people.

Dawes Greeted by 25,000 on Arrival at Old Home Town

Nominee Waves or Tips Hat to Friends in Throng; Girls in White Form Escort.

By P. C. POWELL, Staff Correspondent of the Omaha Bee.
Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 29.—More than 25,000 persons lined the streets of Lincoln from the Burlington station to the Lindell hotel to see Charles G. Dawes. Streets and buildings were decorated with American flags and huge corn stalks were tied to every telephone and power pole.

Dawes' train arrived on schedule time. The vice presidential candidate stepped from the Pullman followed by Mrs. Dawes. He wore his famous straw hat and was smoking his "underlung" pipe.

Lincoln Boy Scouts, utilizing their scout staffs, made a pathway through the dense crowd, through which "Hell n' Maria" walked to the street.

Waves to Friends.
As he recognized old acquaintances in the crowd General Dawes waved greetings or tipped his hat if the acquaintance was a woman. Mrs. Dawes was bearing a large bouquet. The republican nominee was ushered into a car, liberally decorated in the national colors, where Mark W. Woods, chairman of the arrangements committee; H. E. Sackett, chairman of the republican state committee; and A. J. Donohoe, Omaha, awaited him.

Several hundred cars joined in the parade to the hotel. The Lincoln High school band and the Elks' band furnished music.

Fifty pretty girls between the ages of 16 and 22 marched behind the Dawes car. They were dressed entirely in white.

Five hundred men bearing large cornstalks were one of the features of the parade.

Fife and Drum Corps.
The candidate and Gen. John J. Pershing, who viewed the procession with friends from a window, waved a greeting to each other. The pair formerly ate at the same 15-cent lunch counter at Lincoln. Dawes was then a struggling young lawyer and Pershing a lieutenant.

When the Dawes car reached the Lindell hotel it drew to one side and the guest reviewed the marchers as they passed. Mr. and Mrs. Dawes shook hands with the girl marchers and seemed delighted by the cornstalk bearers.

The American Legion fife and drum corps seemed to make a deep impression on General Dawes.

After the parade had passed the vice presidential candidate entered the hotel and addressed the throngs from a canopied balcony. Mrs. Dawes stood by his side.

The honored visitor stepped to the railing of the balcony without waiting for an introduction. The crowd gave him a frenzied ovation. The candidate delivered a few straight forward remarks to his audience to whom he reiterated his extemporaneous policy in campaign speeches.

The general talk follows:
Happiest Years.
"I don't have to tell you how glad I am to return to Lincoln. I spent some of the happiest years of my life in this city and my children were born here. I always looked upon Lincoln as more of a home than any other city where I have lived."

"I want to tell you of the speech I am to make tonight. I worked hard on that speech than on all the other speeches put together. There is to be no demagoguery in it. It will be just as I think."

"To Be Myself."
That is what the country needs—men who say just what they think. I want to tell you right now that during the campaign I am going to be myself and do as I think best, no matter what politicians say. I am receiving avalanches of advice from their right now. What the politics of this country needs is for men to be themselves and not dodge issues in fear that some minority organization will do them harm."

The majority of the Nebraska republican delegates to the national convention were at the train to meet Dawes.

One of the first to shake his hand was Adam McMullen, candidate for governor, who will speak on the Dawes program tonight.

JUST LIKE GOING HOME, DAWES SAYS

really started at Ashland when 50 of his oldest friends, occupying a special car, joined the party. The General and Mrs. Dawes immediately left their own Pullman and marched through the train to greet their friends.

There were no formalities in this greeting. It was "Hello Jim" or "How are you John?" from one end of the car to the other. Indeed, the jollity was so great that the participants might well have been university students bound home for a vacation. When the general and his wife returned to their own car their faces beamed happily.

"What will become of all this corn?" inquired Dawes as he was riding from the station to the Lindell hotel. He referred to the giant stalks and ears of corn which were used to decorate the line of the parade.

"That's good corn, and I think it is the finest decoration I've ever seen but it shouldn't be wasted."

He was assured that the corn would be fed to stock at the state college of agriculture.

The general was cheered repeatedly during his short speech at the Lindell hotel. He stopped suddenly and said: "I'm much obliged." This concluded his speech and the crowd cheered harder than ever. It was pleased with this manner of ending the talk. Those close to the general noticed, however, that he had become a bit pale and he later explained that he was slightly indisposed as a result of having smoked his pipe before breakfast this morning.
