September Rivals June as Bridal Month

For the last several years September has loomed large as a bridal month. It has been a worthy rival of the long favored month of June with its proverbial rare days and roses. It will be recalled that during September a year ago, the prominent brides included Miss Rachel Metcalfe, who married Edward Phelps, Jr.; Miss Eleanor Carpenter, who was wed to Donald Pettis; Miss Maurine Richardson, whose marriage to Donald Robbins took her away from the city, as did the wedding of Miss Helen Howe to Philip Chase. A nearby September wedding which interested many Omahans was that of Miss Martha Morton to Frederic Latner at Nebraska City.

Miss Katharine Linchberg is among the first of this year's September brides. Her marriage to Lieut. Harold Meyer will take place September 6. Miss Marguerite Loback will be married to William Hart Alger, Jr., on September 17.

Miss Lucille Zimmer's engagement to Bernard R. Stone was announced last Monday. The wedding will be an event of the month as will that of Miss Loren Abarr.

Miss Gertrude Thiem and Dan Miller will be married on the evening of September 10. Miss Irene Simpson just misses being a September bride. Her marriage will be an event of October 1.

The Paul Shirleys Have Taken the Daily Home.

Paul Shirleys have taken the J. F. Dalley home in Fairview, and Mr. Shirley's sister, Mrs. Sophie Shirley McDermott, will move in Saturday to stay there until December when the Shirleys will return from Waterloo, Ia. Mrs. Shirley will spend next weekend here.

For Mrs. Quigley's Guests.

Dr. and Mrs. D. F. Quigley's guests, Mrs. A. F. Strietz and Miss Ruth Strietz of North Platte, have been honored with many affairs during the week, beginning with a dinner for 32 guests at Happy Hollow club Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Perri McGrew Harris gave a dinner at her home Thursday night for the visitors and Friday Mrs. Lee Hamlin entertained at a swim and chicken dinner at Waterloo. Mrs. William Jeffers will give a picnic dinner at Valley Saturday night for Mrs. Quigley's guests and Saturday noon Mrs. Quigley will be hostess at a luncheon for 10 at the Athletic club.

Week-End Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Strong Mr. and Mrs. Ben Boat and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gillette of Minneapolis arrive today to spend the week-end as the guests of Cuthbert Potter.

The party will be at the W. A. Redick home, though Judge and Mrs. Redick are summering in Minnesota. Friday Cuthbert Potter entertained at a buffet supper dance at the Country club for the guests. Saturday Mrs. Denman Kounitz will honor them at luncheon at her home. Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Lester Klapp will entertain at dinner and later the party will dance at the Country club. An all-day picnic is being planned for Sunday.

For Miss Simpson.

Added to the affairs given for Miss Irene Simpson, bride-to-be, is a luncheon to be given by Misses Katharine and Charlotte Denny on Thursday at Happy Hollow. Miss Frances Patton is entertaining Friday, September 5, at bridge. Lois Thompson will give a bridge September 12, and Miss Josephine Platner will be a hostess September 13.

Kenneth Metcalfe Host.

Kenneth Metcalfe will entertain at dinner September 9 at his home for Miss Alice Mary Turney and her fiancé, Maynard Buchanan, who are to wed September 17.

Mr. Metcalfe will serve Mr. Buchanan as best man.

Book Club.

The book committee of the Book club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. C. W. Morton, Jr., to make plans for the year's reading.

Comus Club.

Mrs. Ben F. Marti will entertain the Comus club at a bridge-luncheon at Lakoma club Wednesday, September 3 at 1 p. m.

Your Problems

Martha Allen

Unsatisfactory Service.
Dear Martha Allen: Just a word for Sally, who doesn't want to sharpen her employer's pencils. She's missing out on the little joys of working. I work for a millionaire, a man who with all his wealth, is just as rich in friends. Why? Because he isn't above doing little things for people. It puts a little pep in me. Just trying to get down to the office ahead of him mornings, so that his ink well will be filled, his pencils sharpened, his waste basket where he can hit it. The curtains adjusted so the light won't strike him, etc.; little things that he never asks me to do, but that I know he appreciates. Why Sally, I even slide his cuspidor over in the direction toward which he aims! And I'm not the farthest down on the payroll either. Strike the happy medium in your attitude, Sally, and you'll be the happier.

JEANE.

That's service, Jeane! Your spirit is commendable. You have touched on one subject, however, about which I am "old-fashioned," cuspidors! But if you're willing to slide your boss' spittoon over in his direction, why should I try to educate you and rob you of such a simple, though unsatisfactory joy.

Another Girl.

Dear Miss Allen: I am a girl of 26 and am in love with a boy of the same age. We went together until two weeks ago and were deeply in love. He stopped calling on me very sudden and didn't give any reason. Now, Miss Allen, how can I tell him that I love him? It would break my heart if he stopped seeing me. Please answer soon in The Omaha Evening Bee, as it is urgent.

A LOVESICK GIRL.

I wish my reply would mend the trouble, but I know it can't. Have you quarreled or had a misunderstanding? There must be some reason. Perhaps—though I hope not for your sake—it is another girl.

See News Stand.

Dear Miss Allen: I would like to know of a person that is editor of a short story magazine. Will you please send me the name and address of a few of them?

I will be greatly pleased if you do this.

BLUE EYES.

Bride of Tuesday

Mrs. Robert G. Forbes.

Miss Margaret Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ren Lee of Clarinda, Ia., was married Tuesday evening, August 26, 6:30 o'clock, to Robert G. Forbes of Beaver Falls, Pa. The bride was given away by her father, Rev. M. S. McMillan of the Reformed Presbyterian church officiating. Miss Dorothe Anderson sang "At Dawning," and the processional and recessional were played by Miss Margaret Mason, member of the faculty of the New England conservatory, Boston.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of Geneva college, Beaver Falls, Pa., where they were prominent in athletics and dramatics. Mr. Forbes starred in football and both were basketball team captains.

Mr. and Mrs. Forbes are motoring east to make their home in Ellwood City, Pa.

Mrs. Forbes is a niece of Rufus E. Lee of Omaha. Mr. and Mrs. Lee and family were in Clarinda for the wedding.

For Mrs. Burr.

A number of affairs are being given in honor of Mrs. Sidney R. Burr, who, with her daughters, Misses Helen and Virginia Burr, leave next week to make her home in Denver. Mrs. Burr was formerly Miss Helen Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Huntington.

Mrs. E. L. Binkley entertained at a bridge-luncheon Thursday at her home for Mrs. Burr, and Mrs. Arthur Woodruff gave a bridge Friday. Mrs. Leslie Clancy and Mrs. Kenneth Willmarth will entertain at a luncheon Saturday at the Brandeis restaurants for Mrs. Burr.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Phelps and Mrs. Frank W. Baker have been other hostesses.

For Affianced Couple.

Miss Nellie Roecker and John Wadsworth of Council Bluffs, who will be married on August 30, were honor guests at a dinner which Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Loomis of this city gave Friday at the Field club.

Mrs. Benolken Hostess.

Mrs. Irving Benolken will entertain at a picnic and swim on Wednesday for Mrs. Charles Clarke, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wemper of Council Bluffs.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Why Is Katie Strangely Rude to Mollie Fawcett?

Katherine whispered no word of warning to me to control my facial muscles. She knew that the clasp of her arms, the certainty that my face was shielded from any other gaze than her own, the second of repulse she had given me were sufficient to enable me to smooth out my rasped nerves.

With a convulsive little answering clasp of her strong tender arms, I released myself from them, and with a calmness of face and voice for which I knew I should pay later, I turned to the group composed of Junior, Marion and Mollie Fawcett.

The girl had not yet risen from the kneeling posture she had assumed when she drew Junior into her arms with her promise of a story. And my small son, though he obediently had taken the hand Marion had held out to him at Katherine's whispered command, to gather eggs for my breakfast, was looking back at her with a wistful, worried expression.

"Doesn't she have eggs for breakfast, too?" he demanded, and there was such thwarted hospitality in his baby tones, that I found it comparatively easy to join in the laughter with which the others greeted his query.

"Of course, Junior," I compelled my voice to a loving reassurance which should sound plausible to my listeners. "And you're going to get them for her." Then with the foolish impulse for over atonement which is so purely a feminine attribute, I added: "You'd love to get eggs for the pretty lady, wouldn't you?"

Junior's Declaration.

I firmly believe that there is a spiritual rapport between mother and child which is shared by no one else, and I never had it more pointedly brought to my notice than in my little lad's reaction to my question. He twisted himself out of Marion's grasp and ran to me.

"I want to get eggs for both of you," he explained. "For you and the pretty lady. But I want to get self, and I promptly left the kitchen, catching a glimpse of Jim as I did so.

He had been standing in the other door unnoticed by me, and he was regarding Katie with a mixture of loving admiration, amused tolerance and puzzled displeasure which has been his attitude toward her ever since their marriage. Displeasure was predominant, however, and I realized that some connubial disagreement had preceded Katie's rudeness. But why had she centered her displeasure upon unoffending Mollie Fawcett, who had just come to the house?

My apparent nonchalance may have been taken at par value by Mollie Fawcett, Marion and Katie, but Katherine was in no whit deceived by it. I saw that by the look in her face, but characteristically she made no comment either then or afterward, only seconded my efforts to make Mollie Fawcett feel at home in the environment of the farmhouse, so utterly foreign to anything she had ever known before.

"Snake in the Grass."

We breakfasted royally on an omelette of new laid eggs gathered by Junior and cooked by Katie as the culinary triumph of the meal.

"This is a most delicious omelette, Katie," I said to my faithful little maid as she brought me a pot of fresh coffee.

"I never tasted anything so nice," Mollie Fawcett commented.

To my surprise, Katie tossed her head with a look upon her face which I knew of old spelled displeasure. "Get good enough," she snapped, and whisked out of the room.

Mollie Fawcett evinced her innate good breeding, by going on with her breakfast without a sign that she had heard Katie's rudeness, and I smothered my first impulse to apologize for my little maid. It was better to let the incident pass for the present, I thought, but at the first opportunity after breakfast, I sought the kitchen.

"Why were you so rude at breakfast, Katie?" I began, but my little maid evaded all issues by her time-honored ruse of throwing her apron over her head, and breaking into sobs, which, however, she interspersed with a few hysterical epithets, like, "cat," and "snake in the grass," which, I judged, referred to my young guest.

There is nothing to do in Katie's tantrums save to leave her to her-

Miss Constance Platt Weds Earl Lowry.

Cards have been received by friends in this city announcing the marriage on Monday, August 18, of Miss Constance Platt to O. Earl Lowry, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Lowry of Pawnee City. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Platt, Montezuma, Ia.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowry will reside in Omaha.

Before her marriage the bride was physical education director in the Omaha Central High school.
