Auxiliary Head

Mrs. C. E. McGlasson HEYN PHOTO

Mrs. C. E. McGlasson was elected state president of the American Legion auxiliary at the state convention held last week at Grand Island. She was a charter member of the Lincoln chapter of the auxiliary. For two years she was chairman of the hospital and welfare committees of the organization, and she served as president of the local unit in 1923.

At the first state convention of the auxiliary Mrs. McGlasson was elected first district committeewoman and served on the state executive board, and for two years was state chairman of the hospital and welfare work. The work of that department includes many things which are done for the Nebraska ex-service men who are hospitalized in other states, directing the units in sending boxes once a month, making quilts, comfort kits, layettes, clothing of all kinds, and sending jellies, jams, fruit and 50 dozen cookies a week to the shut-in soldiers, and supplying them with games and magazines, in addition to furnishing funds for recreational purposes.

Mrs. McGlasson has had charge of the state poppy campaigns for the last four years, sending an average of 100,000 poppies a year to the different state units. She is eligible to membership in the American Legion auxiliary through her son, Harold McGlasson, who enlisted May 11, 1917. He was at Fort Snelling training camp from that time until August 15, when he was commissioned second lieutenant and assigned to immediate service in France, leaving the states September 2 with the 26th division of the 102d Infantry. Your Problems

Martha Allen

Conspiring Mother.

Dear Miss Martha Allen: I am coming to you for advice. Last fall my daughter met a nice young man and their acquaintance became strong love. Just lately he came to visit her and everything seemed to go all right, but in the last week she has turned him down without cause. Now, this young man is broken-hearted and has asked me to help him. What am I to do and how shall I go about it? Please answer. B. B. B.

Rather a strange role, a mother conspiring with a young man over a daughter who doesn't seem to care for him. What reason does she give? If the young man is very desirable it is all right for you to make him welcome at your house and to advise your daughter of his good qualities, but if your daughter does not like him and does not care to marry him, there isn't much you can do. You should not try to force anyone on your daughter's notice when she does not care for.

Marriage Ceremony.

Dear Miss Allen: Will you please publish a copy of the marriage ceremony? I think it would be a good thing if all married folks would keep a copy handy to remind them of their vows, don't you?

Thank you very much. Sincerely, MRS. Z.

There are many different marriage ceremonies. I don't publish things in these columns which people can find for themselves. Yes, I think it is a good thing for people to be reminded of their vows.

Flirt and Flapper: Across the corner, a stamp means "I love you," and in the lower corner, "I hate you." But don't indulge in these external messages. They are too unkind to postal officials. Do your talking inside the letter. You are young to go regularly with boys, but if, as you say, you behave properly, I think it is better to allow a boy to take you home from a party than to go alone or with a girl friend.

"My Husband's Love"

The Way Katie Spoke "Vim Little Piece."

As Katie finished elucidating her primitive philosophy, Jim came up to us, a perspiring and palpably perturbed Jim, who, I fancied, looked relieved when he saw that Katherine's hands and mine still held his furious little wife in a firm grasp. From her position facing us Katie could neither have seen nor heard his approach, but some psychic little warning made her conscious of his proximity, and she turned her head toward him just as he broke into hurried, shamefaced speech.

"Now Katie," he began, "what's the matter? I only—"

Katie looked him over with her nose elevated to an angle which evidently, she fondly believed spelled dignified contempt. With an interchange of slight comprehending nods Katherine and I released our grip upon her arms.

My maid's attack of jealous frenzy had passed its peak. She had ceased to be dangerous. From now on she would be only amusing.

"Vot matter mit me," she repeated loftily. "Dere's nothings matter mit me. I'm all to dot gravy, you bet your boots; and all vool und vun yard vide! It's a good vatter, poor feesh, hanging on to horse und dancing cop und down like vun jack-in-box. You ecom on to houce und—"

"We heard no more, for realizing that Jim's crowning humiliation would be the knowledge that anyone was listening to his wife's tirade, Katherine and I slipped away at her first words and walked swiftly back upon the path we had just traveled.

But Katie's voice is high pitched.

FINE RASH ON FACE AND ARMS

Itched and Burned. Lost Rest. Cuticura Heals.

"The first appearance of the eczema was in a fine rash which broke out on my face and arms. It itched and burned, causing me to scratch and irritate the affected parts. The scratching caused sore eruptions which disfigured my face, and I lost my rest at night on account of the irritation."
"The trouble lasted about five months. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time could see an improvement. I continued the treatment and in about three months I was healed."

and we could not help overhearing the first part of her lecture. A turn in the path gave us an opportunity to look back, ourselves unseen, and witness the exit of the actors in the little conjugal drama.
Katie, evidently having finished what she herself would have described as the "speaking of vim little piece," was majestically stalking toward the house, while a few paces behind her plodded Jim, a dejected, subdued, corralled Jim very different from the animated, interested figure which had held Mollie Fawcett's saddle in place.
I gazed at him with curious interest, for while Katie in her tempestuous, amusing fashion always has ordered her big, indulgent, easy-going husband around, there never has been any question in all our minds that Jim was distinctly the dominating figure of their ménage. But temporarily at least, Jim was a dethroned monarch.
Katherine touched my shoulder, and I turned to see that her gaze was mirthfully following mine.
"An 'e learned abaht wimmen from 'er," she commented, with a little laugh, as we turned our footsteps toward the hill again. "But I fancy, my dear"—this more soberly—"that you'll have your own troubles with Katie, if Miss Fawcett keeps up this role of general fascinator to everything masculine within reach of her eyes and smile, which, unfortunately, includes Jim."
"I shall have no trouble at all," I returned, voicing a decision I had made within the last few minutes. "In the first place I shall read the riot act to Katie, and in the second place I shall speak very frankly to Mollie Fawcett, and ask her to—"
I hesitated and Katherine finished the sentence for me.
"Turn her eyes away from the masculine members of the household?" she merrily asked, and then her cheeks flamed crimson, and I know that mentally she was anathematizing her own untimely jest.
I was thankful, indeed, that I was able to answer her steadily, for even though I knew that there was not the faintest scintilla of malice in her query, yet I did not wish her to know how close to the mark her idle verbal arrow had sped.
"No, she may vamp Junior and Dickie and poor moonstruck Jerry Ticer as much as she pleases," I answered with an assumed nonchalance. "But she must leave Jim alone."
"I have an idea she'll do that without your asking her," Katherine said dryly, indicating the slender figure of
