

Sen. Norris Raps Partisanship of William J. Bryan

Senator Says Commoner Tries to Make Wall Street "Saintly" Because It Backs Democrats.

saintly as soon as it backs democrats for office. It is the old story, over and over again, showing the wonderful power of partisanship that warps men's judgment and leads them to do things and support men and measures that without the influence of this sinister power, they would condemn in burning words of denunciation.

Bryan Does Not Deceive.

"And will such conduct deceive the people? Are not the people sufficiently intelligent to see through such jumping and flipping, and will they not be able to discriminate at the ballot box between honest-minded men who do what they believe to be right regardless of party control and those who are clamoring for regularity and party solidarity?"

"Mr. Bryan has for many years led a conspicuous life in behalf of higher morals in government. His eloquent tongue has pleaded from thousands of rostrums in behalf of down-trodden humanity, but he is as completely blinded by partisanship as the mole that burrows in the ground beneath our feet. The good that he has been able to do during his strenuous life would be multiplied many thousand fold if the partisan scales could be dropped from his eyes and he could realize that the sins of iniquity and selfish greed are so often covered up by the mantle of partisan politics.

"Partisanship has often made this great leader not only inconsistent but foolish. He could sleep all night on the narrow edge of a 2x4 if it were part of a democratic structure and have pleasant dreams through it all." The senator denounced the democrats for the administration of the law which set the price of wheat during the war. He said that it had been the intention of congress to make the set price the minimum, not the maximum, and he accused the democratic administration of deliberately nullifying the intent of congress by making the set price a maximum instead of a minimum price. Referring to this chapter in war-time history, the senator said:

Demos Upset Wheat Bill.

"During the war we fixed what was intended to be the minimum price of wheat. Congress passed the law with the best of intentions. It was not intended that the minimum price should become the maximum price, but it was offered as a guarantee while the war was on, in order to induce men to raise wheat with the knowledge that they could have a certain minimum price even if the war ended before the crop was harvested. Its very intention was to increase the supply.

"It was a war measure, intended to bring about an increase of food in order that the war might be carried to a successful termination. The law provided for the necessary machinery, placed in the hands of the executive department, to carry out its provisions. This power to give the law effect was used by the executive in building up a wonderful machine which absolutely controlled the price of wheat, with the result that the minimum price was made, by executive action, the maximum price, and while the prices of all other products and for all other commodities were allowed to soar according to the law of supply and demand, the wheat farmer was held down to this price and deprived of billions of dollars of income that would otherwise have been his.

Raps Intermediate Credit Bank.

"The price of his labor, the charges for his freight, the price of his machinery, and everything else that he had to buy, soared without limit, but the product of the farmer was limited in price and held strictly to what was intended by congress to be only a minimum price.

"Again, we ought to pause and consider for a moment the partisan aspect of this law. It was entirely in the hands of the democratic administration, and if those who believe in party responsibility without any individual responsibility are correct, then they ought to admit that this unfair condition heaped upon the farmer, is entirely and solely chargeable to the democratic party."

The senator said that not all the farmers' difficulties could be handled by legislation. In this connection he referred to the bill which he had introduced which would have established a giant government buying and selling corporation to handle farm products. He charged that the "machines" in both parties combined to defeat this bill. He charged also that as substitutes the administration had brought forward the plan of the War Finance corporation to loan money to farmers needing credit, and the establishment of the intermediate credit banks, for the purpose of aiding in the defeat of the bill which he had introduced.

Criticizes Railroads.

Both of these measures, however, he admitted had brought some benefit, but he insisted that his bill would have really solved most of the farmer's troubles by enabling the sale of farm products in foreign countries at a better price to the farmers and a lower price to the consumers. The Esch-Cummings law was referred to and while he did not directly charge that the figure set in that law as a proper earning for the railroads was a guarantee, he said he would leave it to his audience to determine.

He severely criticized the railroads and charged that they were the "great middlemen" who were taking a toll on all farm products sold, and adding an additional toll on all products that the farmers must buy. He advanced his own remedy for this situation—the establishment of a government corporation with power to condemn railroads, and to buy them, and with power to build new lines. He would not have complete government ownership of all railroad lines, but only the key lines. This, he contended, would result in forcing lower railroad rates.

Urges Elective Power.

The senator pointed out the immense growth that lies directly ahead in the establishment of electric power plants and urged that in this situation, too, there should be government ownership of the key positions for the purpose of controlling rates. In this connection he covered the issue of Muscle Shoals and the Ford offer. He praised Henry Ford but said he was opposed to letting him have the water power developed at Muscle Shoals for a period of one hundred years. In this connection he paid his respects to Senator "Pat" Harrison of Mississippi. Harrison helped to draft the water power plank of the democratic party. In referring to Harrison, he said:

"It is amusing to read the plank of the democratic platform in regard to our natural resources, and then to realize that some of the men who drafted that platform have been most active in trying to turn Muscle Shoals over to Henry Ford. Even the great senator for whom I have a very high personal regard, who traveled all the way from Mississippi to Lincoln, Neb., to notify one of our citizens that he had been nominated for vice president, and who helped to frame that particular plank, has worked day and night while in the senate to turn this great natural resource of the people over to a private corporation that would be organized by Henry Ford."

Assents to World Court.

In international questions the senator urged arbitration and seemingly gave his assent to the World Court in the following language: "I will do everything within my power to advance the settlement of international disputes in courts of reason, rather than on the field of battle."

Station and Roosevelt Boulder to Be Dedicated

Shenandoah, Ia., Sept. 23.—A new $35,000 Burlington and a boulder placed by the Kiwanis club on the station plaza, where President Theodore Roosevelt spoke April 28, 1905. He urged the elimination of "time-duck congresses" and advocated publicity for income tax returns. He denounced the Versailles treaty.

Cedar Rapids Resident Ends Life in Cornfield

Albia, Neb., Sept. 23.—Ed Dugan, 35, committed suicide Saturday at Cedar Rapids, in this county, by drinking carbolic acid. He was formerly a farmer, but owing to poor health had moved to the village of Cedar Rapids. He disappeared Saturday. Sunday he was found in a cornfield about half a mile from town. He leaves a wife and four children.

Samples of Liquor Confiscated in Raid Are to Be Analyzed

Nebraska City, Sept. 23.—Ben R. Allen, in whose henhouse the sheriff, bearing a warrant sworn out by the county attorney, found nearly 700 gallons of liquor, alleged to be elderly wine, appeared in county court and pleaded not guilty to a complaint charging him with possession of intoxicating liquor. He was released on his own recognizance until September 28.

Samples of the liquor taken in the raid have been sent to the state chemist for analysis. Allen declares that the liquor is nontoxicating and that he made it for vinegar. It is said that he has been selling the liquor for some time and it was the appearance of men at his home almost nightly that caused him to be suspected of selling booze.

ILLNESS FATAL TO H. L. FRIEDRICHS

H. L. Friedrichs, 63, died Monday morning at a local hospital after an illness of three months. He is survived only by his widow.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 from the Stack chapel, with burial in Forest Lawn.

Reception Given Teachers.

Allen, Neb., Sept. 23.—The Woman's club gave a reception to the teachers of the public schools here, refreshments being served at the close of a program. Closer relationship between the patrons and teachers was urged.

Her Wonderful Teeth

Remove the dingy film that's clouding yours and you'll be surprised that your teeth are just as white and charming as any one's—make this unique test.

HERE is a simple test that proves the truth that most of us have pretty teeth without ever knowing the how, or ever revealing it.

This is the reason:

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film. A film which absorbs discolorations and hides the natural color of your teeth.

Remove it and your teeth take on a new beauty. Maybe you have really beautiful teeth without realizing it.

Film is charged too with most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

So, besides loss of tooth beauty, film is a serious danger to healthy teeth. You must remove and constantly combat it. It is ever present, ever forming.

Old-time dentifrices were unable to combat it successfully. And tooth troubles were a serious problem.

Now modern science has discovered a new way. A new-type tooth paste called Pepsodent that acts to curdle film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap or chalk, no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

Mail the coupon for a 10-day tube free. Or, buy a full size tube at any druggist's today. See what beauty lies beneath the film on your teeth.
