

Today
Idealism and Flying.
Religion in Schools.
Hang Him Twice.
Big Business Questions.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

President Coolidge, praising the Red Cross, suggests that wars be eliminated by "practical idealism" is a beautiful abstract thought. For the United States just now, however, the best peace insurance would be found in 10,000 practical fliers, with first-class machines to fly in, capable of carrying mail in peace time, bombs and poison gas in war.

Practical power enables a nation to develop its "practical idealism" without being suddenly knocked over the head in the midst of its idealism.

In a California decision, the state attorney general forbids, in public schools, even the Lord's prayer, in the way of religion. There is no doubt that the public school system should teach the three R's and other positive knowledge, leaving religious teaching to the discretion of parents.

It is wise to keep all religious teaching or favoritism out of public schools. On the other hand, it is unwise, and an outrageous interference with the rights of parents, to tell them that they cannot at their own expense, send their children to private or parochial schools where religion is taught—provided that educational requirements are met.

Bishop Hughes, presiding over the Methodist Episcopal church, says that, apart from his general views on capital punishment, he would hang the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, who killed his own wife to get another woman and made that woman kill her husband.

Capital punishment is admirable, but an exception in its favor might be well made in the case of the Rev. Mr. Hight. If it were possible, he ought to be hanged twice, once for a double murder and once for disgracing a most noble, unselfish calling. They used to do that in China, strangling a man almost to death a dozen times or more, before killing him. They used to saw criminals lengthwise, for perjury.

When you hear talk against "big business" as though it were a bad thing in itself, ask a few questions. Did you know that Canada and Australia are in a combination—properly—to help each other's business at the expense of the United States?

Did you know that Germany and France, enemies in other things, combine to regulate and maintain the prices that the United States must pay for fertilizer?

Are you aware that Czecho-Slovakia and Rumania are preparing a "trade defense pact"?

It is necessary to have "big business" to meet and compete with "big business" across the ocean, which is organized on an international scale.

The duke of Devonshire's house in Piccadilly is to be pulled down—many Americans remember the yellow wall around it. The site will be occupied by apartments on the American plan, and an American architect, Thomas Hastings, will boss the job. Hastings is the man who got the gold medal from the Tower of Babel.

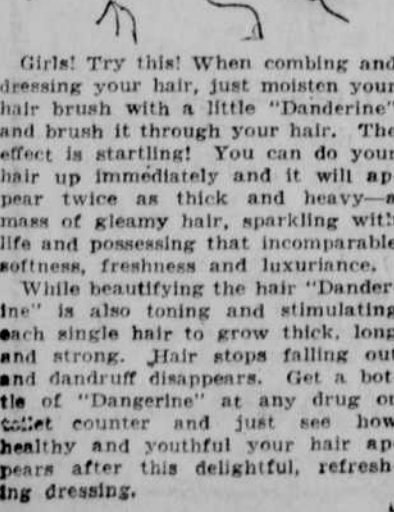

The English are willing to learn even from an American. They could learn a great deal about practical building from L. J. Horowitz, who is there now.

On big building operations in England they still have men crawling up ladders, carrying bricks and mortar, as they probably did on the Tower of Babel.

Frelinghuysen, formerly senator from New Jersey, has bought the Newark Press, a tabloid evening newspaper.
