

INSEPARABLE COMPANIONS—this cat and dog give the lie to the old adage that the canines and the feline do not get along. They play together like frolicsome puppies and rarely are seen away from each other.

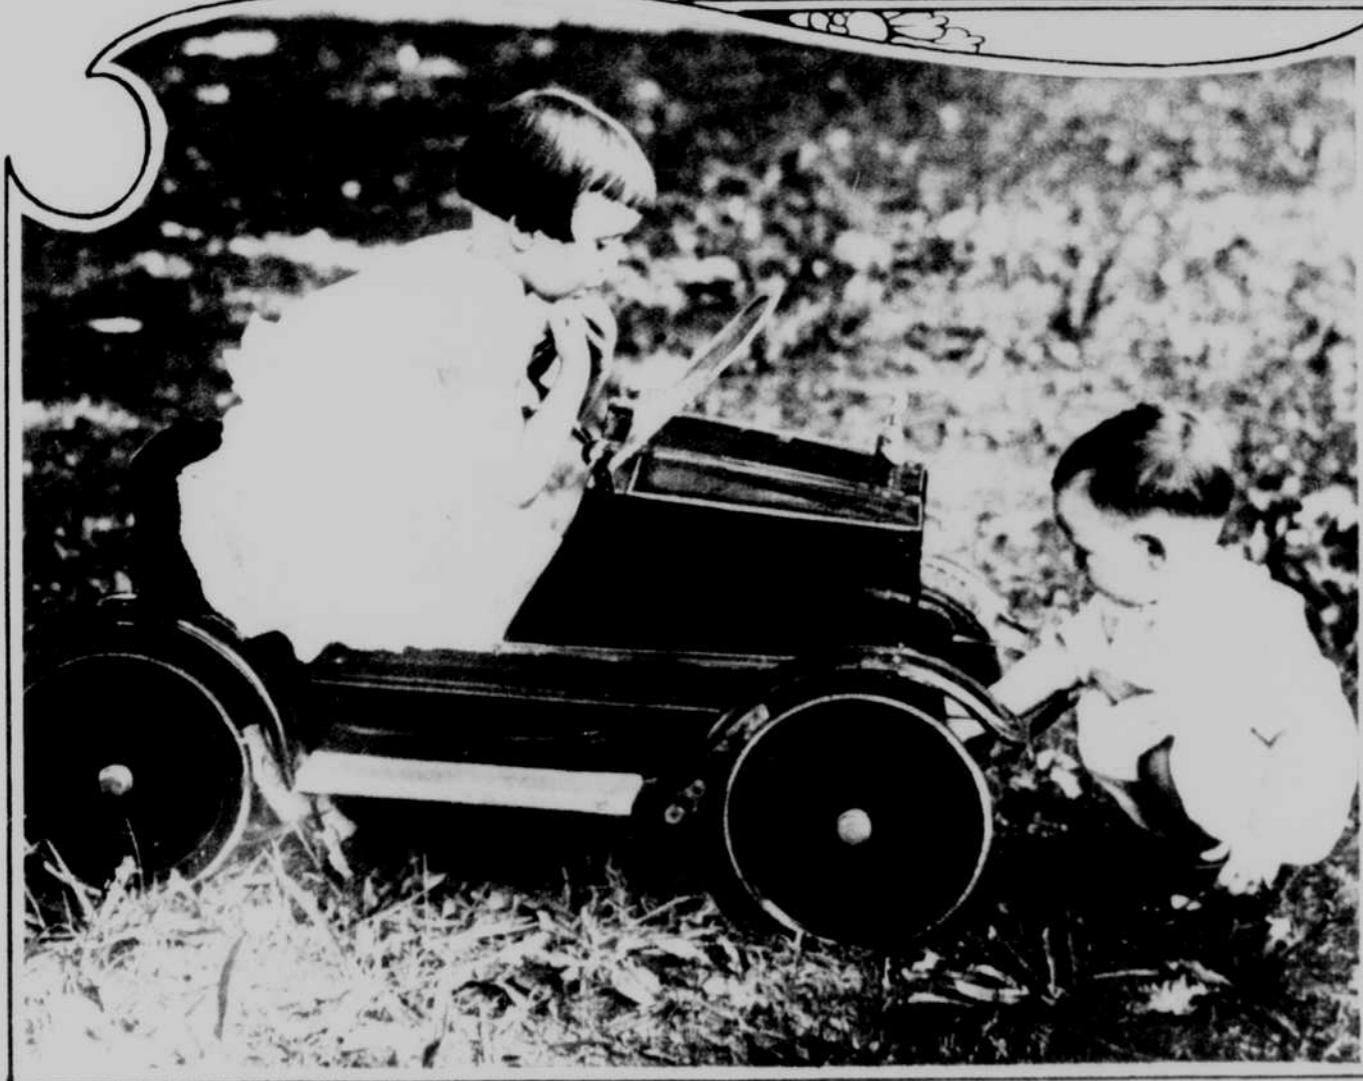

WHAT NATIONALITY ARE THESE BIRDS? Martin Shallenberger, jr., grandson of Congressman A. C. Shallenberger of Nebraska, was given a pair of Hartz mountain canaries in Vienna just before he started for Atlanta, Ga. They laid an egg in London, another in mid-ocean and the two were hatched out in a Pullman car the night before Atlanta was reached. In spite of this very cosmopolitan outlook with which the birds started, young Shallenberger has named his pets Caruso and Scotti.

A BIT OF NEBRASKA TIMBER LAND. Charles A. Pease of Blair sawing lumber on one of the Woods brothers' farms near DeSota. There is 132,000 feet of lumber in this picture.

BRINGING HOME THE NOT THE BACON, but the partridge shot down by the member of a party of English hotel visitors who went to Woodlands farm near Exbridge, England the center of excellent hunting for partridge which are a particularly delicious food at this season of the year. P. & A. photo.

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND. This is not a Briggs cartoon, but an actual photo of a very serious breakdown. The young man is having difficulty in getting the "ol' bus" started.

WHERE ROBBING MUST HAVE ORIGINATED. These native women of South Africa apparently spend as much time on their "crowning glories" as their western sisters. P. & A. photo.