Daughter of English Artist Among Autumn Visitors

Guests Already Here Are Being Quietly Entertained

Arriving Sunday to visit Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Dietz, will be Miss Kitty Sadler, daughter of the late W. Denby Sadler, English artist. Miss Sadler will probably spend the winter here. Mr. Sadler's paintings were mostly landscapes done in oil.

Entertaining is going on, though rather quietly, for visitors already in the city. Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Gifford will give a dinner Saturday evening for Mrs. Gifford's sister, Miss Irene Carter, and Mrs. George Radcliffe, who returned last week from Mrs. Radcliffe's home in Dayton, O.

Mr. Lee Huff, jr., will entertain at luncheon Wednesday for Miss Katherine Selby, who recently returned to Omaha with her mother, Mrs. W. L. Selby, to make her home, after several years' residence in California.

Mrs. E. P. Boyer is expecting as her guests from Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. Will Bruce, who will arrive Thursday. Their hostess will give a dinner party in their honor.

Miss Mary Morsman will entertain informally at bridge Tuesday evening for Miss Beatrice Constant of New York, who has been visiting Miss Jean Palmer, and who became Miss Morsman's guest today.

Your Problems

Martha Allen

Apologies Due. Dear Miss Allen: Would you be kind enough to give your opinion of the following incident:

Another couple, my lady friend and I were going on a trip by train. The young man who was with the other young lady had a bottle of wine with him. He opened it on the train and we drank.

The ladies got peevish about this, saying we disgraced them because we talked so loud and fooled around so. I am not a man who cares for any of that stuff, but I wanted to be sociable and that was the result.

I have apologized to my lady friend but she still seems peevish about it. Would you kindly advise me whether or you consider me not a gentleman after doing such a thing? I have always been one before and will continue to be one, but she said a gentleman would not act the way I did. I did nothing to hurt her. Only I spoke loudly. I have always held this young lady in the greatest honor and respect.

CONSTANT READER. All you can do, my friend, is to apologize to the young lady, promise not to do such a thing in the future—and then keep your promise.

It is natural that she should be vexed. Nobly, considerate attention of a man under the influence of liquor are disgusting to any woman.

Of course what you did was not gentlemanly. But since you are a gentleman and mean to prove that you are in earnest in all you have promised by keeping your word, I have no doubt that she will forgive you.

Embers of Love. Dear Miss Allen: I am in a world of trouble and need your advice.

About a year ago I was engaged to a young man and loved him dearly. He asked me not to go about with anyone else. I was young and foolish and would not do as he asked, and our engagement was broken.

Now I want so much to win him back. He is in a distant city. How can I gain his love again? Should I write him first and tell him that I still love him? Must I try to forget him? He is the only man I ever loved.

HEARTBROKEN. What makes you think that things would be different now? Would you be willing now to give up all your other friends and be true to this one young man?

Would you appreciate him now? Or would you feel tempted after a while to show how smart and popular you are by trying to make him jealous?

Think all this over very carefully before you write him. Remember, he may in the meantime have found a girl who is unselfish and kind and he may not wish to take a chance again. On the other hand he may be glad to hear from you.

I would, if I were you, write him a bright, friendly letter. Tell him you have been thinking about him and would love to hear from him. Then wait and see whether he answers.

G. A. M.: No one but a competent physician should prescribe a diet. The whole world knows, however, that sweets and starchy foods are fattening. Fruits, vegetables (except the starchy ones), and even meats, are so fat producing. Exercise will do more to reduce you than anything else.

Orange juice and toast ought to be enough breakfast for you, unless you are doing physical work. A very light luncheon of such things as apple sauce, corn bread or light salads should suffice. A meal of meat, vegetables and dessert at night would then be allowable.

Gas Fires. When a gas fire is fitted into an old grate have the grate itself covered with sheet iron. This will prevent blow downs, and the grate will not be a distaste.

A Wife's Confessional

Revelations of a Wife

The Surprising Thing Katie Showed Madge.

"Hush!" I whispered warningly, even as I flushed with pleasure at the genuine admiration in Dicky's voice as he uttered the whimsical compliment upon my success in "managing" his mother. "Remember, your mother does not yet know where you are."

He threw up his arms. "And she'll never let up until she sees that I'm safely tucked up for the night," he groaned. "Put your thinking cap on Mrs. Machiavelli. Your stunt isn't finished yet."

"Children's play," I retorted scornfully. "That is, if you don't decide to prove that the hatchet-and-cherry tree story might have been true and refuse to tell a tarradiddle when I've paved the way for you."

"I'm not the one with the Puritan complex," he said slyly, but I ignored him and moved toward the door.

"I'll go to your mother's room now, under pretense of asking her about breakfast," I said, "and when you hear the door close behind me you—"

"Beat it down the backstairs, cut around to the front door, slam it and come up stairs whistling," he interrupted. "You see, you're not the only think-tank hitting on all six."

"If your mother hears you," I retorted with a grin. "Run along, old dear on your errand of mercy."

I unlocked the door noiselessly, opened it by inches and seeing that the hall was clear, went swiftly down the hall to my mother-in-law's room, knowing that Dicky was applying a weary eye to the narrow space where I had left the door ajar

"Come in," she said acidly when I had knocked, and her short query, "Well, what is it?" when I had entered, also betrayed her annoyance at my disturbing her.

Mother's Breakfast Order. She had taken off her dress and shoes and put on a dressing-gown and soft felt slippers, but there was no indication that she meant to go to bed, and I felt sure that her search for her son was only deferred, not abandoned.

"I only wanted to ask you what time you thought we'd better start," I said deferentially, "and if there was anything special you wanted for your breakfast."

"I do not know, Margaret," she said, drawing herself up "that I ever have issued any special orders about my meals. I shall eat, of course, what the rest of you eat. We ought to have an extra heavy breakfast, however."

"Tell Katie to make some of those corn muffins and to French fry some potatoes," she warmed up to her subject. "I'll have my eggs poached if she can manage to get them out without breaking them and tell her not to give me a cut orange. I want the juice of two with two teaspoons of sugar and about three teaspoonsful of water. Remember to have her take my bacon out of the broiler before the rest. How you can eat as crisp as you and Dicky do is beyond me. I think that is all.

"Oh, yes, the coffee was too strong yesterday," she exclaimed. "If you want it that way, Katie will have to make a separate pot for me. Now I'm going to hunt up Richard. You'd better come along. He may have stumbled outside in the dark and broken his neck."

"Now You Tell You?" The slam of the front door, for which I had been listening tensely, put a period to her sentence, and I relaxed, knowing that the success of our little ruse was assured.

"I guess there he is now," she said, Open the door and see."

I obeyed her, and as Dicky reached the top of the stairs her voice floated past me.

"Richard where have you been? Come in here."

With a mischievous grin at Dicky I slipped passed him and down to the corridor to my own room, leaving him to deal with his temperamental mother. There I finished Dicky's mending, took it to his room, finding it looking like the debris left by a cyclone. It was clear that Dicky had tried to get enough things for a trunk into two suitcases.

With a deftness born of long experience in helping him, I worked swiftly over the packing until I had reduced it to order, and returning to my own room set my alarm clock for an hour but little after daylight.

Its summons the next morning, early as it was, found Katie ahead of me, much to my surprise, when I had descended to the kitchen, intending to put on the kettle before I called her.

Katie was standing by the open door, intently studying something in her hand and when she saw me she came towards me, holding out something which I saw was a torn half of a Chinese laundry ticket.

"Now you tell you?" she demanded triumphantly.

CONCERT HOUR 8:30. In consideration for guests at the Elliott-Hoagland wedding, the Tuesday Musical club announces that the Tito Schipa concert at the Brandeis Wednesday night will begin at 8:30 instead of 8:15.

Boxes for the concert have been taken by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Clarke; Amateur Musical club; Mrs. S. S. Caldwell, who will have Senator and Mrs. R. Beecher Howell with her; Fortnightly Musical club; Matinee Musical club of which Miss Josephine Platner is president.

Mrs. Healey in London. Mrs. L. J. Healey is spending two weeks in London, with her sister, Mrs. Preston of Paris. She declares in letters to friends here, that she likes London better than Paris, although it rains every day and is quite cold.

Brownell Tea. Three hundred invitations have been issued for the Brownell hall alumnae tea to be held Wednesday from 4 to 6 p. m. in the administration building, which is the old Happy fellow club. In the receiving line will be Mrs. F. H. Davis, Miss Dora Lee Newman and Mrs. Myles Standish.

Get Acquainted Club First Meeting. The Get Acquainted club opened Sunday night in their new club rooms at Farnam and Twenty-eighth street, with a record-breaking first night crowd. The rooms were redecorated for the club and fitted with a stage, pictures, draperies, easy chairs and a piano.

Flowers were sent by the First Unitarian church for the affair. The opening address was given by Ralph E. Bailey, Mrs. A. A. Siedler sang, Mrs. Carl C. Pixley gave readings and the club orchestra played. A dance and card party will be given each Thursday night for members.

Republican Women. Miss Lillian Luehrs, speaker of country-wide reputation, sent here by the republican national committee will speak Tuesday at a luncheon at the Hotel Rome.

The luncheon, which is open to all, will be 50c a plate, and will be in charge of Mesdames L. M. Lord, and P. C. Hyson. Reservations may be made at J.A. 4114.

Council Jewish Women. Opening their fall season, the Council of Jewish Women will have a 1 o'clock luncheon at Hotel Grandstone Monday, October 27. Tables will be decorated to represent the seasons and speakers will be heard.

Get Out the Vote. Why brag about your lofty aim if you don't intend to shoot? What good's the horn upon your car?

When you fall to make it too? And what's a pass to foreign lands if you won't get on the boat? And what, oh what, is suffrage if you women will not vote? —T. V. B. in the Woman Citizen.

Trimming the Frock. Trimmings do not have to be elaborate to be good style. Instead, the knack consists of the little fads of the mode, as well as good lines and colors.

For the popular dark silk frock, whether it is black, brown or dark blue, narrow frills of lace around the neck and sleeves are good. And a way to individualize this is to use an alternate row of black and gold colored lace with a heading of gold braid for the black lace. Narrow Valenciennes is the best lace to use for this trimming.

Metallic edged ribbons can be cleverly used to tie sleeves together, and where the ends leave off it is a smart idea to add little balls by stuffing the ribbon itself with cotton.

Tows of graduated velvet ribbon are used on both silk and wool dresses effectively. A quaint little printed crepe de chine with yellow and blue poses for example, was charming with three rows of graduated bright blue velvet edging around the bottom of the skirt. On a dark wool velveteen as many as six shades of colors are used.

Stenciling can be distinctive on a crepe de chine frock cut with a long tunic. Stencil a motif darker than the material at the knee and repeat the motif on a scarf to wear with the frock. Orange on brown is a very good autumn color combination, or black on rust.

Tapestry ensemble of henna and navy, with tunic of henna embroidery and navy posed over henna crepe slip.

The Housewife's Idea Box. Alum Water for Burns. Fill a bottle with water. Dissolve in it as much alum as it will hold. Keep this in a handy place. Apply it to burns. It will prevent blistering and quickly relieve pain.
