Consider Joe, Chimpanzee. Hard to Get, Hard to Use. Not Nickels, But Billions. By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Joe, aged chimpanzee, alleged member of a tribe from which sprang the Caucasian race, has known a moment of exaltation. His keeper, as usual, entered the cage to clean it. Joe, just for a change, swung his knotty, hairy black hand around, knocked the keeper senseless with ease, went out the open door and walked in the park. He stopped to exchange courtesies with his friend, John Barrett, 83-year-old park employe. Soon he was on his way back to the cage.

Learn that when you admire a prize fighter you admire only a poor imitation of a chimpanzee, and a worse imitation of a gorilla, that could beat any 20 prize fighters in 40 seconds.

Learn also from Joe, the chimpanzee, that freedom depends not on how hard you can hit but on how well you can think. Radicals urging each other "to rise and throw off their chains" should study Joe, the chimpanzee. He rose, knocked down his keeper and walked out of the cage, but he didn't know what to do next. "There's the rub."

George L. Brown, English worker in a Pittsburgh steel mill, invested $5 in a British lottery, won $42,500, is on his way to England. How long do you think he will keep the $42,500 or any of it?

On the other hand, Winchester, Va., sees a "bonded caretaker" and armed guards protecting the house of the late Miss Martha Shumate. The house is stuffed with money, greenbacks, gold coins, etc., behind pictures, under floors, in closets.

Some with money don't know how to keep it. Others with money don't know how to enjoy it or make it useful. A wise man said:

"Some have meat that cannot eat. And some can eat that have no meat. But I have meat and I can eat, so God be great."

General Dawes tells a crowd "to hold onto Coolidge," praising the president as a "close president who watches the nickels."

There are much better reasons than that for "holding onto Coolidge." "Nickel nursing," as the slang of the day has it, is not the important work of a president. What the people want is a president that will watch the millions and the billions. Ordinary bookkeepers will take care of the nickels, in spite of the old proverb. Take care of the millions and billions, Mr. Coolidge. The nickels will take care of themselves.

Richard Gaffney, 70, and his wife, same age, lived together through good times and bad. Bad times got worse. Gaffney could work no longer as a boiler maker, his wife could earn no money. Their last good friend died. Mrs. Gaffney said to a neighbor, "When we go, my husband and I will go together."

They went together on Tuesday, they turned on the gas.

A sad story, but there are young men and women busy with their Paris divorces, that need not pity this old couple.

To live together up to 70, and then "go together" isn't so bad, as things go in this world.

Prince Caetani, Italian ambassador to the United States, will return to Italy, and on behalf of the Italian government, and Mussolini will direct the draining of the Pontine marshes. On these marshes, covering 150,000 acres, live and breed the malaria carrying mosquitoes that have caused so many deaths and so much misery through centuries. Here little the Romans imagined, as they fought the barbarians and conquered the old civilization, that their deadliest enemy was the tiny insect laying her eggs in the marsh water.

Mussolini will be remembered forever with gratitude if he wipes out that death-breeding plague spot.

Farm Bureau Vote Enjoined by Court

Petition Against Allowance of Budget in Hamilton County Sustained.

Aurora, Neb., Oct. 23.—Judge L. S. Hastings of David City in district court Wednesday granted a permanent injunction against Henry V. Nelson, county clerk of Hamilton county, and the board of commissioners restraining them from printing and distributing ballots for a vote upon the question of continuing the Hamilton county farm bureau. The decision was given by Judge Hastings after reading the opinion of the supreme court in a similar case which arose in Furnas county.

In the Hamilton county case the petition asking for the allowance of the farm bureau budget contained 554 names, while the remonstrance contained 687 names. However, the remonstrance contained the names of 216 wives of farmers who had likewise signed the remonstrance. The supreme court having held that these women were not proper remonstrators too few signatures remained to call for an election on the question.

While an exception was taken to the ruling of Judge Hastings, it is not anticipated that an appeal will be taken to the supreme court. The farm bureau in Hamilton county has been in existence for eight or nine years and public sentiment seems somewhat evenly divided as to the benefits derived.

Corn Feeding Value Is Good

Results of Northeast Nebraska "Hogging Off" Tests Are Satisfactory.

Hartington, Oct. 23.—Feeding value of this year's corn crop in northeast Nebraska has been tested and found to be good, considering the early frost and the percentage of soft corn.

L. A. Chase, a Cedar county farmer, has a herd of 150 head of hogs which averaged 180 pounds each just before turning them into a field of corn which he wished to "hog-off." After allowing them to remain in the field 15 days, he reweighed the herd and found that they had made a gain of 50 pounds a head on the average in 15 days.

In northeast Nebraska are many corn fields in which hogs and other stock either are or have been feeding. Farmers have discovered that "hogging-off" corn is a satisfactory method of harvesting the corn crop and at the same time finishing pigs for the market. As pigs usually have been grown on pasture without much grain ration during the summer, they are in the best of condition for "hogging-off" the corn in the fall, especially those weighing from 75 to 115 pounds, as farmers have found that they can cover the field better than smaller or larger ones.

Farmers who have had experience claim that supplemental feeds to balance the corn ration, such as alfalfa, sweet clover and rape, should be given to obtain the best results. Experiments show that the grain is increased about 20 per cent. when supplemental feeds of this description are given.
