The fourth completed pass fell into the hands of Coach Levi. On the next play, Levi with his head down, hit the Creighton line and it gave for more than six yards—enough for the big buffalo to score a touchdown.

Creighton was still in the lead, 7 to 6. Smith got ready to kick the goal after touchdown. Coach Hanley of Haskell covered his face with his hands. This didn't worry Smith. He booted the ball over the crossbar and through the goal posts for the seventh Haskell point.

Creighton scored its touchdown in the first quarter. The Bluejays took the Indians by surprise in the initial period. After Fitzgibbons recovered a Haskell fumble in the center of the field, Creighton opened up with a series of off-tackle plays and end runs that resulted in Mahoney going over for a touchdown. He kicked his own goal.

Stribling has been enrolled in the University School for Boys in Atlanta, and will spend the winter months wrestling with trigonometry, the atomic theory and the like instead of motoring about the country boxing two or three times a week in widely separated cities.

If Miller has the correct information, it is evident that "Pa" Stribling at last has realized that the young Georgian a long rest give what they were talking about.

It took a crushing defeat for young Stribling at the hands of Ed Stone in Newark, and another reverse shortly thereafter by Vic McLaughlin, that "Pa" Stribling was something wrong.

There is a chance that the over-working of the Georgian may keep him from developing into the star he bade fair to become when he first showed up in these parts.

Stribling is said to be in bad shape. He must be far from well for the last eight minutes of play against Jack Delaney in Madison Square Garden next month, for which Stribling would have received $15,000.
