

Hotel Men Plan Royal Reception for Legion Here

Executive Committee Hopes to Set New Pace as Host to Former Service Men.

When the 40,000 or 50,000 visitors attracted to Omaha by the national convention of the American Legion next year depart from the city they will go praising the hospitality of Omaha.

Everett Buckingham, general chairman of the executive committee arranging for the big convention, and the committees working with him are determined that this shall be true.

And E. C. Eppley, chairman of the hotel and housing committee, who has spent much time investigating the needs of the convention, is convinced that it will be true.

"I made a trip to St. Paul recently to acquire all possible data on how this important convention was handled there," said Eppley.

"St. Paul men who helped make the convention a success there told me many things, including the fact that there must be one man big enough and versatile enough to have general supervision of everything connected with the convention. In describing the type of man needed for this big job they described Buckingham.

Enthusiasm Is High.

In St. Paul there is a feeling that Omaha will make a big success of the great gathering here. With the excellent spirit and enthusiasm which prevails among Omahans and the unusual entertainment features that will be provided by Ak-Sar-Ben I am sure we will not only outdo all previous legion meetin cities, but will set a new pace."

There is an inclination on the part of hotel men to consider their service in the matter of housing the legion men a patriotic duty rather than an opportunity to fill their hotel rooms to overflowing, according to Harry G. Conant.

Conant believes this spirit will prevail throughout the city, and that unequalled hospitality will be shown by home owners as well as hotel operators.

"We are striving to avoid anything which could possibly mar the success of the convention," said Conant. "We want to be in the position of knowing beforehand, and not afterward, what to do."

Hotel Men Co-operating

Eppley's talk before the Northwestern hotel association at the recent annual meeting in Rochester, Minn., is quoted in part in The Daily National Hotel Reporter of Chicago and reflects the views of Omaha hotel men who are united as they never were before for the welfare of the city. It is as follows:

There is a very important problem confronting each of the traveling public towards hotels in general. We all feel more or less that there is a certain amount of antagonism toward hotels.

This feeling is manifested in numerous ways by various classes of guests when they fail to receive the type of service for which they are paying, or to which they believe they are entitled.

Especially in this feeling manifested during conventions and at times of capacity business when there is a tendency on the part of some hotels to raise prices. Each time they do this they are not only unfair to themselves but do an injustice to the hotel fraternity in general.

To my personal knowledge in certain capital cities, legislation inimical to the hotel business has been introduced, and in some cases hurriedly passed because of antagonism brought about by the treatment accorded legislators and the public by the local hotels.

The rise and ebb of patronage is not peculiar to the hotel business alone.

Everyone knows that the average retail store does a greater volume of business on Saturday than on any other day. In the week, but their prices remain the same as on dull days.

Newspapers carry a much greater volume of advertising on Fridays and Saturdays than the other days, yet their rates are exactly the same on every day of the week.

In other words, we must obtain for our rooms and our cafe service a fair price at all times, figured on an average business, so that it will not be necessary for us to increase prices when we are enjoying unusually heavy business.

We must look upon this matter not only from our own individual viewpoint. We should use the eyes of our guests from the other side of the counter and ask ourselves if we are treating them the way we would want them to treat us were our positions reversed.

We should have as our ideal a constant effort to treat every guest with fairness and so maintain our hotels and furnish a standard of service that no guest will have any justifiable reason for complaint.

Tech High Girl Found Guilty of Powdering Her Nose in Public by School Jury; Book Borrower Is Freed

Court is held every Friday morning in room 363 of Technical High school for students of that room who have broken laws of the school.

Alison Perry, judge, is at his desk, holding court, with Richard Moore, sheriff, to the left; Vernon Sabatia, prisoner; Eugene Traver, attorney for the defense, and Francis Ludwig, prosecuting attorney.

"You bring this innocent man before the court and try to make him guilty when he is not guilty," was the accusation made by Eugene Traver, defense attorney in the case of Technical High school library against Vernon Sabatia, junior at the school, when heard in the regular Friday morning court for students in home room 363.

Vernon's case was the first on the docket Friday morning. He had borrowed a book, "Signs and Symbols of Boy Scouts of America," and was charged with returning the book to the school library four days late.

With Allison Perry as judge, Richard Moore as sheriff, Francis Ludwig as prosecuting attorney and Eugene Traver as attorney for defense, Vernon stood at the bar of justice and pleaded not guilty. The class of 20 boys and girls comprised the jury.

Prisoner's Alibi.

Plea of the prisoner was that he turned the book into the library without looking at the date it was due. He had received no notice of the book being overdue, he said.

"If he takes out an interesting book he doesn't turn to the front to look at the date due," said the defense attorney.

"Well, if the book is so interesting, why doesn't he finish it in time?" asked the prosecutor.

"I had the book two weeks," said the prisoner. "If anyone can take an inch-thick book and copy about half of it in that time, he is good."

Verdict, Not Guilty.

"The library should get busy and say when a book is due," said the attorney for the defense. Harry Ludwig was called as witness, and testified that he had seen the date due on the book. Case went to the jury and verdict was returned, "not guilty."

A second prisoner, Howard Burns, was brought before Judge Perry on charge of passing out gum in the school room. Robert Anderson, his attorney, declared that a witness denied that he had received any gum from Burns.

"He flashed four sticks of gum in my face," said the sheriff. "I could smell his breath and it was a well-known brand." Jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

One Found Guilty.

Only one prisoner, Donald Hanson, was found guilty. The charge was leaving the school room before the bell rang. The penalty for the crime was to clean the desks of the room and to take care of the flag in the room.

At court session last week, Marjorie Wilson was found guilty of powdering her nose in the room, and Verena Waterman was found guilty of combing her hair. Both girls will be punished by being compelled to give a speech on the program each Wednesday in the room.

Miss Louise Essex, teacher, is sponsor for the new court.

You Cannot Afford To be Gray

THIS is the Day of Youth. No matter how many years have passed over your head, you must present to the world the Appearance of Youth. There are no old women these days. Women do not accept age even at 50. And every modern mind grants this woman's privilege and lauds her for bravely withstanding the onslaught of time. Not only is it woman's right—it is her duty to be charmingly youthful.

PRESENT day styles of hair dressing make no allowances for Gray Hair. The "shingle," the "bob," the masculine pompadour, the chic coiffure of closely arranged hair, call for the greatest care. Such arrangement accents gray, faded, streaked or unevenly colored hair. The tiniest thread of silver forces itself to attention. A faded strand or streak clamors for prominence. Surely you cannot afford to be gray if you bob or shingle. It is so easy to keep short hair presently tinted. A small portion of Brownatone brushed through the shorn locks and presto! Gray hair is gone! In its place is glossy, natural, youthful hair, the crowning glory restored to its rightful place. Especially trying to the new masculine pompadour is the slightest touch of gray. When the hair is combed tightly and smoothly from the face gray strands are especially noticeable. A touch of Brownatone and the pompadour is perfect.

Why hazard your charm when assured beauty is so easily had? Social leaders, and the most famous women of the stage, long since recognized the imperative need for hair tinting. Gray hair is unknown to the theaters' brilliant lights. To suffer it would be to meet half way the closing of a professional career.

As modes change and more extreme styles of head dress come in, the necessity for tinting hair becomes more and more apparent. For example, the style of shingling, starting in the middle back and combing forward, affords no opportunity of concealing unsightly hair.

Gray Hair Ages Most Women

VERY few women have the facial endowment to compete with graying hair. It requires an unusually young and piquant face, a skin like old rose and damask, and the coloring of an infant to contrast and beautify gray hair. Grandmother's face, lined and seamed with age, skin like pallid ivory, is most becomingly framed with snowy hair. But for the young, or even middle aged woman, gray hair is a handicap.

There is but one method by which color of the hair may be restored and that is tinting or staining. This method is recommended by the best authorities. Dr. Montgomery, a distinguished authority on hair, says that staining is the only practical treatment for premature gray hair. "Duhring's Diseases of the Skin," says that staining may be resorted to. Thomas Cattell, M. D., M. R., C. C. E., not only permits staining, but advises it in a thoroughly professional way.

THE manufacturers of Brownatone now feel a duty to women to tell in plain words just how hair may be safely tinted to natural shades. The color cannot be "restored" to hair, naturally, because of its physical construction. A hair is a hollow, shaft-like structure, surrounded by a cortex, or wall, of laminated cells. The natural coloring, called "pigment," is contained in the hollow, or core. Gray hair is caused by the absence of pigment. When the coloring disappears, the hair blanches or turns gray. Pigment cannot be replaced—it never returns.

Brownatone permeates the hair entirely, from center to surface. Some dyes cause a brittle condition with a resultant splitting or breaking off. Other dyes coat the outer surface only, as an article is varnished or painted, while still others stain the hair by imparting to the outer cells a false coloring. Brownatone penetrates the hair gently and thoroughly, leaving the hair texture in a natural, healthy condition.

Brownatone imparts natural shades as desired—golden, blonde, or varying shades of brown or black. (You cannot, with any preparation, tint dark hair to a lighter shade without first bleaching the hair.) Brownatone acts quickly—no waiting for results; it is easy to use, and is only necessary to apply as new hair grows in. The color imparted is not affected by shampoo or bath. It will not rub off. Positively the most pleasing and satisfactory hair tint ever offered.
