

U. S. Faces Wood Famine, Coolidge Warns Foresters

Only Drastic Conservation Can Prevent Total Destruction of Supply in 50 Years, President Says.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Only the most drastic conservation measures will prevent the absolute disappearance of America's great forests within less than 50 years, President Coolidge revealed today in opening the national conference on utilization of forest products.

The conference was called as one of the last official acts of the late Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to devise ways and means of rehabilitating American timber reserves through conservation and elimination of waste.

The president drew an unpleasant picture of a timberless future. With cold facts and figures, he brought home the extreme importance of maintaining an adequate forest reserve, showing how its destruction would be followed by the virtual annihilation of the third largest industry with its ensuing era of unemployment, and by the lack of most essential building material.

Cites Figures.

Production and consumption figures were cited that indicated the United States would be without timber within 40 years unless drastic measures were taken at once to restore and to check.

"The era of free, wild timber is reaching its end," the president warned. "We can no longer depend on moving from one great primeval forest to another, for already the sound of the ax has penetrated the heart of them."

Mr. Coolidge urged the conference to bring out a "program of specific action for timber-saving, rather than a mere expression of ideas."

He promised the fullest co-operation of the government and declared that the vested interests of generations to come hinge upon the success of its deliberations. He did not offer any suggestions, confining his remarks to a portrayal of conditions as they now exist.

Cutting Outstrips Growth.

"Expressed roughly," he said, "we have left about 745,000,000 cubic feet of timber. From this the annual drain is 25,000,000,000 cubic feet. This total drain is most significant when we reflect that, toward offsetting it, we have an annual timber growth of only 6,000,000,000 cubic feet; and even in our young forests, where this growth is taking place, cutting has already outstripped growth. We must face the situation that at this rate we are not far from timber exhaustion."

Industrial Problem.

Declaring that the forest problem is a land and industrial problem of the first magnitude, the president advanced the theory that fully one-fourth of the American area should be kept in forest. He called attention to the immeasurable loss now being sustained in cut-over land.

"Idle forest land has scrapped schools, factories, railroads and towns," he said. "It has dotted the land with abandoned farms; it has created a migratory population."

"The great industries that depend on the forest for their raw material—industries that, taken together, rank about third in value of output among our chief industrial groups, must be preserved. Then employ a very large number of wage earners; they feed the railroads with a vast flow of traffic."

The president also dwelt upon the tremendous waste now prevalent in manufacture and urged that every effort be made to eliminate it.

"Between cutting the timber and finally putting the product to use," he declared, "nearly two-thirds of the total volume is lost. A third of this loss, it is estimated, can, under present economic conditions and with tried and tested methods, be saved."

Oil Discovered on Property of Bride Stain in Wilderness Cabin

Telegram Advising of Sudden Wealth Awaited Mrs. Elsie Wheeler at Hour She Was Struck Down by Unknown Assassin in Wisconsin.

By Universal Service.
Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 19.—Mrs. Elsie Wheeler, murdered bride of Dean Wheeler, was stabbed to death by an unknown assassin in her husband's lonely cabin near Lake of the Woods, Friday, while a telegram advising her of the discovery of oil near her farm in Kansas awaited her at the town of War Road, 70 miles from the death cabin.

This tragic intelligence was brought to Minneapolis today by Mrs. J. J. Hoisington of McPherson, Kan., stater of the slain woman, who is en route to War Road today, accompanied by L. T. Wheeler, father of the bridegroom, of Peck, Kan.

Inherited Farm.

"Oil well brought in on McMillan farm," read the telegram dispatched to Mrs. Wheeler last week. The "McMillan farm" adjoins 400 acres of land inherited by Mrs. Wheeler three days before her marriage to Dean Wheeler in October. The couple's honeymoon trip brought them to the wilderness cabin in the northwest angle of Lake of the Woods, after they tired of Kansas, Mrs. Hoisington declared today.

Mrs. Wheeler told her sister she was anxious to go into the northern Minnesota wilderness, because friends had informed her that the district was "ideal."

Veteran Restless.

Young Wheeler—"restless and unable to settle down after going through the war"—willingly accompanied his bride, his father declared today.

"They rode in a flivver from Kansas and 'camped along the way,'" he said. "They planned to stay through the winter and come back to Kansas in the spring."

Then, on Friday, the hand of the unknown assassin struck down the bride, and today her husband sits beside the body in the cabin while authorities en route from War Road are breaking through the dense wilderness in the direction of the scene of the mysterious murder.

Wheeler and Mrs. Hoisington will proceed as far as War Road, there to await developments.

"We intend to carry on an educational campaign for the retail dispenser of narcotics as well as for physicians," said Joe Manning, agent in charge. Nebraska has been a badly neglected state and the government intends to see that the law is strictly obeyed."

Wisdom of Solomon Shown in Deciding Hogs-in-Corn Case

Bridgeport, Nov. 19.—Perhaps the only case in legal jurisprudence where both contestants got just what they asked, and which is as much of a flight of wisdom as the famous babe decision of King Solomon, has been decided by Judge Nash in district court of Box Butte county. Suit was started by H. P. Christensen for $87.50 damage which, he claimed, Martin Hansen's hogs, from across the road, had done to his fodder shocks.

Hansen admitted that the hogs had eaten some fodder, but said that there was at least $50 worth left in the piles. Christensen's contention was that none of the fodder left was worth anything.

The value of the fodder before the hogs got into it was proven by two witnesses. The value of the remaining fodder was also established by two other witnesses.

Judge Nash then told Christensen that he should have judgment for $87.50, all he asked, but that he could not expect to get pay for fodder and still own the fodder, so he was to turn over to Hansen the remaining fodder and accept the $87.50 as full settlement. Turning to Hansen, the judge said that Hansen had admitted there was $50 worth of fodder in the field yet, and that his hogs had eaten the remaining $37.50 worth, so he was to pay the entire amount of $87.50 and take what fodder was left, and that each man then had just what he had asked before going to court.
