

Army flyers' own story of flight around the world

Only complete, official narrative from diaries and experiences of the six aviators, put in vivid words by the famous author and adventurer, Lowell Thomas, commencing in The Omaha Bee, Monday, November 24th

ALL the world has been waiting to hear the real story of the greatest adventure of our time—the first aerial circumnavigation of the globe. Many have called it the last great adventure.

The six men who took these giant American planes on this superb voyage through the clouds are soldiers and adventurers—not writers. But they have told their story to Lowell Thomas, author, explorer, and war correspondent, who was selected by the war department as the man best able to tell America the intimate, official account of the flight.

Since the return of the flyers, Mr. Thomas has been living and flying with the six army adventurers—taking down from their lips the personal narrative of their hairbreadth escapes, their battles with arctic blizzards, flights through blinding rain and snow, encounters with tropic monsoons and typhoons, experiences with the natives of many lands, and at last the romantic and, at times, fantastically humorous story of their triumphal tour of America, with its conquest of hearts—a tour that has surely never been paralleled in this or any other land.

You have read the news of the flight as the planes reached harbor or flying field. But this American Odyssey from real life is the intimate tale of the great adventure. There never has been another story like it since the days of Columbus and Magellan. Look for the start of it on Monday, Nov. 24—a week from tomorrow—and daily and Sunday thereafter until the story is told.

This official and copyrighted account will not appear in any other publication in The Omaha Bee territory. Have The Omaha Bee delivered to your home to be sure of getting every issue with the story of the greatest achievement of our time.

Lowell Thomas, who has written the story told him by the flyers, is an author and war correspondent with a love for the wildest corners of the globe. He knows every country over which the army men flew. He is an aviation enthusiast and has himself flown planes in many parts of the world. He was selected by the war department to write the story because he was considered the man best fitted to prepare a permanent human interest record of the most adventurous episode since the voyage of Magellan.

THE OMAHA BEE

The official account of the world flight starts exclusively in The Omaha Bee, Monday, Nov. 24th