Britain's Egyptian Ultimatum Like Austria's 'Impossible Demands'

There is a striking parallel between the note of the British government to the premier of Egypt and the note sent by Austria-Hungary to Serbia on July 23, 1914—the note that resulted in the lining up of the great powers in Europe and finally brought on the world war.

Prices Reduced. The recommendations are based on the finding that the purchase of coal on a monthly delivery basis will maintain a regular production schedule and make it possible for carriers to plan definitely both schedules and equipment for a uniform movement of coal.

Should Appeal to All

In the foreword of the report, John Hays Hammond, chairman of the United States coal commission, says "This report of an engineering survey of the possibilities of improving the method of purchase, delivery and storage of coal should appeal to producers, carriers and consumers as the key to the solution of many of their troubles. The president's coal commission, learning of the purpose of the American engineering council to make such a study, assigned to it the task of conducting an extensive engineering survey of the storage of coal."

Assassins Will Be Punished and Indemnity Paid

Government Denies Responsibility, However, for Slaying of English Sirdar.

London, Nov. 23.—Events moved swiftly in Cairo today and the Egyptian government today to a large extent complied with Great Britain's virtual ultimatum, embodying a series of stern demands in the way of reparation for the assassination of Maj. Gen. Sir Lee Stack, sirdar of the Egyptian army. Premier Zagloul explained in a secret session of parliament last night the lines of his proposed reply, and, having obtained a vote of confidence, he today delivered a note to Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner, agreeing to apologize, punish the criminals and pay the required indemnity of 500,000 pound sterling.

The premier's note was couched in polite terms, but it refused to shoulder responsibility for the assassination, and regarding the other British demands, argued that they either ran counter to the Egyptian constitution or were matters to be dealt with by diplomatic methods. He also remarked that the most liberal policy compatible with the principle of independence had been adopted toward foreigners and that no observations had been received from other foreign powers.

Deputies Vote Confidence

Zagloul had previously read this reply to the deputies and had obtained another vote of confidence. Viscount Allenby, to whom it is believed the British government is leaving the entire conduct of the negotiations, promptly replied to the Egyptian premier that the indemnity must be paid by noon tomorrow; that since Egypt refused to comply with the demands relating to Sudan, the British authorities would themselves see that they were carried out, and that he would later indicate what course his government intended to pursue concerning the protection of foreign interests.

By Associated Press

Cairo, Nov. 23.—The Egyptian government's reply to the British note in connection with the assassination of Maj. Gen. Sir Lee Stack, governor-general of the Sudan and sirdar of the Egyptian army, agrees to Great Britain's demand for an apology, punishment of the assassins, and an indemnity of 500,000 pounds. It also promises to prevent any disturbance of the peace by demonstrations.

Withdrawal From Sudan

Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner, promptly replied to the Egyptian note, which was signed by Zagloul Pasha, the Egyptian premier. General Allenby said that in view of the refusal of the Egyptians of the British requirements Nos. 5 and 6 in instructions were being sent to the Sudan government to effect the withdrawal from the Sudan of Egyptian officers and units with the specified changes resulting from these measures and that the Sudan government was at liberty to increase the area of irrigation in the Gezira district to an unlimited extent.

Greatest Voyage of All History

Air Magellans Give Simple Human Narrative; Reader to Be Taken Into Cockpit of Ship.

Supreme Task of Man

Told by LOWELL THOMAS. (Copyright, 1924.) In the history of navigation there have been but two feats which will stand side by side for all time. The first was the circumnavigation of the globe by sea; the second the circumnavigation of the world by air. There may have been other expeditions comparable to these in pre-historic times. But if so, it was before the dawn of recorded history, and we know not of them.

Four hundred years ago a Portuguese navigator in the service of Charles V of Spain, sailed forth to explore the seven seas. One vessel and 21 survivors returned. Ferdinand Magellan sleeps under a rude cross on an island in the South seas, but his fame as the first circumnavigator brought undying glory to himself and fellow mariners and to both Portugal and Spain.

We of the present day have lived to see Magellan's feat paralleled if not surpassed. If the great Portuguese navigator deserved imperishable fame, so also do American world fliers.

Magellan set forth in ships very little different from those which had been used by navigators for thousands of years. He sailed seas that had nearly all been partially explored before him.

Whenever the muse of history takes up her pen to chronicle the deeds of men in the clear blue above them all she writes the names of those explorers and navigators who venture forth into the unknown to pioneer the way for the rest of mankind. But these restless ones, God's chosen sons, who go forth to win or die, have still another and even greater claim to immortality, for they are the ones who keep alive the spirit of romance and adventure—that intangible, indefinable something which saves man from degenerating into a mere clod.

In the dim days before the dawn of history there were navigators and explorers who ventured forth from central Asia and from the valleys of the Tigris, the Euphrates and the Nile, to prepare the way for those waves of Hittites, Semites and early Aryan peoples and for the Scythians, Parthians, White Huns, Mongols, Tartars and others who overran the ancient world. It was their tales brought back from far countries that inspired all the conquerors from Ghengis Khan, Tamerlane and Attila on down to Cortez, Clive and our own American colonists.

Explorers Make Nations

Every nation that has played an important part in history has had its share of explorers and navigators. For instance, we recall that Phoenician captains of 4,000 years ago piloted their galleys across the North Atlantic to the then unknown British Isles, and even crossed the Indian ocean to the tin mines of Malaya.
