, ORIENTAL RITES

strange Customs of Far East in Evidence in Robinson Case Trial.

By DAVID M. CHURCH. onal News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Nov. 25 .- Technical evidence understood to deal with strange rites of oriental women entered England's $750,000 blackmail case today. As it was introduced, Mrs. Maude Robinson, the comely beauty whose intimacy with a young prince from India netted her husband and assoclates $750,000, was forced to leave the court room. She had to be assisted and seemed on the verge of collapse as she made her way out.

The questions were of such a na ture that they were submitted and answered in writing. The evidence was introduced by John Simon, counsel for the Midland bank, who requested dismissal of the suit on the ground that Charles Robinson, former bookmaker of London had not established a case in his attempt to recover the bulk of the blackmail proceeds. Lord Darling refused the request and ordered the de fense to continue.

Sir Richard Havelock Charles, surthe religious customs of that country. Four questions were submitted in writing to the surgeon. He wrote his answers, which passed from the hands of counsel to Lord Darling, presiding of counsel to Lord Darling, presiding judge and the 10 men and two women composing the jury.

Dr. Mary Scharlieb, famous woman physician, was then called. She said she understood customs of native women in the far east. The same questions were submitted to her. Her answers substantiated those of Sir Charles.

It is understood the questions reterred to eastern rites which Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Bevan, her companion, were alleged to have undergone to meet the customs of the country of the young potentate, designated in the court room as "Mr. A."
