COULDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung disease, and is excellent for building up the system after colds and the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist, Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Sponsors Exhibit From Vienna

Miss Dorothy North of Chicago is here with the Cizek exhibit from Vienna, now showing at the Fine Arts galleries in the public library building. It will close November 30. Miss North is seen seated at the desk with pictures from the exhibit on the wall behind her. The exhibit is of work done by Viennese children of school age and includes wood cuts, lithographs, pottery, embroidery, carving, toys and postcards. The idea back of Cizek's school is that of freedom for the child's development. "Cizek is one of the pathfinders in education," said Miss North. "He believes in the greatest possible development for the child itself rather than in an imposed education. The child is full of talent and beauty of spirit which should not be professionalized. A happy, wholesome, creative youth will carry through life with him."

Miss North became interested in the school when she was doing war relief work with the Quakers. She is not a Quaker herself, but became attached to one of their war units through associations made at Bryn Mawr, from where she was graduated in 1909. Miss North's work for the Cizek exhibition is voluntary. She is accompanying it on a tour of this country. Parts of it have already been shown in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

More than 5,000 school children have attended the exhibit in Omaha. Some of them have sent back charming greetings to the children of Vienna. "They feel the children behind the pictures," said Miss North.

Sale of cards and prints helps to support the exhibit and the Cizek school.

Dr. Kollar of Vienna is also here with the exhibit. He is a critic, writer and archaeologist with whom the Cizek school is a hobby. His service, too, is voluntary.

The showings are free and open to the public.

The Surprising Request Mother Graham Made of Madge.

Junior choked back his sobs with an effort which would have done credit to a much older person, and threw up his head with a characteristic gesture.

"I won't cry one bit more," he affirmed stoutly, "but you tell my Granzie I'm down here, and she'll tell you to let me come upstairs quick, you bet your boots."

I was too proud of him, and too filled with sympathy for his sorrowful little heart, to chide him for the slang, but I noticed Dicky's half involuntary frown toward Katie, and knew that sooner or later I should listen to a diatribe concerning the influence of my little maid's speech upon our child's English.

He made no verbal comment, however, and I kissed my small son's wet face.

"You shall see Granzie just as soon as the nurse says so," I promised, and then little Mrs. Durkee emotional and excited, seized me by both shoulders and pulled my face down to hers for a welcoming kiss.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come," she cried, "and how perfectly wonderful of you to bring Katie" turning to the girl with a friendly smile. "Just go on into the kitchen, Katie and make yourself at home," she went on with a laughing and as Katie with an answering giggle disappeared in the direction of the kitchen. Her Pluffiness slipped her hands interestingly down to my wrists and pulled me in the direction of the staircase.

"I can't let you wait a minute, she said, "for poor Mother Graham has been calling for you ever since she came to herself. Did Edith tell you how we found her?"

"No," I contented myself with the reply, for I knew that little Mrs. Durkee's voluble tongue needed no questions to set it in motion.

"I Didn't Dare Scream." "Well, I suppose she hadn't time," she commented condescendingly, "although I do think she might have let you know something about it. I never was so flabbergasted in my life when I saw her lying there on her face, just as if she were dead. I tell you, I was just turned plumb to stone for a second or two. I couldn't even scream for help, or stoop to her to see what really was the matter. But finally I did get my senses together and turned her over, I saw she wasn't dead, for she was breathing, although she looked as if she'd pass out any second. But I slipped my sweater under her head, and ran back to the house and told Edith and Lella—you see I didn't dare scream for fear of startling Lella, you know."

I nodded an assenting comprehension of the necessity of guarding gentle Lella Durkee, so near her first motherhood, from any shock, and little Mrs. Durkee hurried on, and reached the upper hall, but apparently forgetting the haste with which she had ushered me upstairs to see my mother-in-law.

"Send Everybody Out." "Edith came back with me, and Lella telephoned to the neighbors to help us carry Mother Graham into the house, and then started in to get a doctor. But we couldn't raise one for the longest time, as you know. Finally however, a doctor arrived who brought her to, but that's all the good it did us," Mrs. Durkee wound up naively, as if the chief object of bringing her old neighbor back to consciousness had been to satisfy her own curiosity as to the reason for her seizure.

"She wouldn't tell us what hit her or scared her, although I know somebody must have, for the doctor said so," Mrs. Durkee continued. "And the neighbors next door said they

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

So Says James H. Allen, Who Drove Out Rheumatic Poisons After Being Crippled for Years.

Mr. James H. Allen, of 26 Forbes St., Rochester, N. Y., suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be freed from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allenbu, to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers.

"The blessed relief this marvelous prescription quickly gives has made for it thousands of friends," says Beaton Drug Co., who has been appointed agent in your city. It is Mr. Allen's own discovery.
